'Will Create Dramatic New Tax Growth, Unprecedented Job Opportunities'

Koch: Planning Underway For Historic Private Development In Downtown

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH, in his Mid-Term Address Monday, looked back on his first year in office and his goals for the future including "a plan for the largest private investment in our city's history" in the downtown area. At right is City Clerk, Joseph Shea.

Koch Ends Take-Home Vehicles For City Employees

Mayor Thomas Koch has directed that more than 30 city-owned vehicles will no longer be allowed to be taken home by employees as part of an ongoing tightening effort at City Hall.

Koch advised all department heads to immediately stop allowing employees in all city departments, including police, fire, public works and parks, to take use of their city vehicles to commute back and forth to work.

The Mayor's Office has also turned over a car assigned to City Hall to the School Department.

In a memo to department heads last week, Koch said only the police chief, fire chief and DPW commissioner would continue driving city vehicles because of the need to respond to emergencies.

"This is not about abuse, it is about finding every way, big and small, to change the way government does business," said Koch Tuesday.

The decision comes after a year, which saw a total of $5 million in budget cuts and the likelihood that more substantial cutbacks will be required as the city copes with the state and national fiscal crisis.

Cost Of Parking Up In New Year

A few months ago, the cost of driving a car went up along with the price of gasoline. Now it is the cost of leaving the car that has gone up.

The monthly fee for parking in the Ross Parking Garage and the John Hancock Parking Lot went to $50 on the first of the new year, up $10 from the previous charge.

The cost of hourly parking rose a dollar in the second week in December.

The first hour is still free but after that the next hour is $1.50, the next $3 and so on up to an $8 daily cap.

In his Mid-Term Address Monday, Mayor Thomas Koch announced that planning for the largest private development investment in Quincy Center is currently underway.

Koch pledged that the project will bring growth, jobs and, "a downtown we can all be proud of."

"We will present to the City Council, business owners and citizens a plan for the largest private investment in our city's history," said Koch who added that this "dynamic vision will create dramatic new tax growth."

and "spawn unprecedented job opportunities."

"We will seize the opportunities before us, despite these economic conditions," Koch said.

"Our city is positioned today for historic investment and growth, growth which will allow us to control our own destiny."

In his 10-minute address, Koch offered no specific details or timetable on the project, but the Planning Department has already assigned Nick Veremis, Economic Development Planner, to handle the details.

In addition, Koch alluded to the former shipyard at Fore River as "the largest tract of land remaining to be developed."

"We are working hard with the governor and our state delegation, in cooperation with Dan Quirk at the Quincy shipyard," Koch said.

Koch also mentioned the Lowell's Historic Improvement Center, off Burgin Parkway, will improve traffic and

'We Must Aggressively Pursue Business To Ease Residential Burden'

Davis Issues Call For Commercial Tax Base Growth

By TOM HENSHAW

Ward 4 City Councillor Jay Davis, reelected by his colleagues to a second term as Council president, has called for growth in the city's commercial tax base and more ways of saving the taxpayers' money to better face a "challenging" new year.

Davis was nominated by Ward 5 Councillor and former Council President Doug Gutro, who said Davis is "fair, impartial and thorough" in his duties. Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee seconded the motion.

The vote was 8-0 with Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, an attorney, in court at the time of the ceremonies.

ELECTED TO HIS second term Monday as City Council President, Jay Davis called for needed commercial tax base growth to ease the burden on residential taxpayers.

Quincy has won a $50,000 state grant to broaden its efforts to find and fix water main leaks that once cost the city 37 cents of every $1 it paid the MWRA for water.

The grant from the Department of Environmental Protection will enable the DPW to continue an overhaul of water and sewer operations, including an aggressive investigation of leaking underground pipes.

"Our team has targeted every facet of water and sewer operations and fixing our leaking, aging pipes is a critical part of that strategy that saves money for ratepayers," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

"We pay the MWRA for all the water that goes through the pipes, even when it leaks out, so this program is vital to ensuring that we account for every drop possible."

Prior to Koch's reform program, the city could not account for 37 cents of every dollar it paid the MWRA. Today the loss is down to 17 cents, says Michael Coffey, the DPW's business manager.

The DPW won the DEP grant by showing concrete evidence that it was working to conserve water and control costs, said Coffey. The DPW recently started using a miniature camera to detect leaks in pipes.

The reform program has identified dozens of illegal water hook-ups, increased collection rates, corrected billing practices and a $3 million deficit and proposed a new ordinance imposing stiff penalties on anyone found tampering with meters.

Officials said they believe water rates increased substantially less this year than anticipated thanks to the reform program.

"I am proud of our team's work to date," said Koch. "but we know there is much work to do."

"This grant, and all of the reforms, are the product of hard work by a lot of people and we will continue to attack this issue head-on. Ultimately, our ratepayers will see dividends.

Karl Roos Back In School Board Race

KARL ROOS

Karl Roos, twice an unsuccessful candidate by way of a convention vote for a vacant seat, has again announced his candidacy for the School Committee, this time for election by the people.

"I am an underdog," said the 41-year-old Wollaston resident. "I am not an insider to Quincy politics. I don't have family in City Hall. I am new to politics. I have never worked on a campaign before."

"For my campaign to be successful, it is going to have to be a grass roots effort. I am going to have to rely on the support and help of everyday parents and the people of Quincy, who care about the schools and the city."

The candidate is planning a campaign kickoff Thursday, Jan. 22, at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy, and has set up a website, roosschoolcommittee.com, to get out word of his campaign.

Roos was a candidate a year ago to fill the School Committee vacancy created when James Timmins resigned to become city solicitor but lost to Nick Puleo in a 10-4 vote of the City Council and the School Board.

Four months ago, he was again a convention candidate to succeed Kevin Mulvey, who resigned to become human resources director in the schools. He withdrew before the vote, however, and Ron Mariano was elected.

Roos said he received a tremendous amount of encouragement from his participation in the two conventions.

"Parents and others have been coming up to me expressing their support," said Roos, who lives at 8 Park St. with his wife, Marsha, and their three children, all of them in Quincy public schools.

"They (the parents) have been asking me when I am going to run. They want someone who has children in the Quincy schools. They want someone who does things for the community. They want someone with real world experience. They want someone who is going to be working for them."

Roos has close to 20 years experience in the pharmaceutical industry in the fields of marketing, product management, project management and sales.

"My professional experience has taught me how to listen to people, solve problems, get results, work with people and be held accountable," he said. "These skills are important for a School Committee members."

He and his wife founded Wollaston T-Ball six seasons ago. He has been a Cub Scout leader at Pack 21, St. Ann's Church, work with member of the Wollaston School PTO for four years, three of them as a board member and treasurer.

"I have always been involved in the community and try to give back and help in any way that I can," he said.

Roos is a graduate of Boston College High School, attending on an academic scholarship, and UMass-Amherst with a major in finance and a minor in economics and a master's degree in finance from Bentley College.

"I come from a working class family," he said. My father was a janitor and my mother was a teachers' aide. I always had to work my way through school. I understand and appreciate the importance of education and the opportunity it gives people."

Energy Bucks Sends Those In Need To Warm Winter

With the cost and availability of gas and oil unstable and the winter weather on us, the concern for most of us is staying warm in our homes through the coldest days and nights.

Always helpful, Sen. Michael Morrissey has some advice for you --- contact Energy Bucks at 1-866-537-7267 to see what energy efficiency and cost-saving services you qualify for.

"With the current economic climate, this winter expects to be difficult for low income and working families, and the elderly trying to heat their homes," said Morrissey.

"We want to spread the word that help is still available as that families can stay warm."

Energy Bucks is an integrated campaign that creates "one stop shopping" for energy assistance services, enabling residents to better understand and apply for programs that can help them manage their energy costs.

"Many people go without help simply because they don't know about all the great programs available to them," said Elliott Jacobson, chairman of the Low-Income Affordability Network (LEAN).

"Even those who already receive fuel assistance may qualify for a discount utility rate or energy efficiency services."

Typically, a family of four can qualify for some form of assistance or energy efficiency service if their income is less than $4,124.

These services can save eligible families up to 30 percent of their energy bills by weatherizing their homes, repairing heating systems, discounting utility rates and obtaining fuel assistance.

Energy Bucks links residents to programs that will help them stretch their dollars as the weather gets colder and budgets get tighter.

Redesign Of North Quincy Trouble Spot Begins

Engineers have begun the redesign of the intersection of Hancock and Squantum streets near North Quincy High School for a project to improve pedestrian safety and improve traffic at the busy intersection, Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday.

The intersection has been a trouble spot identified by North Quincy parent groups, MBTA commuters and others for some time, and planning for a full reconstruction of the intersection began last year.

"We identified this intersection as a priority, and we working hard toward a permanent solution. This design work is vital to making it happen," said Koch, who praised the School Committee's public safety committee for its focus on the issue.

The $32,000 contract with BETA Group will pay for engineering and design work needed to make the intersection safer for both walkers and drivers. The crossing is one of the busiest in the city during rush hour, complicated by the nearby school and T station, officials said.

Parents have raised the issue for years and Koch pledged during his first year that a major reconstruction of the intersection was necessary and would be prioritized. State Sen. Michael Morrissey successfully lobbied for $3 million to do the construction work as part of a statewide transportation bond bill, although that spending has not been finalized.

Koch noted no state money would be released for the project unless design and engineering work was completed.

With planning for the large-scale work underway, the city took several steps this year to improve safety at the intersection, including a stepped-up police presence before and after school, and improved markings and signals. The city's traffic engineer is also regularly monitoring the area, officials said.

County Real Estate Sales

Down 42.6% From '07 Quarter

The total value of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the final quarter of 2008 was down 42.6 per cent from the same period in 2007, settling at $894.5 million, according to Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell.

"However," he reported, "market activity did not decline as sharply as values with the 2008 quarter showing that a total of 3,115 deeds were recorded which was down only 11.8 per cent compared to the 2007 quarter."

The average sale price on deeds more than $1,000 was down to $494,469, a decline of 34.8 per cent in a year.

"Although the Norfolk County real estate market continues to reflect the severe problems that confront the region and the nation, the average price during the just completed quarter was off only 4.2 per cent from the previous quarter --- July to September," he said.

Mortgage recording activity continued to decline, down 29.3 per cent with 5,569 new mortgages recorded in the latest quarter. Total mortgage value for the quarter was just under $4 billion, off some 40 per cent from the last quarter of 2007.

"It is important to note," said O'Donnell, "that this total mortgage value amount does not represent the true increase in indebtedness."

"Some mortgages may

Coughlin Proposes Ordinance Banning Pot Use In Public

KEVIN COUGHLIN

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin will propose that City Council pass an ordinance banning the public consumption of marijuana or THC, and, also, prohibiting the possession of drug paraphernalia.

Offenders will be fined $300 for either offense under Coughlin's proposal which he described as a response to the voters' passage of Referendum Question 2 on the November State ballot.

"This ordinance is a necessary step in the mix of this new reality and with its passage, Quincy will be taking the lead among the Commonwealth's cities and towns," said Coughlin who is chairman of the City Council Public Safety Committee.

The ballot question, known as Referendum 2, decriminalized possession of an ounce or less of marijuana.

Previously, persons charged with marijuana possession could face criminal concerns among law enforcement and the community at large."

In addition, Coughlin fears that the more relaxed law will open the door "to public conduct that will be deleterious to the public health and well-being" and negatively impact the public.

For the past 30 years, Coughlin has worked in the probation field with children, youth and families, many of whom, he said have been affected by substance abuse.

"Given the reality of the new legal construction that Question 2 has presented, we need to effect whatever difference we can, with regard to public conduct and its impact on our community."

"Quincy has taken an honest and hard look at the reality of drug abuse and any conduct that gives a public affirmation to drug use is in my opinion sending us in the wrong direction," Coughlin said.

penalties of up to six months in jail, a $500 fine and listing on the criminal offenders' registry, CORI.

With the passage of the Question 2, all offenders must forfeit the contraband. Adults now face a $100 civil penalty while offenders, under 18 years old, are subject to a $100 civil penalty and parental notification, must attend a drug awareness program, and face enhanced penalties for failure to comply.

There is no longer a criminal record attached to the offense.

Coughlin said, "The passage of Question 2 has raised many questions and

• On Jan. 7, 1785, Jean-Pierre Blanchard and John Jeffries travel from Dover, England, to Calais, France, in a gas balloon, becoming the first to cross the English Channel by air. They nearly crashed into the Channel, however, as their balloon was weighed down by extraneous supplies such as silk-covered oars, with which they hoped to row their way through the air.

The Gift Of Life – And Love

This is about a mother's letter.

A letter from a Quincy mother about her son. A son whose life has been a medical ordeal and life threatening challenges one after another.

It started around age 17. That was 24 years ago.

She asks that neither her name nor her son's name be used at this particular time.

But wants to share her gratitude with you. For what she says is a "Gift Of Life."

It is also a gift of love. And hope.

She brought the letter to The Sun office in person. So it is not an anonymous letter, which is our normal policy to disregard.

She had hoped we could print it during the Christmas, Hanukkah holiday season. We are sorry we weren't able to do so.

Those holidays have passed. But her message is still here with holiday warming's.

Her letter is touching and we decided to move it to Sunbeams for comment and more exposure. You might say it is sort of a sunbeam.

Here are her words:

This is a great year for my family to celebrate the "Gift Of Life."

My family and I want to spread joy and gratitude during this holy season of Hanukkah and Christmas.

Several years ago, my youngest child became a Type I diabetic. His journey was incredible as his life was threatened many times.

However, there was always someone there to call for medical help.

About three years ago he had to leave work because his vision became impaired. Therefore it was time to come home.

My son had 14 surgeries in his eyes and he has regained his sight, thanks to the expertise of a very talented doctor and the many prayers that were said for him.

However, his journey would encounter another turn in his young life as he was now in kidney failure.

This procedure entails dialysis and the intervention of the Quincy EMT's, a very professional and dedicated group of caring people.

My son was then placed on the donor's list but the waiting period is complicated.

Time was running out and his elderly mother was very tired as his case entailed 24 around-the-clock care.

Therefore his sister brought him to the Midwest, as this region of the country is one of the best for organ donations.

My daughter also encountered all that I have seen and more.

The medical care that he received from the doctors, nurses and EMT's was outstanding.

My son was with his sister for about two years. A year ago at this time, he received a kidney-pancreas transplant.

He is doing great and we would like to extend our gratitude to the family who gave my son their loved one's pancreas and kidney.

This loving family, at a time of great grief, made a decision that gave my son back his life.

Not only did my son receive two organs, but they gave all of their child's organs to benefit others.

No greater gift of love and life could they give.

This is a story of life, love, giving and professionalism.

His, Mom.

Thanks to that loving family, her son is now 41 and has returned to work, grateful for his "Gift Of Life."

With love.

And hope.

Republicans Gather Jan. 17 To Consider Their Future

The Quincy and Milton Republicans Committees will meet Saturday, Jan. 17, at 12 noon in the 99 Restaurant on Route 3A in Hingham to discuss the future of the struggling GOP in Massachusetts.

Republican fortunes sank to a new low in the 2008 state election when the party lost three seats in the House of Representatives, leaving them with only 16 of 160 spots. Democrats outnumbered Republicans 35 to 5 in the Senate.

Guests invited to what is called "A Summit of South Shore Republicans" include Senators Scott Brown of Wrentham and Robert Hedlund of Weymouth as well as Rep. Lewis Evangelidis of Holden.

Also expected are Mike Franco of East Longmeadow and Jennifer Nassour of Boston, who will face each other Jan. 27 in an election to succeed Peter Torkildsen as GOP state chairman.

Co-Chairpersons of the event are Jennifer Logue, chairwoman of the Quincy Republican City Committee, and Richard L. Pilla, who holds the same position in Milton.

"Although our invited guests will be asked to say a few words," said the co-chairs, "the primary reason for this event is for South Shore Republican activists to have an open and frank discussion on the future of our party and what we need to do to once again be a viable political organization."

"Attendees are encouraged to share their thoughts, ideas and recommendations. A GOP 'White Paper' will then be prepared and distributed to current and prospective elected officials, Massachusetts Town/City GOP Committees, the State Committee and the National Republican Party."

Tickets to the Jan. 17 get together are $20 per person, including lunch. RSVP by Tuesday, Jan. 13, to jenniferyl@comcast.net.

Behavior Management For Autistics Jan. 15

The Quincy Parent Advisory Council to Special Education will sponsor a free workshop on teaching caregivers techniques on managing autistic children's behavior Thursday, Jan. 15, from 7 to 9 p.m. at Broad Meadows Middle School, 50 Calvin Rd.

Jennifer Rutland will discuss maintaining variables of behavior and how to create behavior management plans followed by a discussion of reliable and valid behavior management techniques.

The workshop is open to the public.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1927 postcard view of the old Atlantic fire station when it was first built at 311 Hancock Street across from North Quincy High School. This modern fully-equipped building was set upon pilings driven into the edge of what was known then as the Montclair marshes seen in the background. This was the second Atlantic station; the first was on Newbury Avenue and is now used by the Caddy Marine Corps League. Because of the rapid growth of this part of the city at the time, the City Council had approved 10 additional firemen, two new fire engines and a new firehouse for this district. Shown here on opening day were the new Seagrave ladder truck on the left and a new Seagrave pumping engine on the right, along with the men who were stationed here. Over time, unnoticed by anyone, the buildings pilings had shifted in the marshes peat. In 1961, after a routine inspection, it was unexpectedly determined that the building was in danger of immediate collapse. It was quickly abandoned and later demolished. The present station was built on the same site in 1963. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincyopoly Board Game To Benefit YouthBuild Students

Quincy YouthBuild, operated by Training Resources of America Inc., is holding a fundraiser that will soon allow Quincy residents to play a version of the classic board game, Monopoly, with a local twist-the first-ever Quincyopoly board game.

This fundraiser encourages people to spend more family time while supporting one of the areas most comprehensive youth training programs, Quincy YouthBuild.

Board squares are currently available for $450-$1,000. There are also opportunities for $100 business and individual patron listings.

The planned release of 2,000 board games is expected in the spring. They will be marketed through Quincy 2000 and local media. Boards will sell for $30.

As part of a nationwide movement, Quincy YouthBuild helps low-income young people earn their GEDs and learn job readiness skills. Students receive construction skills training and participate in community service projects. Through

Quincy's Yesterdays

Burgin Asks Fair Chance For Plan E

By FRANK McCAULEY

Having served as Mayor of Quincy under both Plan A (strong mayor) and Plan E (city manager form of government) Mayor Thomas S. Burgin has enjoyed an unusually favorable opportunity to view both forms of city government and his views should be of particular interest.

"I am neither for or against Plan E until I feel it had a fair chance to operate," said Burgin. "I feel that it is a practical and business-like method of conducting city business and has great possibilities which should prove of direct benefit to the taxpayers of Quincy."

Mayor Burgin served as Plan A mayor of Quincy from June 1935 to November 1942 and was serving his second year as Plan E mayor.

(Editor's note: Plan E with a city manager as the city chief executive lasted eight years (1950-1957). The citizens of Quincy, by a majority vote in November 1955, voted to return to Plan A in January 1958.)

ON THE WORLD FRONT: COMMUNISTS WITHIN 14 MILES OF SEOUL

Chinese Communist invasion troops pressed a three pronged offensive within 14 miles of Seoul, on the heels of the withdrawing U.S. Eighth Army.

South Korean government officials in Seoul packed documents and equipment throughout the night as the Eighth Army fell back, leaving several yards of "No Man's Land" between the United Nations forces and the advancing Reds.

The Chinese offensive exploded all along the 140-mile front on New Year's Eve. The frontal assault on Seoul was accompanied by a heavy attack near the east coast, which ripped a hole in the Eighth Army's right flank.

(Editor's note: The Chinese Reds would recapture Seoul which they held originally from late June to late September 1950. However, the Eighth Army would recapture the city in March 1951.)

QUINCYISMS

Dr. Richard M. Ash, Quincy Health Commissioner, began the New Year by moving into his new office in the new half-million dollar Quincy Health Center. Sparkle Cleaners, Parkingway, Quincy, was advertising a "Wednesday Special, Any Suit, Cleaned and Pressed for 67 cents."

Ralph Lemon, 65, Crosby St., Houghs Neck, retired from Armstrong Cork Company of East Braintree, after 33 years of service.

William J. Martin, president of the Granite Trust Company, Quincy Center, announced that bank assets as of the close of business Dec. 31, 1950, reached $35,867,000.

A picture of Mark Fitzgerald, aged three months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Fitzgerald, 21 Chickatabot Rd., Merymount, graced Page Five of the Quincy Patriot Ledger. Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederick Cutler celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary at the hall of the Wollaston Unitarian Church. The party was given by their two children, J. Frederick Cutler of Quincy and Mrs. Earl Webb (Blanche Cutler) of Natick. Mr. Cutler was a veteran of the Spanish-American War. Both the Quincy and North Quincy High hockey teams opened their seasons with victories. Quincy High's Jim Curry scored both goals as QHS defeated Milton High, 2-0. Meanwhile, NQ's Dick Gallagher scored four goals as NQHS defeated Brockton High, 5-4. James Cagney and Virginia Mayo were appearing in the "West Point Story" at the Strand Theater.

Miss Beverly Thomas of Quincy was a hostess at a luncheon for graduates of Thayer Academy Class of 1948. Other Quincy graduates attending included Kay Fratus, Joan Barbour and Elizabeth Collins. Lodgen's Market, 32 Cottage Ave., Quincy Center, was offering "On Wednesday Only, Tasty, Tender Lamb liver, 39 cents a pound."

Harold Shaw, 57, 35 Bay View Ave., Houghs Neck, made his 52nd blood donation to the Red Cross. Miss Gloria Brummitt was elected president of the Young Adult Fellowship of Houghs Neck Congregational Church. She succeeded Miss Irene Keith.

City Manager William Deegan announced the appointment of City Auditor Alexander Smith, as director of the new city department of finance, effective immediately. Lois Fontana, 42 Bennington St., South Quincy, won a free ticket to the Strand Theater in the Strand's "Misspelled Word Contest." Mrs. John Cattanach, 30 Sewall St., Wollaston, was installed a commander of the Wollaston Navy Mothers Club. G. Prescott Law, publisher of the Quincy Patriot Ledger, spoke at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Quincy Lions Club, held at the Fox and Hound; his topic "U.S. Foreign Policy As It Relates To The Berlin Impasse." Arthur Gillis, King Lion, presided at the business meeting.

Taxed Out In Quincy

Quincy, a city where I was born and grew up. Most likely I will remain here for the remaining years of my life.

Quincy, a city where I was proud to talk about, now I drop my head in disappointment.

Cities come with major cost of all types to run so when a tax hike came about maybe it's for the best, city improvements, etc.

However, when we get our first snow of the season and snow plowing is so terrible in my neighborhood that a visiting nurse for my wife and newborn had to cancel due to "Quincy streets are horrible" and hearing from every friend and relative who came to visit our newborn ask, why do you live in Quincy with the city not taking care of every day duties like snow plowing, terrible streets or fixing the 20 foot pot hole in front of my house that had been there for years with the whole neighborhood calling the city's "pot hole hot line" asking for repair with no result.

I patched the bad parts several times at about $100 per fix.

Then we get our second snow of the season and the same results; plow came by once with blade down and several times with blade up and deep snow on the street. Roads a mess, why do I pay taxes?

What happened to the city that I use to boast about?

Our neighborhood and city streets are in terrible condition and our plows simply are not getting the job done!

I am hoping for changes for the better but I won't be holding my breath.

Taxed out in Quincy.

Free Screening of The Poseidon Adventure Friday at Houghs Neck Congregational

The Houghs Neck Congregational Church will present a free screening of The Poseidon Adventure on Friday (Jan. 9) at 6:30 p.m. in the church's Fellowship Hall. All are welcome to attend.

The Academy Award-winning film, featuring an all-star cast including Gene Hackman, Leslie Nielsen, Ernest Borgnine, Shelly Winters, Red Buttons and Jack Albertson, follows a free-thinking minister (Hackman) and his fellow cruise ship passengers as they fight for their lives after a tidal wave capsizes the ship on New Year's Eve.

The movie is being shown as part of the Houghs Neck

Congregational Church's "Faith in Film Fridays," a series of free monthly screenings of popular films that explore issues of faith.

The church is located at 310 Manet Ave in Quincy. "Faith in Film Friday" is held at 6:30 p.m. on the second Friday of each month in the church's Fellowship Hall.

Admission is free and a snack bar offering soups, sandwiches and drinks is also available. For directions or more information, call 617-479-8778.

Granite Quarry Museum Seeks Industry Artifacts

The newly founded Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum is seeking artifacts related to the granite industry for display at a yet undetermined site.

The granite industry was once Quincy's largest employer with more than 40 working quarries and more than 60 stone sheds and related granite businesses in the city.

Artifacts sought by the museum include stone tools such as hammers, chisels and related equipment.

All will be catalogued and recorded with the name of the donor and when displayed will also state the donor's name.

Contact the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum at PO Box 690724, Quincy, MA 022269 or call 617-472-8083.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Dom's Eggplant Lasagna

It was the day after Christmas and we all know what that's like, cleaning up, and while most of us have cooked multiple foods, cookies, and other things for the holiday, we still have to eat.

My son Dom decided he would be the one to prepare dinner for the day after. So back at my house we feasted on a delicious dinner including the eggplant which is today's recipe.

It was so light and delicious--he made it as he would a lasagna. But this dish has no pasta.

EGGPLANT LASAGNA

- 1 large or 2 small eggplants
- bread crumb for coating
- 1 egg mixed with a little milk
- 2 cups ricotta
- 1/2 cup mozzarella cheese
- 1/4 c parmesan cheese
- 2 tablespoons fresh parsley
- 1 egg for the cheese mixture salt and pepper o taste oil for frying

2 or 3 cups tomato sauce

First cut the eggplant (Dom left the skin on) in about 1/4 inch slices. Dip the slices in the egg and milk mixture and then the bread crumbs. Sauté in a frying pan and drain on paper towel. (If you do not want to fry them, they can also be placed on greased cookie sheets in a 350 degree oven for about 15 minutes.)

Mix together the ricotta, parmesan cheese, mozzarella, parsley and egg and salt and pepper. In a greased baking dish, place tomato sauce first. Then layer the eggplant, the cheese mixture, the sauce and continue until done. Top with sauce and a sprinkle of mozzarella cheese on the top. Bake in a 350 degree oven covered until bubbly (about 30 minutes) depending on the amount. Cut in squares.

Dom made a delicious salad, meatball and spaghetti dinner to go with the eggplant.

Fort Warren Topic At Main Library Jan. 13

Local author Jay Schmidt will discuss Fort Warren, one of Boston Harbor Islands' most famous forts, Tuesday, Jan. 13 at 6:30 p.m. at Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The free program is sponsored by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission headed by Mayor Thomas Koch and Chairman Leo Kelly.

Located on Georges' Island, Fort Warren was an historic Civil War fort beginning in 1833. During the Civil War, the fort was, also, used as a prison for Confederate military and political prisoners.

During World Wars I and II, the fort was used as a defense facility and was controlled by the federal government until 1958 when it was turned over to the Commonwealth.

The Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), presently, maintains the fort.

Quincy 2000 Collaborative and The Quincy Technology Council recently presented a $1,200 check to the Quincy Public Schools' Robotics Team HYPER at the Quincy Historical Society.

The funds were raised during an informational event on Wind Turbines held at the Best Western Adams Inn in June in Quincy, which featured Mayor Thomas P. Koch. Admission to the event was in the form of a donation for Quincy Public Schools' Robotics Team HYPER to help them achieve their financial goals to attend next year's regional competitions. Other sponsors for the event included

New England Wind Fund; One Communications; Cashman, Inc.; Mass Energy Consumers Alliance; and GIG IT Consulting.

The check presentation kicked off the second in this series of informational events on wind turbines, in which Senator Michael Morrissey discussed the Green Communities Act and how it affects wind energy projects in Quincy.

Quincy Public Schools Team 69 HYPER has been Helping Youth Pursue Engineering and Robotics for over a decade. The 2007-2008 season marks Team HYPER's 11th year as a partnership between Quincy Public Schools and Gillette.

Today, the team consists of 46 high school students, eight teachers and several engineers, machinists and technicians from Proctor & Gamble's Gillette division, and more than two-dozen actively involved team alumni.

Though all activities center around the robot and competition, Team HYPER has become much more. HYPER is a diverse group of individuals, who are all focused as a team toward one goal: providing an environment for students to test different interests and skills through hands-on experience.

Gutro, Coughlin To Host Property Abatement, Exemption Workshop Jan. 14

Quincy City Councilors Doug Gutro and Kevin Coughlin will host a Tax Relief Workshop for residents interested in learning about the property tax abatement process as well as exemptions available.

The workshop will take place Wednesday, Jan. 14 at 7:30 p.m. at Bernazzani School gymnasium on Furnace Brook Parkway in Quincy.

At this workshop, Marion Fantucchio, principal assessor for the City of Quincy, will discuss a variety of exemption programs. In addition, any resident is entitled to file for a tax abatement if they believe that the city has over assessed the value of their home. This process will also be discussed.

Coughlin and Gutro said they have organized this workshop in response to the significant increase in residential property tax bills that were mailed on Jan. 1, 2009. Since the issuance of these bills, many residents, particularly those on fixed incomes, have expressed an interest in better understanding exemption options as well as the abatement process, the councilors said.

In 2008, the City Council unanimously approved a proposal by Councilor Gutro to expand the eligibility requirements to provide a $500 property tax exemption for senior citizens 65 years of age and older. Eligible seniors have to meet income and asset requirements.

Residents eligible for this exemption are automatically eligible for a 25% discount on their water and sewer bills.

In 2008, the City Council unanimously approved a proposal by Coughlin to exempt veterans serving in Iraq or Afghanistan from paying property taxes during the period of deployment.

All interested residents are encouraged to attend the workshop Jan. 14.

Lyme Disease Is Subject Of Atria Place Discussion

Registered nurse Jennifer Maynard will discuss Lyme Disease Thursday, Jan. 15, at 12 noon at the Monthly Lunch & Learn at the Atria Marina Place Community, 4 Seaport Drive, North Quincy.

The discussion, co-sponsored by Geneva Health Services, will include the signs, symptoms, statistics, prevention and treatment of Lyme Disease.

The event is free and open to the public. Call 617-770-3264 for reservations.

Bingo with a jackpot prize of a $100 gift certificate and other prizes will be held Wednesday, Jan. 28, at 2:30 p.m. Coffee and pastries will be served at the free event.

VALERIE BLOOMER (front row, second from left) of Quincy and several of her classmates at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree got a lesson in how history is being made in Washington from Congressman Barney Frank. The students were guests of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce when Rep. Frank spoke to the Chamber about the economic crisis and the $700 billion federal rescue package he helped enact. Pictured are Amanda Crowley of Weymouth, Valerie Bloomer of Quincy, Congressman Frank, Ian Mulhern of Milton, Dan Minihan of Weymouth, (back row) Brian Kimball of Plymouth, Tyler Gallahue of Plymouth, Dan Cotton of Pembroke, and Rob Andrea of Holbrook.

Ward 5 Democrats To Caucus Feb. 7

Ward 6 Democrats will caucus Saturday, Feb. 7, at 10 a.m., at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., to select nine delegates and three alternates for the 2009 State Convention.

The convention will be held Saturday, June 6, at the Mass Mutual Center in Springfield.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Ward 6. Those not elected as delegates or alternates but meet the qualifications may apply as add-on delegates in the youth, minority and disabled categories.

Challenges to the process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 58 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129; no later than 10 days after the caucus.

For more information, contact Ward Chair Paul Kennedy at 617-328-1059.

To Be Pastor In Framingham

Fr. John Rowan Leaving
St. Mary's After 14^{1/2} Years

Changes are happening at St. Mary's in West Quincy as its long time pastor the Rev. John Rowan is leaving to become a pastor at St. George's Church in Framingham because of the death of the Rev. Francis E. O'Brien.

The Rev. Francis E. O'Brien, who was former pastor at St. George's Church for 13 years, died in September.

Father Rowan will take over as pastor on Jan. 10. He is presently on a retreat this week.

Father Rowan first came to St. Mary's 14 1/2 years ago and has served as pastor for the past 9 1/2 years.

The Rev. Raymond Kiley, formerly of St. John's Church, who is already at St. Mary's, will become an assistant to the Rev. Domenic Menna, who is temporary administrator.

Father Kiley whose appointment is called an "emergency response," will remain until a new pastor is chosen.

Fr. Kiley was born and raised in Yonkers, N.Y. After graduating from high school in the Bronx, he went to St. Anselm College where he graduated in 1972 with a B.A. in history.

In 1974 he moved to Watertown where for the next 17 years he worked at the Perkins School for the Blind. In 1976, he received an M.A. in education from Boston College.

In 1991, Fr. Kiley entered Pope John XXIII Seminary. While there his summer seminary assignments included St. Gregory's in Dorchester, St. John the Baptist in Peabody, and Regina Cleri (the archdiocesan home for retired priests) in the West End. From September 1994 to May 1996, he did his deaconate at St. Ann's in Somerville.

In May 1996, after receiving a Masters in Divinity, he was ordained by His Eminence Bernard Cardinal Law at Holy Cross Cathedral. His first assignment as a priest was at St. John the Evangelist in Canton.

In June 2002, he was assigned to St. John's where he served six years, leaving last June for a sabbatical.

A reception was held in Mullarkey Hall, downstairs at the church last Sunday for Father Rowan following his farewell 11:30 a.m. Mass.

Alicia Gardner President

Manet Health Center Board Elects Officers

ALICIA GARDNER

• Board development

"In response to the governor's first quarter '9C' cuts, and with additional cuts expected at the close of the second quarter, Manet will be ever vigilant in controlling costs, capturing efficiencies and maximizing revenues," said Gardner, adding, "We provide cost effective, high quality, culturally appropriate primary care and, like all safety net providers, we deserve to be reimbursed appropriately for the care we provide."

"In response to community needs, we will assess the current and future medical, behavioral and social service needs of our patients and residents across our South Shore communities and we will work to meet these needs with adequate and appropriately located facilities, personnel and equipment."

"With respect to our patients and their families, we will strengthen our existing community partnerships and develop all necessary strategic alliances to advance the Manet mission. We must look at our community, secondary and tertiary hospital and health plan partners for ways to grow together while creating a 'medical home' for our shared patients."

With respect to our medical staff and allied health professionals, we will be creative in our recruitment and sensitive in our retention of the next generation of primary care providers. They are our treasure at Manet, and they are in critically short supply. We must be competitive to secure the best. Our patients deserve the best."

Gardner concluded, "In regard to my peers on the Manet board, we will work to strengthen our board, identify new members and create new volunteer leadership opportunities."

Returning members of the Board of Directors are John Brothers, Executive Director, Quincy Asian Resources, Inc.; Maureen Coney; Kathleen Gavin Robinson, Data Collection Technician, United States Post office; Stephen Gore, Help Desk Coordinator, Wentworth Institute; Linda Kelly; Joan MacDonald, Hull Family Network, Coordinator, Hull Public Schools; Barbara Morris; Joseph Reardon, Director of Advance Planning, Keohane Funeral and Cremation Services and Elizabeth Swanton.

been arranged.

The tour will stop at Quincy Market at 12:15 p.m. so tourists can shop and enjoy lunch before continuing with a visit to the Navy Yard in Charlestown, including the USS Constitution and World War II destroyer Cassin Young.

Cost of the tour is $45 per person, with checks made payable to William O'Brien/Window to Boston.

The Manet Community Health Center Board of Directors recently elected the following officers for 2009:

Alicia Gardner was elected President; Robert Littlefield, Vice President; Kenneth Dyer, Treasurer and Elise Kline, Secretary.

Gardner, formerly vice president of the board, is employed as Director of Support Service, Registry of Deeds, Norfolk County, Dedham. Littlefield, the former president, is currently Vice President of Business Development, BL Trading, LLC, in Hanover.

The new treasurer, Dyer, is President and Chief Executive Officer, Liberty Bay Credit Union, Braintree and Kline is a Clinical Nurse Specialist in Adult Psychiatric and Community Mental Health, Lemuel Shattuck Hospital, Jamaica Plain.

Gardner credited Littlefield for his steady leadership of the health center during this past year of transition. She cited his selection of Henry Tuttle as the new chief executive officer.

"Rob's love for the Manet mission is demonstrated in his deeds; he's a very caring man," said Gardner in her acceptance speech.

"I'm honored to have been chosen the next president of the Manet Board of Directors," said Gardner who predicted, "It will be an exciting and challenging year. I'm looking forward to leading a new CEO and our organization into its 30th year of service to our community."

Manet Community Health Center, Inc., will mark its 30th anniversary as a federal qualified, not-for-profit community health center, in 2009. The agency has headquarters at 110 West Squantum St., and operates four neighborhood sites in Quincy and one in Hull.

Gardner said the board will focus on five priority areas in 2009:

- Fiscal strength
- Program planning
- Patient services
- Provider Relations

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Fire Safety Tips For Seniors

I was looking at another FIREFACTORS, a press flyer from the State Fire Marshal's Office; I will attempt to convey the gist of the content here for you.

In 2007, older adults, 65 years and above, made up 14% of our production, but 30% of the fire deaths for that year. Seniors are two times more likely to die in a fire. So here are some suggestions for safer inhabiting.

Smoking was the leading cause of fire deaths with older adults at 56%. Consequently, never smoke in bed, do not leave smoking materials unattended, soak ashtrays before emptying them into a wastebasket and NEVER mix smoking with oxygen use.

Electrical fire caused 3 of the 16 fire deaths for that year. This was the second leading cause of fire deaths for seniors. Never overload electrical outlets; power strips are made for electronic devices, not appliances drawing a heavier load such as space heaters. Examine all extension cords for wear, frayed and cracked insulation, and replace them with new ones having a certification label from an independent testing laboratory. Remove extension cords from underneath rugs, carpets, or furniture where insulation can be worn causing overheating and arcing.

Cooking mishaps are the leading cause of fire injuries to seniors. 31% of fire related injuries to seniors were from cooking fires. We suggest that tight fitting sleeves be worn while cooking. Never leave cooking unattended, if you must leave, take a spoon or potholder with you to remind yourself of your ongoing efforts in the kitchen. Keep stove top pot handles facing inward, out of the way of traffic within the kitchen.

Make certain space heaters are UL approved. Place them on a firm surface a minimum three-feet from combustibles. The heater should not be left unattended as well, or used within a bedroom while sleeping. It should be kept away from water, and if an extension cord is used, make certain that it is not frayed or faulty and is appropriate for the electrical load required.

Falls are the leading cause of death from unintentional injury at home. Clear the way keeping stairs and walking areas free of electrical cords, shoes, clothing, books, magazines and clutter. Use only throw rugs with rubber, non-skid backing. Smooth out wrinkles and folds in carpets as well.

Smoke detectors afford an early warning; even then, an escape plan is essential. Keep these essential items by your bedside: eye-glasses, telephone and a whistle. Eyeglasses will help you see and avoid injury as you escape. The whistle will alert other household members and rescuers to your location if assistance is needed. The telephone will allow you to call for help.

Lastly, having the number of your residence clearly visible on the front of your home facilities our efforts in offering immediate quality medical assistance if needed.

Help us, help you, and make certain the numerical address is clearly visible with contrasting numbers in front of your home.

Life-Line Screening At Sons Of Italy

Life-Line screening, the nation's leading provider of preventive health screenings will be offered to residents living in and around the Quincy community to reduce their risk of having a stroke.

The screenings will be held at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St. Jan. 19. Appointments will begin at 9 a.m.

The complete screening package includes a new Heart Rhythm screening which checks for irregular heartbeat, a major risk factor for stroke.

A stroke is ranked as the third leading cause of death in the United States and often occurs without warning. With early detection, 80% of strokes can be prevented.

Screenings, which are painless, accurate and affordable, help identify potential health problems such as blocked arteries, irregular heart rhythm, abdominal aortic aneurysms, hardening of the arteries in the legs, and a bone density to assess osteoporosis risk.

Register for a Wellness Package with Heart Rhythm for $149.- All five screenings take 60-90 minutes to complete.

For more information, call 216-581-6556, E-mail at www.lifelinescreening.com, or write to Life Line Screening, 6150 Oak Tree Blvd. Independence, Ohio, 44131.

Handling Chronic Pain

Dr. Winifred Delmundo of Milton Hospital will lecture seniors on how to manage chronic pain Tuesday, March 17, at 1 p.m. at the Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex, one Merrymount Parkway.

How the body processes pain and how to use this information to manage it will be discussed. A general question and answer period will follow the lecture.

To register, call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1506.

Thomas Crane Library To Host Love And Forgiveness Series

Explore the theme of love and forgiveness in everyday life through classic and contemporary literature beginning Monday, Feb. 2 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

"Let's Talk About It: Love & Forgiveness in the Presence of the Enemy" is a five-part, scholar-led reading and discussion series based on the premise that forgiveness is possible even in the presence of the enemy when they share their common humanity.

"We are delighted to have been chosen to host this unique series that will allow readers a chance to discuss the themes of love and forgiveness with fellow community members and with the help of a well-qualified scholar," said Library Director Ann McLaughlin.

The first session on Feb. 2 will explore scenes from Homer's ancient epic poem about the fall of Troy, The Iliad.

Additional books will be discussed the first Monday of each month through June at the library.

These books are Jane Eyre by Charlotte Bronte on March 2, Embers by Sandor Marai on April 6, The Guardian by Ana Castillo on May 4, and Bel Canto by Ann Patchett on June 1.

Dr. Jeslyn Medoff, adjunct professor in English at UMass-Boston will lead a discussion of the book at each session. Dr. Medoff teaches literature and American studies to graduate and undergraduate students. She served as Project Scholar for the "Let's Talk About It: Jewish Literature" series held in the fall of 2007.

The library is one of 50 libraries nationwide receiving grants to host the series developed by the American Library Association and the Fetzer Institute's Campaign for Love and Forgiveness.

Copies of each book in the series will be available for pick-up one month prior to each session.

For more information or to register visit the website thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

Lisa Yves & Friends To Play Jazz At Crane Library Jan. 11

The Thomas Crane Library's free Sunday afternoon concert series will kick off in 2009 with a performance by vocalist Lisa Yves, with Richard Rancatore and friends, on Sunday, Jan. 11 at 3 p.m. at the library.

The program, entitled "Chasing the Blues Away: Great Songs of the Depression," will feature some of the greatest jazz songs ever written. Many 1930s-era songs are happy, upbeat tunes to combat the mood of the times, but there are also some sad songs. Yves and her band will be doing such songs as "Life is Just a Bowl of Cherries," "Body and Soul," "Night and Day," "Ten Cents a Dance" and

"Anything Goes."

Originally from New York, Yves has been living, performing and recording albums in Massachusetts since 1995. She was a finalist in the 2004 Boston Pops talent search and sang at Symphony Hall.

The Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library sponsor this concert. For more information call 617-376-1301.

Reverse Mortgage Explained

Ed Barrett, a reverse mortgage specialist, will discuss his specialty on the first and third Wednesdays of the month at 1 p.m. at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

Reverse mortgage is a new program offered by the federal government that allows seniors to convert a portion of their home equity into tax free cash.

Full Text Of Mayor Thomas Koch's Mid-Term Address

Reverend clergy, my colleagues in government, distinguished guests, citizens of Quincy, friends all:

As I stand before you today, I am mindful that we in Quincy – like every community throughout our Commonwealth – face unprecedented fiscal challenges. In fact, whether on Beacon Hill or Capitol Hill, leaders in government must deal with a world of fiscal uncertainty. This uncertainty affects our ability to plan both short and long term. And, the fiscal crisis is a wide one that impacts us all – big and small – whether business, government, or families.

When you elected me your mayor last year – I told you I was ready to meet those challenges. I stand before you today to tell you what we have done, and what we are continuing to do. My administration has worked to ensure that we sustain the programs and services that make Quincy the great community it is today. I am committed to doing everything we can to control our future.

All communities are facing increased health care costs. We have addressed it and are proud to say that Quincy is the largest community to successfully negotiate a contract for the state's GIC health care system – a negotiation that will save our citizens four million dollars in health care costs in the first year alone. One of the biggest budget busters facing municipal budgets annually – health care – is one of the areas that we tackled, and tackled successfully by working together.

There are other ways my administration has worked to control the cost of government – our new trash and recycling contract is an example I am most proud of. Quincy negotiated not alone, but together with our neighbors in Braintree and Weymouth, to achieve even greater savings from our new trash contract. By taking a regionalized approach, we were able to strengthen our negotiating position – and everyone came out a winner – most importantly, you, the residents of Quincy. While many communities around us continue to wrestle with trash removal costs, we in Quincy will be saving money for years to come due to this collaborative effort.

We have unique problems that we began addressing the day I took office. We instituted broad reforms in our water and sewer department needed to fix a system broken at nearly every level.

We uncovered dozens of illegal water connections;

Located and fixed major leaks throughout the system;

Implemented state-approved billing practices, corrected a $3 million deficit; and

We introduced a new city ordinance that will make sure that any one who uses city water, pays their fair share.

This is but one example of the kind of full examination coupled with decisive action we will apply to every facet of city government.

In addition, we immediately addressed the Quincy High School project, the largest, most expensive public works project in our city's history. It was much talked about, and I committed from day one to bring this project in on time and on budget. Working cooperatively with the state's school building authority, we identified savings and made necessary cuts, totaling over three million dollars. I am pleased to say that today the project is on time and on budget. I want to thank my staff, the school building committee, and the school committee for their important work on this project.

We are working hard – and producing positive results – I would be remiss if I did not say that I owe great thanks to the members of our city council, who have worked on these issues with me, every step of the way. And to our state delegation, who continually support our efforts at the state level. I extend my gratitude. The School Committee although we've had differences, let us continue to seek common ground for the benefit of our children.

I greatly appreciate the cooperation you have all extended to my administration.

As we chart our course for 2009, I want to share with you something I was asked a few weeks ago by the president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. He asked whether municipal finance can sustain itself under the existing model. It was a thoughtful question without an easy answer. But as we continue to grapple with this crisis, I must say that my response is, "No".

Government, for far too long, has created new programs or approved projects without worrying where to find the money to pay for them. We must change this credit card approach. No more can we make decisions without weighing the long-term ramifications.

My administration, working with our independent auditor, will issue a full financial report discussing these practices. We will use this report as a roadmap, as we plot the city's future. And, I will begin the budget process far earlier this year, allowing for greater deliberation and public input.

As chairman of the school committee, I ask my colleagues to do the same, and conduct all budget deliberations during regular school committee meetings, in the evening, allowing for full public participation.

Recognizing the strain of the economy, our administration, the city council and the school committee cut $3 million from this year's budget, and just a few weeks ago we reduced the tax levy by another $2 million.

I understand this year's tax bill increased the burden on our residents, and that this affects families across our city in ways large and small. Know that the decisions made this year will resolve many issues, and will create consistent, predictable tax policy going forward. Make no mistake about it; the bill has come due for previous commitments made.

Working together with the city council and our newly-created department of municipal finance we will provide the oversight, accountability and long-term planning we need to stay on solid fiscal footing thereby avoid tax increases of the magnitude faced this year.

We will seize the opportunities before us, despite these economic conditions. Our city is positioned today for historic investment and growth – growth which will allow us to control our own destiny.

The right place for economic development now is our city's downtown. We will present to the City Council, business owners and citizens a plan for the largest private investment in our city's history. A dynamic vision that will create dramatic new tax growth, spawn unprecedented job opportunities, and result in a downtown we can all be proud of.

We welcome new investment in our city. Working with the City Council and Planning Board, a new Lowe's project has been approved which – in addition to tax benefits – will provide substantial traffic improvements and be a project the neighborhood can be proud of. We provided vital tax incentives that allowed for the rehabilitation of the vacant office tower at 100 Hancock Street, which now serves as the home of Massachusetts Financial Services, providing hundreds of jobs, increased tax revenue, and a state-of-the-art, green office building at the gateway to the north end of our city.

We are working hard with the Governor and our state delegation, in cooperation with developer Dan Quirk, at the Quincy Shipyard – the largest tract of land remaining to be developed, that will provide much-needed tax revenue and jobs for our residents.

I am working with Congressman Bill Delahunt on the federal stimulus package – working to insure that Quincy receives every dollar of federal funding available.

Last year, at this time, we talked about a number of new initiatives, and the progress we made will only continue in coming months.

Working deliberately and cooperatively with state authorities, we have made significant strides toward replacing Central Middle School. The Central Building Committee continues an intensive planning process, and soon we will be selecting a project manager. I understand during these difficult times, there are projects we must consider delaying. This is not one of them. Our City first highlighted the need to replace Central more than three decades ago, and it is now considered one of the worst buildings in the state. As I discussed earlier, I will provide a full and clear plan to the city council on how we will pay for it.

Our Zoning Task Force continues to meet regularly. Based on their work, I will submit to the city council major changes in our zoning code to encourage smart development that will protect the integrity of our neighborhoods. To the members of the committee, I extend my appreciation for your work.

Our Drug Task Force is confronting the drug problem in our neighborhoods. I am grateful to each member for their efforts as we continue to work in the areas of prevention, enforcement and treatment. Our city has made it clear: we will not ignore a problem simply because solutions are not easy.

This Spring we look forward to the opening of our new state of the art senior center. Reuse of an existing city owned building makes this project financially feasible. With this facility, we will be able to more fully serve our older citizens with programs affecting their health and well-being.

As I look out at the faces in the audience, I am reminded that we are all in it together. I am prepared to make the hard decisions, and ask only that we continue to work cooperatively through these difficult times. We owe our city no less.

Behind me is the seal of our City of Quincy, the inscription across the top reads "Manet" meaning: "It Remains." Today, Quincy remains strong, proud and determined. We remain faithful to those values shown to us by our city forefathers. Let us continue on the course of hard work, respect and compassion for others; all in a spirit of cooperation. Let us be the example for every community in Massachusetts.

Thank you and God Bless you "will be a project the neighborhood can be proud of."

As for the federal stimulus package, Koch said he was "working with Congressman Bill Delahunt to insure that Quincy receives every dollar of federal funding available."

Koch announced the upcoming development proposal during his mid-term address to the over 200 persons attending Monday's mid-term ceremonies in City Council Chambers.

Following the mayor's remarks, City Council President Jay Davis and Clerk of Committees Jeanne Reardon were re-elected by the council.

City Clerk Joseph Shea presided over the ceremony. Rev. Richard Cannon, Pastor, St. John's Church, and Rev. William Hardin, Pastor, Bethany Congregational Church, offered the invocation and benediction respectively.

Thomas Stansbury of Veterans' Services asked all to remember the military and veterans before he led the Pledge of Allegiance.

Koch opened his remarks by acknowledging the fiscal challenges ahead.

"The fiscal crisis is a wide one that impacts us all, big and small, whether business government or families."

He then said he intended to ensure that city maintain its current programs and services.

"I am committed to doing everything we can to control our future."

In a wrap-up of the past year and pledges for the next year, Koch said the new Quincy High School will be completed "on time and on budget" and a project manager for the Central Middle School project will be selected soon.

"I understand during these difficult times, there are projects we must consider delaying. This is not one of them," Koch said.

"It is now considered one of the worst buildings in the state," Koch added, describing the building which had been targeted for replacement 30 years ago.

Koch singled out former Mayor James Sheets and former Mayor William Phelan, who were present, for their part in the success of the high school project.

As for the past year's major accomplishments, Koch cited current or anticipated fiscal savings due to the following:

- a change in the city's employee health care insurance that should save taxpayers $4 million;
- the city's regional trash and recycling program;
- reforms in the water and sewer department and proposed legal measures to protect the city;
- The city's municipal finance department

Koch's 2009 agenda, also, includes the opening of a new senior center in the former Myles Standish School, North Quincy; continued efforts on drug problems; and recommendations for an overhaul of the city's zoning.

As for the recent real estate tax hike, Koch vowed an end to the roller-coaster taxes of up one year and down the next and said the budget process will begin soon.

"I understand this year's tax bill increased the burden on our residents, and that this affects families across our city in ways large and small," said Koch.

However, Koch attributed the impact to "previous commitments," after warning that, "government, for far too long has created new programs or approved projects without worrying

"We must change this credit card approach."

"Know that the decisions made this year will resolve many issues and will create consistent, predictable tax policy going forward," Koch assured his audience, noting that an independent auditing firm is currently reviewing the city's books.

In addition to Sheets and Phelan, former Mayors Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, and Frank McCauley attended the ceremony. Former Mayor Arthur Tobin was unable to attend.

Among those in attendance were Judge Mark Coven, District Attorney William Keating, Rep. Ron Mariano, School Supt. Rick DeCristofaro, and former Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick.

Also, Rep. Steve Tobin, Rep. A Job Well Done

On Friday, Dec. 26, 2008, at approximately 5:15 p.m., Officer Dennis Keenan was dispatched to a local business on Washington Street to investigate a larceny. Upon arrival, the officer interviewed the victim, a receptionist, who told him that a patient came in for a follow up appointment at 2 p.m.

LT. DAN MINTON

At the time he arrived in the waiting room, she was away from the reception desk. The patient was then directed to the examination room and it was at this time that the victim noticed that her cell phone, valued at $600.00, was missing from her purse.

The victim also reported that an antique, valued at approximately $15,000, was missing from the office. Although the suspect was sneaky, what he didn't know was that this particular office was equipped with a video security system.

The victim watched the video and observed the suspect take her phone from her purse. She showed the tape to Officer Keenan, which helped establish probable cause to arrest the suspect. The video showed the suspect enter at approximately 2:07 p.m., walk up to the counter, look around and then reach over the counter to take the phone out of the purse. The suspect then left briefly and then re-entered the office.

The victim confronted the suspect in the examination room but he denied taking the phone, that is, until the victim informed him that he was on video. The suspect then said he was only borrowing the phone to use the Internet on her phone. The suspect said he would return the phone and she watched as he went to his car and took it out from under the seat console. She then checked to see if anything else was missing and noted that $45 in cash and two CitiBank Credit/Debit Cards were no longer in her purse.

She demanded that the suspect return her credit cards and money, but he denied this, then said that he was in a street gang and if she called the police, he would "rough her up really bad." Officer Keenan then contacted the suspect via telephone and asked him to return to the office and he agreed to meet at 7:30 p.m.

At 7:40 p.m., the suspect had not been seen or heard from, so Officer Keenan called him again. The suspect said that he was on his way but he hit a curb and got a flat tire on Cleverly Court. Officer Mike Duran joined Officer Keenan at Cleverly Court, where they found the suspect and placed him under arrest without incident.

The suspect denied taking the money, debit cards and the antique. The debit cards were cancelled and detectives will be checking pawnshops in hopes of recovering the sentimental antique. It should be noted that the same suspect was arrested again a few days later after he forged one of his mother's checks and attempted to use it to purchase items at Stop N' Shop.

The suspect, a 23-year-old Braintree resident, was charged with larceny over $250 and intimidation of a witness.

Nice Work!

In this case, as in many office locations, thefts occur because employees leave their personal items in an unprotected place or because an employer does not provide a secure storage area. The thefts can occur by those coming and going to the commercial area and seeing the opportunity of unguarded property. Unfortunately, there is also the concern of co-worker larceny too.

PAST BREAKS AND ATTEMPTS: low numbers Bigelow Street, Germain Avenue.

Winter Heightens Carbon Monoxide Dangers

Q. I wanted to write in hopes that you will remind readers how dangerous portable generators are when not used properly. Already this winter, three people in New England have died due to carbon monoxide poisoning because they were running unventilated generators after last month's ice storm. Please remind people to be safe! — Jack in Concord, N.H.

A. Many thanks for the heads-up, Jack! Portable generators are just one item that produces carbon monoxide. Other appliances that can be a problem are home furnaces and fireplaces — basically, any device that uses combustion to produce heat, because that item also produces exhaust. Even worse, carbon monoxide (CO) is colorless and odorless, and CO poisoning can happen very quickly. So how does one prevent being overcome by CO?

The best defense is a carbon monoxide detector with a battery backup, placed near sleeping or living areas of your home. This inexpensive item will detect dangerous CO levels before they can affect a home's residents. Like a smoke detector, it should be tested monthly and the battery replaced at least once a year.

The second best defense is properly installed and vented appliances that are maintained regularly.

Third, read the instructions before using any combustion-based appliance, like a heater or generator. Never use charcoal grills indoors. Never run generators indoors. Don't run the car in a closed garage.

Finally, if the CO detector goes off or you or others begin experiencing the symptoms of initial CO poisoning — dizziness, headache, fatigue, nausea, irregular breathing — get everyone, including pets, out of the house immediately and contact emergency services.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homequincy2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

It's Not Hard To Be Green

(ARA) - DIY. So last year. Now it's GIY. As in green-it-yourself. And just like DIY projects, there are plenty of easy GIY weekend home improvement projects that will save energy and money and add value to your home. Oh, and we should mention you can help protect the planet while you're at it.

Being green is easy and important. People everywhere are taking small steps that make a difference in the fight against global warming. From buying energy-efficient appliances, to reusing grocery bags, to properly inflating tires, millions of Americans are clamoring to do their part for the earth.

So what are some GIY projects you can tackle now that will help save energy, money and the planet?

1. Insulating -- One of the easiest GIY projects that delivers the biggest green payoff is upgrading your home's insulation. By doing so, you can decrease your carbon footprint, increase your home's energy efficiency and save up to 20 percent on your heating and cooling energy bills. Yet, nearly 80 million U.S. homes are estimated to be under insulated to the Department of Energy (DOE) standards.

The Department of Energy recommends attics -- where 30 to 40 percent of a home's total energy loss occurs -- have up to an R-value of 60. To meet these standards, your attic should have at least 19 inches of fiberglass batt (roll) insulation or 22 inches of blown insulation. A good rule of thumb -- if you can see the wood beams (joists) in your attic, you definitely don't have enough insulation. Even if you can't see the joists, you still may not have enough and with nearly 80 million American homes under insulated it's likely we or our neighbors could use more. Owens Corning, makers of recognizable PINK insulation, offers a step-by-step guide to adding insulation to your attic at www.insulate-and-save.com.

2. Heating & Sealing -- Reap the most benefit from the insulation upgrade you just finished by ensuring that your furnace, ductwork and weather stripping around doors and windows are in good shape.

While it's a good practice to have your furnace serviced by a professional each year, you can improve your furnace's operation and efficiency. Change the air filters throughout your house every 30 days and regularly vacuum dust from air return vents. Lubricate the blower motor following the instructions in the furnace's owner's guide.

Check weather stripping around doors and windows and repair or replace any cracked or faulty stripping. Don't forget stripping around garage doors and the door from the garage into your house, as these areas can be major heat drains for your home.

3. Lighting -- Once you're done with the two projects above, replace those incandescent light bulbs with ENERGY STAR qualified bulbs -- like compact fluorescent light bulbs -- to decrease the amount of electricity you use for lighting as much as 75 percent. It's a simple task to go through your home and replace light bulbs.

Although energy efficient styles may cost more, they last longer than incandescent bulbs and conserve so much energy that they quickly pay for themselves. Each bulb will save you about $30 over its lifetime and produce 75 percent less heat than incandescent bulbs. ENERGY STAR recommends replacing the most-used bulbs in your home first, such as overhead lights in the kitchen, table and floor lamps in the living or family room, and outdoor porch or post lamps.

For more GIY home improvement ideas, visit www.energystar.gov.

Around the World to Wollaston
by Bob and Shari

After returning from the Peace Corp, we wanted to start our lives together in a home with a nice yard, near the T. At the time homebuyers, we didn't know where to begin, until we met our CENTURY 21 Annex Realty agent Steve Marston of a Peace Corp alumni event. He walked us through all the considerations of purchasing a home. We were thrilled to buy our first home in Wollaston three days after we were married.

North Quincy Hosts Quincy Friday At 7 P.M.

Transition Year For Red Raiders

By SEAN BRENNAN

A year removed from one, if not the best season ever for a North Quincy boys' basketball team, the 2009 Red Raiders, this winter, are in a state of transition.

Last year's team finished with a 16-8 record and included among its achievements a championship win in the annual Vin Moscardelli Tournament and a second place finish in the Atlantic Coast League. The Raiders also made the Division 1 South Sectional tournament and won the program's first postseason game since the 1991 season: a 76-69 victory over Bridgewater-Raynham HS. The dream season ended with a 74-45 loss at the hands of Framingham HS in the quarterfinals.

The team's success last year came with a hefty price. North graduated nine seniors off the 2008 roster, and that makes head coach Kevin Barrett's job this year a little more difficult. His team currently is holding a 1-3 overall record and 0-3 mark in the Patriot League.

"We are off to a slow start this season," said Barrett. "It is a young and inexperienced team. Last year's success came with a price, but we are excited about this group and we have been competitive in every game so far this season."

"There is no doubt that

we are getting better each game. That is what we are trying to preach to the team: to get better week-by-week. The kids are onboard and we have the pieces to be a good team moving forward."

Barrett will be leaning on his senior class to help provide that experience that moved on last spring. Senior captains Tim Stille (forward) and Andy Ng (guard) are joined on the roster by fellow seniors RJ Barden (forward), Jonathan Coates (forward) and Joe Edgerly (forward).

"Timmy as one of the captains is our go-to-guy," added Barrett. "And the rest of the senior class is very athletic. They have been doing a great job."

Junior Mike Stanton, an All-League quarterback for the Raiders, is another player to keep an eye on as the season reaches January and February.

"Mike played on the jayvee team last year and is going to be a big part of our success this season and next," said Barrett. "For most of the underclassmen, this is their first crack playing at the varsity level. It takes some time to adjust and adapt to the speed of the game. They are starting to get it."

Juniors Matt Jayne, Chris Delaney, Larry Liuzzo, Terrance Staley and Luis Valentin join Stanton on the roster this season. Sophomore Mike Morrison and freshman Matt Costa should also see playing time this winter.

The transition from an experienced senior-laden team to a younger less experienced squad is not the only difference this year for North Quincy. The Raiders have switched leagues from the ACL to the Patriot League. NQ is now playing in the PL's Fisher Division against teams from Hanover, Middleboro, Rockland, Pembroke and Randolph High Schools.

"There has been a little adjustment in changing leagues but it hasn't been that different," said Barrett. "The best part of the new schedule is the travel. Our fans are some of the best around and they travel well. We are seeing bigger crowds on the road and it will be exciting building some new rivalries within the Patriot League."

North was scheduled to play against Middleboro HS Tuesday night and will host Quincy High School on Friday in the NQHS Gym at 7 p.m.

Note: The Raiders only win of the season, thus far, was a non-league victory over Sharon HS.

her second of the game after receiving a pass from Laura O'Donnell and Christina Walsh.

With Westwood applying the pressure in the third and final period, Newcomb quickly ended any hope of a comeback. Walsh and Brenna Morrissey found her open in the Westwood zone and she buried her third goal of the contest for the 3-1 lead. Newcomb's hat trick finished off Westwood and the game ended in a 3-1 victory for Q-NQ.

The defense continued to play outstanding, holding Westwood to only 23 shots on Coleman.

Quincy Wins 2 Of First 3 Games

Good Start For Presidents

The Quincy Presidents, under the direction of first-year head coach David Parry, have opened the 2009 basketball season by winning two out of three games; a good start to a season that should see Quincy back in the postseason at schedule's end.

The Presidents have already knocked off Silver Lake (Dec. 22) and Nauset (Dec. 27) High Schools after losing the season opener to Scituate HS (Dec. 16).

"We are optimistic about what we can do as a team this year," said Parry. "The team has been working hard in practice and the results have been positive the last two games."

"We like to play hard on the defensive end and we like to run on offense. It is a fun way for us to play. With some talented seniors on the roster and a bunch of younger players just learning how to play at the varsity level we should only get better as the season progresses."

Parry, who took over for Bob Fisher in the fall, had been the Quincy jayvee coach for the past four years and is a well-known figure on the local basketball scene (he is a founder of the Lady Presidents travel team). A 1980 graduate of Quincy High School and an alumni of Northeastern University, Parry had some familiarity with many of the players on his team through the jayvee program and as a 20-year veteran of the youth programs, and his team has responded under his guidance this winter.

"I have coached some of these kids in the past and the transition has been smooth so far," he said. "We are still a work in progress but the team is on the right track."

Quincy, a member of the Atlantic Coast League for many years, is now a member of the Patriot League. With this change comes new competition and challenges, but for Parry and his staff, the door is still open to do some damage and make their mark.

"Every night the Patriot League is tough," he added. "It seems early in the season that teams are knocking each other off. The winner of our division (Keenan) could end up with a 10-6 or 9-7 record. At the moment Duxbury HS is the team everyone is chasing, but the league is wide open."

Parry inherited a roster that includes five seniors and three juniors to go along with five sophomores and one freshman.

Mr. Everything Doug Scott heads the senior class. Scott, who at press time was 46 points away from being the all-time leading scorer in QHS history, is averaging 29 points per game this season and according to Parry has not even played his best game. A scary thought for the rest of the Patriot League.

"Doug is a player that can do almost anything with the basketball on offense. And he has not even played his best game yet this winter. He is one of five seniors that we will be leaning on this season."

Fellow seniors John Parry (team captain with Scott), Victor Otoadese, Andrew Papipe and Anthony Raddatz round out an impressive and productive 12th grade class.

"We are blessed with some great senior leadership," said Parry. "Raddatz is just such an athlete and has been vital in keeping the ball alive and the rest of the seniors are also playing well."

Junior Kenny Nguyen, a fantastic football player, has provided Parry with a defensive stopper.

"Kenny is our best defender," stated Parry. "He is always playing against the other team's best offensive player and he has been solid."

Adusei Kusi and Allen Rand are the other juniors on the Presidents' roster this season.

The rest of the roster includes sophomores Lukas McDonough, Kevin McDonough, Brian Malger, Seth Pullum and Brendan Myers and 6'-0" freshman Reggie Cesar.

"We are getting into the meat of our league schedule so we should be able to see how we match up with some of the better basketball teams in the league," said Parry. "As the team gets more familiar with each other and the coaching staff wins should keep coming. The team is gelling right now and that is good to see this early in the year."

Jim Quigley is the new jayvee coach this year and Roger Bacchien is coaching the freshmen team. Volunteer assistant coaches Kevin O'Connell, Matt Rampoin, Mike Quigley, Andy Myers and Bob Ullar are assisting Parry.

The Presidents were scheduled to play a road game against Whitman-Hanson HS on Monday and are playing tonight (Wed.) at home versus Hingham HS (6:30 p.m.). The first of two games against North Quincy will be played Friday night at 7 p.m. in the NQHS Gym.

Notes: Quincy plays in the Patriot League's Keenan Division. This division includes teams from Duxbury, Silver Lake, Scituate, Hingham and W-H High Schools. The Presidents finished last year with a 14-9 overall record, losing to Catholic Memorial in the Div. II quarterfinals.

Quincy-North Wins First Four Games

The hottest team in Quincy right now is the combined Quincy-North Quincy girls' ice hockey team.

Heading into tonight's (Wed.) tilt against Whitman-Hanson High School, Q-NQ holds a perfect 4-0 record, with wins over Medfield HS (two victories), Marshfield HS and Westwood HS.

"We are a really great team with a lot of depth," said first-year head coach Kelli Doolin. "We are improving and getting better each game and that is what you want to see as a coach."

"The depth we have is all over; on offense and defense. We have started off real strong and the girls have bought into the team concept and it is working. This year's team is young, which means they all will only be getting stronger. And that is a good sign for the program."

Against Westwood last Saturday, Q-NQ fell behind

Girls' Ice Hockey

1-0 early in the first period, but after allowing that score, the defense bore down. The defensive combinations of Anna Bythrow and Brenna Morrissey, Paige Keenan and Colleen Grady and eighth graders Katie and Meghan White allowed only eight shots the rest of the period; helping to keep the pressure off sophomore goalie Shannon Coleman.

In the second period, the Q-NQ team came out skating hard, but a penalty forced them to play short-handed. The penalty kill unit came up huge. Junior Colleen Newcomb intercepted a pass and broke in alone on a breakaway. Newcomb's shorthanded tally tied the score at 1-1.

Q-NQ took their first lead of the game later in the period when Newcomb scored

New year. Same results.

Coming into the season, the North Quincy Red Raiders were hoping to build off last year's successful campaign (15-6 overall record and a trip to the South Sectionals), but there were concerns about turnover on the roster and a change in leagues (from the Atlantic Coast League to the Patriot League). Concerns, what concerns?

The Raiders (4-1 overall, 2-1 in the Patriot League) stormed out of the gate on a four-game winning streak (before dropping a 64-57 decision to Rockland on Jan. 2): included in this run were two wins over Patriot League foes (a 55-41 victory over Pembroke and a 56-34 win over Randolph) and two wins, including in the championship game, in the Notre Dame Holiday Tournament.

At the onset of the season, head coach Michael Jorgenson had expressed a hope that this year's team would be able to recapture some of the chemistry from last year's team. And so far this winter, team chemistry has come together quickly. Behind the leadership and play of seniors Siobhan Carnell, Kathleen Lynch and Catherine O'Connell, the Raiders have transitioned themselves into one of the top teams on the South Shore and a team to beat in the competitive Patriot League.

The play of Carnell, Lynch and O'Connell helped to bring a holiday championship to North Quincy. Playing in the annual Notre Dame Holiday Tournament over the school vacation, North edged by Natick HS, 58-56, in the first-round and defeated Weymouth HS, 47-42, in the championship game.

Against Weymouth, the Raiders got 16 points and 7 rebounds from Carnell, 11 points and 6 steals from Lynch and 9 points and 8 rebounds from O'Connell to eek out the five-point victory.

The Wildcats had entered the championship game against the Raiders posting an impressive 4-0 record. But North would not be denied.

In the first round game, the Raiders survived Natick, 58-56. Carnell led all scores with 23 points (to go along with 9 rebounds). O'Connell chipped in with another double double (16 points, 12 rebounds) and Lynch finished with 10 points and 7 steals.

North Quincy opened their Patriot League schedule with a convincing 55-41 victory over Pembroke HS (Dec. 16) and followed that win with a 56-34 trouncing of Randolph HS on Dec. 22. Carnell was the number one star against the Bulldogs, scoring a game-high 24 points.

Last Friday (Jan. 2), the Red Raiders lost its first game of the season to Rockland HS, 64-57. Carnell was once again the top performer, scoring 18 points and dishing out three assists. O'Connell (16 points, 16 rebounds) and senior Jessie Howlett (13 points, 4 steals) had big games for North Quincy.

North Quincy played a non-league game Monday night versus Brockton HS and a Patriot League game Tuesday night versus Middleboro. The team is scheduled to play Quincy HS on Friday at 5:30 p.m. in the NQHS gymnasium.

Quincy Youth Basketball Tips Off New Season

The Quincy Youth Basketball opened its 2008-09 season with a slate of games late last month. The following results are from games between boys Grades 3-8 and girls Grades 3-5.

Game Results:

Boys Grades 3-5

men) are going to be here for another few years and they are exciting to watch.

"With eight eighth graders on the team the future looks bright for this program. And our seniors have provided experience and leadership. It is all coming together."

The 24 players on the team are made up of three seniors, six juniors, three sophomores, four freshmen and eight eighth graders from NQ and Quincy High Schools and Atlantic and Central Middle Schools.

The roster includes seniors Lauren Brooks, Meg Gillespie and Brenna Morrissey, all of North Quincy, juniors Anna Bythrow and Colleen Grady, both of Quincy, Paige Keenan, Alex Meighan, Colleen Newcomb and Laura O'Donnell, of North Quincy, sophomores Shannon Coleman and Rebecca Seviour, both of North Quincy, Jamie Shaughnessy of Quincy and freshman Colleen Cox and Presley McLaughlin of NQ and Blair Hajjar and Christina Walsh of Quincy.

Eighth graders Colleen

Belotti and Loren Miller (Atlantic) and Erin McGinnis, Briana Mullaney, Danielle Mullaney, Leah Ryan and Kate and Meghan White (Central) round off the 2009 roster.

Doolin and assistant Danielle Campbell coach the team.

The team is scheduled to play Sandwich HS on the Cape this Saturday (6 p.m.) before heading back to the Quincy Youth Arena to host Martha's Vineyard HS (Jan. 12, 3 p.m.) and Marshfield HS (Jan. 14, 6 p.m.).

New Insight Into The Cause of Migraine May Lead To Relief For Many

(ARA) - When is a headache more than just a headache? Unfortunately, for the 35 million Americans that suffer from migraines, that pounding headache can interfere with their daily routine, affect personal relationships and reduce work productivity. According to an August 2008 survey from the National Headache Foundation, 78 percent of migraine sufferers reported missing work due to their migraine pain or other associated symptoms.

Migraine is a debilitating disorder that affects more than 12 percent of the adult population in the United States. It is more common in women but men also can suffer. Most commonly experienced between the ages of 15 and 55, migraines are characterized by attacks of intense, sometimes one-sided, throbbing head pain that can last from four hours to three days if untreated.

The headache of migraine is frequently accompanied by other symptoms, including nausea, vomiting and increased sensitivity to light and sound.

The good news is researchers now know more than ever about the biology of migraine. For many years, the pain and associated symptoms of migraine were thought to be caused by problems in brain blood vessels. But over the past 15 years, research has begun to change our understanding of the causes of migraine. New studies suggest that migraine may instead be a disorder of the nervous system. Certain small chemical messengers in the brain, including one known as calcitonin gene related peptide (CGRP), have been identified as potential mediators of migraine pain. New research is providing insight into the cause of migraine.

Understanding the science of migraine is key to developing new therapies to help relieve the pain and symptoms of these debilitating headaches. Having a variety of therapeutic options is especially important for migraine sufferers since the symptoms and management of each individual's migraines can vary. As such, it is important that migraine sufferers remain in continual dialogue with their doctors to discuss available treatment options and make sure they are taking the right medication to meet their needs. Patients may need to try several approaches to find the one that works best.

Visit the National Headache Foundation at www.headache.org to learn more about migraines.

SEALING FATE

Tooth sealants consist of a clear or whitish plastic material that is applied to the chewing surfaces of the back teeth. Applied to children's teeth as a preventive measure, these protective coatings act as barriers, shielding the teeth from the plaque and acid that can lead to cavities. Children are prime candidates to have their permanent molars sealed. It is also occasionally recommended that primary (baby) molars be sealed because they play such an important role in maintaining space for the permanent teeth. Adults are also good candidates for sealants, especially if they are at high risk for decay due to chewing surfaces with pits and fissures, inherited dental factors, or limited ability to brush and floss. Applying a sealant is a simple and painless process.

Sealants can protect the teeth from decay for up to 10 years, but they need to be checked for chipping or wearing at regular dental check-ups. We are always happy to answer any questions you may have about dental concerns, including sealants. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're offering you the latest techniques to give you a great appearance. We believe in preventive dental care. If you would like more information, or to schedule an appointment, please call 617-479-6220. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Someone once said that conscience is the fellow who sits on the throne of your soul and calls out the danger signal when your life craft sights icebergs. Conscience is the pilot of a man's hope toward success. Conscience is the pilot of a man's hope toward success. Conscience is the busy signal that halts a man just as he is about to do what he ought not to but wants to...

The choice which conscience imposes upon us is often hard to endure. It is easy to do evil and frequently very hard to do right. No matter what effort or self-deception is made, sooner or later the inner conflict of conscience must be faced.

A troubled conscience is not always convenient, but it is often the only element in life which absolutely guarantees rescue from despair. Sometimes conscience speaks in a whisper...at other times it yells loud and clear...

"Cowardice asks, Is it safe? Expediency asks, Is it politic? Vanity asks, Is it popular? but Conscience asks, Is it right?"

Tanglewood Marionettes To Perform Chinese Folktale At Christ Church Jan. 19

Tanglewood Marionettes will perform the Chinese folktale "The Dragon King" on Martin Luther King Day, Monday, Jan. 19 at 11 a.m. at Christ Church, 12 Quincy Ave., Quincy Center.

The Dragon King is a marionette-based underwater fantasy adapted from Chinese folklore. The show features an intrepid Grandmother who journeys to the bottom of the sea to seek the Dragon King, ruler of all things water, for the answers as to why he has forsaken the land above to a long and terrible drought.

Those planning to attend are encouraged to advise the church how many they intend to bring to this performance via the event registration link on the website: www.ChristChurchQuincy.org or by calling 617-773-0310.

The event is sponsored by Christ Church Quincy and The Office of Congregational Development, The Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

Cub Scout Pack 42 Busy During The Holiday Season

Cub Scouts from Pack 42 in Quincy donated hats, mittens, and gloves at their December Pack meeting.

Scout families decorated the Pack's annual "Mitten Tree," and then the items were given to area shelters for distribution to those local residents in need of winter outerwear.

Cub Scouts and their families gathered together to spread some holiday cheer by serenading residents of Hancock Park with a selection of holiday songs and Christmas Carols.

Scouts are also participating in Quincy's Evergreen Program. Families are returning their real Christmas trees to be made into mulch, and receiving coupons for evergreen saplings to be redeemed in April and then planted locally.

Comedy Night To Benefit Youngster With Pediatric Cancer Friday

Five nationally-known area comedians will come together to raise money for a 14-month-old girl who has been diagnosed with pediatric cancer, specifically Neuroblastoma, age the age of two months.

The benefit, called "Comics for a Cure," will be held Friday, Jan. 9 at the Cutler Majestic Theatre in Boston.

The benefit was conceived by Tracy Harding, a 26-year-old Quincy resident and the aunt of the little girl fighting pediatric cancer.

"I can't even begin to understand what the journey is like for all parents of children with pediatric cancer, or for the children, survivors and angels of this disease - I won't pretend that I do," said Harding. "I created this event for them, as well as the amazing nurses, doctors, hospice workers, etc. that made the choice to work with these children.

"My hope," Harding said, "is that 'Comics for a Cure' will raise awareness, much needed funds and be an awesome night of comedy for this very deserving group."

The line-up of comedians includes event host Joe List, Nick DiPaolo, Guy Gulman, Kevin Knox and Kelly MacFarland.

Event proceeds will benefit the Children's Neuroblastoma Cancer Foundation, an organization dedicated to funding research and clinical trials as well as educating and supporting families who have been affected by this deadly disease.

Tickets for "Comics for a Cure" are on sale through www.comicsforacure.org or by calling Telecharge at 800-233-3123.

For more information, as well as details on sponsorships for the evening, e-mail info@comicsforacure.org.

Quincy Community Action Programs Homebuyer Workshop Starts Jan. 12

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will hold three-session, First Time Homebuyer Workshop in Quincy on Monday, Jan. 12, Wednesday, Jan. 14 and Wednesday, Jan. 21.

The public is invited to attend the workshop to learn about buying a home.

The workshop, which is free, is open to everyone regardless of income, credit ratings, or downpayment availability.

The workshop will be held in the fourth floor conference room at 1509 Hancock St. in Quincy Center, from 5:45 to 9 p.m.

Participants must attend all sessions in order to receive a certificate of attendance.

Workshop speakers are professionals whom are in the different real estate fields. Participants receive a workbook, which contains valuable references that pertain to home buying. Upon completion of the course participants will receive a certificate, which is a prerequisite for down-payment closing cost assistance, favorable soft second and Mass Housing mortgages.

Registration is required. For more information on this workshop or future workshops contact QCAP at 617-479-8181.

Milton Hospital Auxiliary Hold Gift Shop Grand Opening

Milton Hospital recently held the grand opening of its new gift shop.

The event celebrated the shop's beautiful new location on the hospital's remodeled first floor, adjacent to the new Highland Lobby. Eager customers filled the shop and lined up to take advantage of grand opening sale prices.

Employees, volunteers, Auxiliaries and visitors enjoyed refreshments, including a chocolate fountain and a display of fruit, cheeses and cider. Hospital President Joseph Morrissey and Gift Shop Manager Ellen Shea offered a few words during the official ribbon cutting.

"The gift shop represents the end of nearly five years of construction at Milton Hospital," Morrissey said. "While renovations will continue in our operating rooms and laboratory behind the scenes, the majority of expansion and renovation project is complete."

The recent project resulted in a new and expanded emergency department, surgical services area, dedicated Endoscopy Center, new lobby, a parking deck and overall improvements to patient convenience, comfort and confidentiality.

"The new Gift Shop is bright and beautiful, a vast improvement over the shop of the late 1970's," said Gift Shop Manager Ellen Shea. "The gift shop offers a wide variety and price range of unique gifts, toys, jewelry, cards and candy. The very popular Vera Bradley bags and accessories and Byers Carollers collectable figures are featured."

Gift shop hours are Monday through Friday,

10am to 7pm, and Sundays 1pm to 3pm. Run entirely by the hospital's volunteers, the gift shop donates all annual profits to Milton Hospital's Development Fund, earmarked specifically for purchases that enhance patient care and comfort.

Milton Hospital provides community-based health care to people of all ages in Milton, Quincy, Braintree, Randolph, Canton, Hyde Park, Dorchester and other local communities. Services include general medical and surgical inpatient care, a complete complement of outpatient health services and 24-hour emergency services.

Pennies Count

With belts tightening everywhere, it's more important than ever to look for ways to save money. Pennies count, and you can hold on to many of them if you surround yourself with a network of money-saving opportunities and make it a way of life.

• Get involved in a food-supply group. Angel Food Ministries [www.angelfoodministries.com], for example, makes bulk purchases of food and has distribution points in 38 states. The cost of the food is very low. Often the program is run by local churches, but there are no qualification requirements. Once a month, orders are taken and the food delivered to a central location. If there is no distribution group near you, look into starting one.

• Look for other low-cost food distribution groups in your area. Do an Internet search for "low cost food" and put in your town and state.

• On FreeCycle [www.freecycle.org], you can ask for what you need and give away what you don't need. Areas are broken down by ZIP code across the country. The generosity of many people in this group is unsurpassed. Don't be afraid to ask for things.

• Check the craigslist

[www.craigslist.org] Free section for your area before spending money. Lots of useful items are being given away all the time.

• Do it yourself, for everything possible. Need clothing altered, a roof repaired, oil in the car changed? Read up on it. There are manuals and how-to books for everything under the sun. If you can learn how to do a task, not only will you save yourself money, but you'll then have a skill that's valuable to others. Assess your skills and see what you might barter for things you need.

• Consider adopting a philosophy of voluntary simplicity where less is more. Voluntary simplicity can put a whole new face on a tight budget. Instead of feeling pressure about what you can't buy, in a simpler lifestyle you won't want extras cluttering your life. The less stuff you buy, the less you have to take care of and the more money you keep in your pocket.

Bottom line: Become extremely proprietary about your cash. Take a hard look at each and every situation in which you might spend money. Make every penny count.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It's a good time to take a much-needed break from your recent hectic schedule and spend some time in quieter surroundings. Important news could arrive early next week.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Taurean traits of reliability and thoroughness could be well-tested when decision-makers consider your proposals and/or requests. Be prepared to answer some probing questions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A sudden attack of boredom leaves you with some tasks undone. It's OK to take a short respite. But get back to work by week's end so that you have time for other projects.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid prejudging a situation just because it looks bad. Facts could emerge that would make your position uncomfortable, to say the least. A relative has interesting news to share with you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time to begin reassessing some of your recent decisions about your long-range goals to see if they still have merit. Spend more time with loved ones this weekend.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An unsettled situation at home or on the job early in the week could drain your energy levels, making it difficult to get your work done on schedule. But things improve by mid-week.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A temporary setback could give you time to go over your plans to find weaknesses you might have overlooked before. A romantic getaway with that special person is favored this weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Professional and personal situations benefit once you set a positive tone in getting things off to a good start. Honest dialogue smooths over any occasional display of balkiness.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A problem with workplace colleagues or family members seems to defy even your sage counsel. But be patient. Your words will eventually lead to a resolution.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't just wait out that unexpected and unexplained delay in your career move. You could gain added respect if you ask why it happened and what you can do to move things along.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Although your workplace strategies usually are accepted, you could be challenged by someone who isn't so favorably impressed. Be prepared to defend your positions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your friendship circle expands, with new people coming into your life at this time. Welcome them warmly. But don't neglect those cherished longtime personal relationships.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to search for knowledge and share it with others. You would make an especially fine teacher.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

"People want to live in our city and that is a good thing. However, the commercial tax base has not sustained similar growth.

"To ease the burden on residential taxpayers, we must commit to aggressively pursue business for our city. We cannot wait for business to come to us; we must go get the business. Lowe's is a good start, but Lowe's and BJ's is even better."

Davis said likening government to business is "a cliché . . . not often doable" but "like a business the city must look to ways to save homeowners money with their utilities."

"Quincy residents have only one option for cable,"

he said. "I will ask the City Council to hold hearings aimed at attracting more cable options for city residents. The increased competition will save residents' money.

"As does alternative energy and increased recycling. If you do not use a barrel for single stream recycling, call the DPW and get your blue recycling sticker. Do away with the bin and use a barrel. Your participation saves money."

Davis also used his talk to reiterate his call for a four-year term for Quincy's mayor, who serves only two years now.

"Two years is too short," he said. "The mayor of the city of Quincy must be able to establish long-term policies and programs that are in the city's best interest. It is time for Quincy to join Boston, Braintree and Weymouth and have a four-year term for the mayor."

Davis noted that in a matter of days Quincy High School students will be walking the corridors of a new building. A site for a new Central Middle School will be known by the end of the year. And the city will save millions in the state's group insurance plan.

"2009 will be a year of tough choices," he said. "As elected officials we make mistakes and we are not perfect. However, I guarantee you that no one works harder for our city than Mayor Koch and his staff, the city councillors and the members of the School Committee."

"I can promise you that we will use our intelligence, experience and knowledge to make the best decisions for Quincy."

Community Preservation Committee To Hold Public Meeting Tonight

The City of Quincy's Preservation Committee (CPC) will be holding a public meeting in the Council Chambers in City Hall tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m.

The purpose of the meeting will be to elicit feedback and suggestions from Quincy residents regarding the Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds. The Massachusetts' state law mandates that CPC's around the state work to encourage dialogue about how this money is spent each year.

The meeting on Jan. 8 will be an opportunity for Quincy residents to weigh in on how CPA money has been spent so far and recommend ways to spend it in the future.

Quincy voters adopted the CPA in November of 2006. Since that time over $6.5 million of taxpayer money has been spent or bonded. This money went to buy over 18 acres of land for open space, help to create or rehabilitate affordable housing units, improve recreational facilities and to restore historic sites.

For example, $3.3 million went to buy 13 acres of land to expand Faxon Park. In North Quincy, $220,000 went to assist in the creation of several affordable rental units. The Church of the Presidents will be getting its belfry rehabilitated.

This year there will likely be about $1.5 million available in new funding for CPA spending. The first $900,000 will pay down the debt on the bond, leaving about $600,000 to allocate towards open space preservation, affordable housing, recreational park expansions, or historic site restoration.

Applications are available at the City Solicitor's office or on the City's web-

Fatal Crash Still Under Investigation

Thousands Of Firefighters Here In Tribute To Lt. Kevin Kelley

By TOM HENSHAW

Thousands of firefighters from cities, towns and hamlets across the country gathered in Quincy this week to bid farewell to Lt. Kevin M. Kelley of Wollaston, the Boston firefighter who died a hero when the fire truck he was riding careened into a brick building in Mission Hill.

Funeral mass was to have been celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church in Wollaston with burial in Cedar Grove Cemetery in Boston. Visiting hours were Tuesday in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Kelley, a 30-year veteran of the Boston Fire Department, was riding on Ladder 26, based at the Huntington Avenue Station, returning from a routine medical call, Friday when the truck went out of control on a steep hill and crashed into an apartment building.

Paul Moody, vice president of the Quincy Firefighters Union, said about 5,000 firefighters from across the country were expected to make the sad trek Tuesday and Wednesday to Quincy for the traditional farewell to a fallen brother.

"They were coming from New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio," he said, "and some have called Boston from as far away as California."

The MBTA donated 30 buses to carry the visiting firefighters to Merrymount Parkway in Quincy from the Bayside Expo Center in Boston, leaving at 8:30 a.m.

for the 10 a.m. Wednesday services at St. Ann's.

The visitors were to form the traditional "Sea of Blue" at Merrymount Parkway near Veterans Memorial Sta-

48,655 City Census Forms In Mail

City census forms went out to 48,655 households yesterday (Wednesday) to determine the number of people living in Quincy in 2009 and how many are eligible to vote.

The 2008 census pegged the population at 91,750. The last federal census in 2000 found 88,231 residents in the city.

Respondents are being asked their names, birthdates, nationalities, citizenship status, if they have any dogs and whether or not they are veterans.

The City Clerk's office would like to have the forms back in 10 days.

For Public Projects Koch Seeks $125M Stimulus In Obama Plan

Mayor Thomas Koch is seeking $125 million in federal funding for public projects as part of the anticipated economic stimulus program planned by President-elect Barack Obama.

The Koch administration has delivered request and project lists to Lt. Gov. Timothy Murray, as requested by state officials, and the mayor is expected to meet with Congressman William Delahunt to discuss the proposal later this week.

"There are no guarantees but we are all working hard to ensure that Quincy is prepared for any opportunities presented to us, especially our team, the City Council, our state delegation and Congressman Delahunt," Koch said.

The list is broken into three parts, with $125 million set aside for "shovel-ready" projects that can be ready for public bid within 180 days. Those projects range from long-standing infrastructure needs to driv-

C Mart, Medical Center Public Hearings Jan. 20

City councillors have a full agenda Tuesday, Jan. 20, when members meet for the first time since the holiday break. The meeting will be held in City Hall.

Members are meeting Tuesday due to the Martin Luther King holiday on their regular meeting date.

The major issue on the council's agenda is a review of the municipal audit conducted by the Wakefield firm of Powers and Sullivan, an independent firm that specializes in municipal finance.

Prior to the council meeting, committees will consider the Furnace Brook Off-ramp at 6 p.m., reconvene the public hearing on C Mart at 6:30 p.m., and open a public hearing on a proposal for a Special Permit by Quincy Medical Center.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said the council will likely close the public hearing on C Mart Tuesday and consider a report on Hancock Street traffic prepared by Traffic Engineer Jack Gillan.

McNamee does not expect any further action on Tuesday on the Special Permit request for the Asian supermarket on Hayward Street in North Quincy.

As many as 500 persons have attended past council discussions of the supermarket issue.

A developer, C-Mart Supermarket II, Inc., has filed the application for a 23,000-sq. ft. supermarket, food court and restaurant at 10 Hayward Street in North Quincy.

Councillors will also consider a request by Quincy Medical Center for a Special Permit for a $2.5 to $3 million boiler plant conversion project.

The power plant conversion upgrade will increase efficiency and reduce fuel consumption, allowing for both oil and gas fuel as alternatives, according to Sandra McGunigle, spokesperson for the medical center.

As for the effect on the neighborhood, McGunigle estimates that the conversion project will reduce annual fuel deliveries from 66 to three a year and the two 1952 boilers will be shut down and decommissioned.

The project should be completed in 2009, according to McGunigle.

THE QUINCY SENIOR CENTER located in this 16,000 sq. ft. building on East Squantum Street at Quincy Shore Drive will open in the spring and offer a variety of services and programs, according to Council on Aging Director Thomas Clasby. The former Myles Standish School and Beechwood Community Center were located in the building which is currently undergoing $1.3 million in renovations and repairs. Once completed, the building will also be equipped with generators and serve as a disaster emergency center.

Spring Opening Planned

Senior Center Plans Draw Praise, Concerns

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor Thomas Koch will open the city's senior center in the spring, according to Helen Murphy, Director of Operations, who updated the City Council's Senior Citizens Committee on the project Monday.

Murphy and architect Jim Edwards of Holmes and Edwards, Inc. outlined the $1.5 million in repairs and renovations underway at the former Myles Standish School on East Squantum St., North Quincy.

"We're making steady progress," Murphy said in her opening remarks, predicting "a grand opening in the spring."

"The time has come for us to have a place of our own," said Thomas Clasby, Executive Director of the Council on Aging.

Clasby, then, described the new 16,000 square foot center as suited for seniors with exercise space, a computer lab, and classrooms for seminars, and access to walking paths and Wollaston Beach.

While councillors praised plans for the project, several questioned using funds from a 2007 capital improvement bond to cover $1.2 million of the $1.3 million in repairs and renovations and they, unsuccessfully, sought definitive long-term costs for operating the center.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi is chairman of the committee with members Councillors Joseph Finn, Douglas Gutro, Ward 5, Brian McNamee, Ward 6, and Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly who was absent.

Also attending the meeting were Councillors John Keenan and Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3.

Finn and Gutro, also, criticized the repeated statement by administrators that the center would be "at no cost" to the taxpayer.

The building, previously used by the private non-profit Beechwood On the Bay community center was at "a level of disrepair beyond what we expected," said Murphy.

However, Murphy told councillors there would be no cost to taxpayers for renovations of the former Myles Standish as the funding was in place for the project.

Murphy outlined the funding sources including $1.2 million from a Capital Improvement bond approved Feb. 20, 2007 in the Phelan administration, and $150,000 each in grants from the state and a community development block grant.

Edwards described the building as structurally sound but in need of serious repair, new windows, sashes, insulation, wiring, lighting, alarms and a heating and ventilation system that will make the building "incredibly more energy efficient," safe and accessible for seniors.

Challenges Taken To Two Courts

City To Fight State's Ruling On Billboard

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Billboard foes last week lost Round 1 in their bid to have a controversial 80-foot West Quincy billboard dismantled, but they are counting on future court challenges for success.

Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday that the city's efforts to remove the billboard will continue despite a state board's 3-0 ruling against the city on Jan. 8.

"This part of the process is only one part of the fight to do the right thing and remove this billboard, and we are looking forward to making the City's case in court," Koch said, referring to last week's rejection of the city's case by the three-member Outdoor Advertising Division of MassHighway.

City Solicitor James Timmins said the billboard case will be heard in both Land Court and Norfolk County Superior Court and city officials will continue their efforts to have it removed despite the state board's decision.

The Outdoor Advertising Board has the power to permit or reject a billboard in the state.

After a billboard is approved on a municipal level, the state board must approve the location, and must issue a permit stating the billboard board meets state requirements. The permits must be renewed on an annual basis.

The state renewed the permit for the billboard in August, but reconsidered its decision in October.

On Oct. 29, Edward Farley, the board's Executive Director, informed all parties that the state board would hold the Dec. 11 hearing on the single issue prohibiting billboards within 300 feet of park land or open space.

City councillors John Keenan and Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2, both attended the hearing as did dozens of area residents.

Keenan called the Dec. 11 meeting a "Battle of the Maps" and said the city clearly proved its case, namely that the billboard is located within 300 feet of parkland in violation of state law.

"I disagree with the decision," said Keenan Monday, adding that the "billboard's own attorneys basically acknowledged" that the distance between the open space and the billboard was less than 300 feet.

Keenan said the attorneys for Boston Outdoor Ventures, LLC, agreed on the distance, but then "tried to claim it wasn't accessible (parkland). I've taken my children there."

Raymondi said he was not surprised by the decision and characterized the three board members as disinterested at the hearing, falling asleep.

Raymondi believes the Advertising Board ordered hearing "just to cover the Commonwealth's liability on the issue."

City Council President Jay Davis did not attend the state hearing, but said Monday that he always believed the issue will be decided in court.

The Zoning Board of Appeals will hold a hearing on the issue Tuesday after the Quincy Sun deadline.

Currently the billboard is advertising ING DIRECT savings.

BU Dean Of Students Guest Speaker

Martin Luther King, Jr. To Be Honored At NQHS Breakfast Jan. 19

The City of Quincy Human Rights Commission will celebrate the birth, life and work of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., with its 13th annual breakfast Monday, Jan. 19, and before the historic inauguration of Barack Obama, the nation's first African-American President.

The breakfast, from 9 to 11 a.m., will take place at North Quincy High School's cafeteria. Those attending are asked to enter by the front door.

The speaker will be Dean Kenneth Elmore, Dean of Students, Boston University. His topic is "How Do We Get From Here to the Rest of the World?"

MARTIN LUTHER KING

This year's honorees are Jackie Chan, a community activist in the Quincy Asian community and Kathy Quigley, Director of the Germantown Neighborhood Center. Entertainment will include the Germantown Neighborhood Center Chorus and Allegra.

Tickets are $10 for adults and $6 for seniors (60 and above) and children (5 and under). They are available from Thomas Fabrizio, Director of Constituent Services at City Hall (617-376-1123) and Commission members.

Personal Thoughts On George W. Bush

I don't think I would want to be in Barack Obama's shoes next Tuesday.

And step into the mess George W. Bush has left him after his eight years in the White House.

I don't know how history will treat Bush but it definitely cannot ignore the Iraq War, which to many is known as "Bush's Blunder."

And there's the economic crisis with a 7.2% unemployment rate, the highest in 16 years. But there are a lot of people who can share the credit for that.

I voted for Bush first time around. Wanted to get as far away as possible from the Clinton-Lewinsky White House antics.

But I regretted that vote when he decided to invade Iraq.

He was gung-ho to get us there.

In March 2003 he ordered the attack and in his address to Congress and the American people focused on Saddam Hussein as a cruel villain and world threat.

A cruel villain he was but a world threat can be argued.

Actually Saddam was a next-door deterrent to Iran and one who could keep that nut cake, Ahmadinejad, a real world menace, in check.

But what turned out to be unreliable intelligence and even suspect back then-Bush told Congress and the people:

"The people of the United States and our friends and allies will not live at the mercy of an outlaw regime that threatens with weapons of mass murder."

No such weapons, of course, were ever found. Neither was any link between Saddam and 9/11, which incidentally happened on Bush's watch. Bush recently said he was sorry for the faulty intelligence.

So, it became "The War On Terrorism," after we got bogged down and the death toll steadily rose in Iraq.

Invading Iraq would be a slam-dunk, some said. The people will throw flowers at us for liberating them, Rumsfeld predicted.

Instead, we got suicide bombers and roadside bombs, which are still exploding today.

And then the ultimate embarrassment and insult.

The President of the United States ducking two shoes thrown at his head at a farewell press conference in Iraq.

Along with the shoes came angry, bitter words from the correspondent who threw them:

"This is a gift from the Iraqis, the farewell kiss, you dog... This is from the widows and orphans who were killed in Iraq."

SHINE Counsel At Aging Office

A SHINE counselor will be available Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Quincy Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., Quincy, to assist the elderly and adults with disabilities with health information and benefits.

SHINE is an acronym for Serving the Health Information Needs of Elders.

Call 617-376-1247 to make an appointment or to speak with a SHINE counselor.

Home visits can be arranged for shut-ins.

In the beginning it looked like invading Iraq might be a slam-dunk. Down came Saddam's statue. Boy, that was easy.

Just a couple of months later, Bush in flight jacket in the cockpit of a Navy plane, landed on the aircraft carrier Abraham Lincoln off the California coast.

And with a banner behind him, proclaiming "Mission Accomplished," he triumphantly declared "the end of major combat."

The end of major combat! A time to celebrate victory? Not exactly.

More than 4,000 American military personal have given their lives so far.

And more than 30,000 wounded.

Not little flesh wounds. But loss of arms and legs and severe mental wounds. Their lives and the lives of their families traumatically changed forever.

And the Iraqi civilian death toll is in the 10's of thousands and climbing.

Our men and women patriotically give it their all in harm's way every day. But will it actually ever end?

In two months we will have been in Iraq six years, longer than we were around the world in World War II.

Bush supporters point to us occupying Japan and Germany after that war. But it was for the transition to peace. Without the combat still going on in Iraq.

We are still trying to find a way to get out. The Iraqis are starting to want us out.

When-and if we do get out-there's a nagging question:

What did we really accomplish? The Iraqi democracy is shaky and could collapse. The people are fighting among themselves.

Was it worth the price we have paid in human lives and the billions and billions of dollars?

With Bush's stubborn cowboy diplomacy, we have lost respect in the world despite all of our generosity to countries in need. Many see us as the bully of the world.

How will history judge George W. Bush's eight years in the White House?

Time will tell.

He certainly wasn't a Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Harry Truman, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, Ronald Reagan. Or even his father, George H.W. Bush.

Barack Obama takes command next Tuesday. He has awesome challenges ahead. He's no magician with a magic wand. He needs a lot of help and encouragement. There will be disappointments.

Let's hope he has the right people around him to advise him and to find a way out of our economic disaster.

And bring our men and women back home from Iraq where they belong.

I didn't vote for Obama but I wish him well. For his sake and ours.

Say a prayer for him.

Make that more than one.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1926 view of the Granite Railway Company's compressor house and stone shed at the end of Mullin Avenue in West Quincy. The company was one of the largest, most important and longest running companies during Quincy's era as a granite producer. For many years the smokestack with the company's name, albeit broken in half, was a West Quincy landmark. It was clearly visible from the Southeast Expressway, which passes just a stone's throw from here. These buildings were located at the foot of the incline of America's first railroad that came down from the rim of the Granite Rail Quarry above. The large stone cutting shed on the left has long been demolished and its site along with much of the company's property here is now a residential subdivision. However the brick compressor house in the foreground, now with a second floor, still stands. For a while, several years ago, it was used as a home for a Quincy granite industry museum. It is now owned and used by the state's Department of Conservation and Recreation for storage. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Project Lifesaver Program Seeks Volunteers

Are you 55 or older and want to make difference in your community? Do you have experience in local law enforcement (police or fire), or in a local or state government agency or in a public safety organization? If so, we need you! We are looking for volunteers with (police, fire,) EMS, Council on Aging or nursing experience.

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Project Lifesaver Program uses advantage technology to locate missing persons with Alzheimer's or a related condition such as autism or Down syndrome who become lost or wander away from home.

Clients in this Program wear personalized wrist bands that emit unique tracking signals so that rescue teams can use mobile systems to pick up signals of the missing persons and help reunite them with their families.

The Sheriff's Office needs volunteers who can give about an hour of their time monthly to visit with clients in the Project Lifesaver Program and change their wrist bands and batteries in the communities of:

Franklin, Norwood, Quincy, Randolph, Sharon, Stoughton and Weymouth.

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Project Lifesaver Program will host a training session this month at the Sheriff's Office Safety Complex on Washington Street in Braintree.

READERS FORUM

Concerned Over Blue Cross Blue Shield, Tufts Medical Center Impasse

We are writing to express our concern regarding the impasses between Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts and Tufts Medical Center.

Tufts Medical Center has been and continues to provide culturally competent health care to Quincy's Asian population for many years in its location in the heart of Chinatown. It is very important to ensure that Tufts' compassionate and high quality care remains solidly in place to address well-documented health disparities faced by newcomer populations in Massachusetts.

Blue Cross Blue Shield of MA has documented and strongly supported efforts to reduce these disparities. Together, they bring to the Asian community resources for the greater good.

In the interests of our community, we urge both parties to reach a fair and equitable accommodation to ensure that Tufts Medical Center can continue to deliver to its patients - those at risk for disparities and otherwise - sustainable, high quality care.

Hedges Possible State Corrections Chief

By FRANK MCCAULEY

Norfolk County Sheriff Charles W. Hedges (R Quincy) was being mentioned as a possible successor to Corrections Commissioner George F. McGrath, if Governor John A. Volpe decides against reappointing the commissioner whose term expires in late January.

This Week
44 Years Ago

The reappointment for Hedges has been frequently discussed among county officials and on Beacon Hill, but was publicly discussed last night on WBZ's Newsmakers program by John Moran, executive secretary of the United Prisoners Association.

Moran said the new governor was under heavy political pressure to "dump" Commissioner McGrath, a Democrat who was appointed by Governor Foster Furcolo in 1957, and reappointed by Volpe in 1962 (Editor's note: It didn't happen.)

DECISION ON EXECUTIVE HOUSE FATE NEAR

Quincy officials are faced with a "turning point" decision, which will spell the difference between failure and success of high-rise apartment construction on the South Shore.

The developers proposed a 14-story, $3,190,000 apartment house at 1025 Hancock St. be built under terms of Chapter 121A of the State's General Laws. The chapter provides that the developer can enter into a 40-year contract for payment of taxes to the city.

Executive House developers propose to pay an annual tax of 15% of the gross income from the apartments. They say this will amount to a minimum of $50,000 per year or about 17 times what the site is now yielding in property taxes. (Editor's note: The project known as "The Executive House" was built.)

QUINCYISMS

Joseph A. Spillane, 3 Eaton Rd., Adams Shore, was selected to appear in Who's Who among students in American Universities and Colleges. Mrs. Joseph A. MacRitchie of Squantum was installed as president of the United Church Women (UCW) of Quincy at the annual meeting at the First Church of Squantum. Star Markets was offering "Face Rump, Top Round or Cube Steaks for 99 cents a pound". Police officers, firefighters and neighbors combined to rescue 12-year old James T. deVarennes of 43 Andrews Rd., Wollaston, who had fallen through thin ice at Sailors' Home Pond on Rice Rd., Wollaston. The Boston Bruins were firmly entrenched in the cellar of the six-team National Hockey League with a 9-24-4 record. Quincy High co-captains Dan Raymondi and Larry Kelcourse accepted the Quincy Fathers' Club John F. Kennedy Award. The award was presented to the team for attaining the best football record in the history of the school. Wollaston Federal Savings and Loan Association, 15 Beale St., Wollaston, urged parents "To Start Saving For Your Children's Education Now. Current Dividend 41 4/5% per annum". Henry J. McCaul, commander of the "Charles J. Cavanagh Disabled American Veterans Chapter," announced that nomination of officers for the coming year would be held at the Chapter meeting Jan. 20. "Topkapi" starring Melina Mercouri, Maximilian Schell and Peter Ustinov was playing at the Wollaston Theater, 12 Beale St. The Alumni Cafe, 706 Hancock St., Wollaston, was offering "Pizza-Ready-To-Go, 2 for $1". Capitol Supermarkets was offering "Fresh Frozen Orange Juice, Five 6 oz. Cans for $1". Mr. and Mrs. Louis Nannis, 12 Joan Drive, Quincy, were honored on the occasion of their 55th wedding anniversary at Congregation Adas Shalom. The couple has two sons, Robert and Harold. The Sons of Lebanon were planning their 32nd public installation of officers for January 30th at Montello's, 53 Mass Ave., Quincy Point. Atty. George Tull will succeed Anthony J. Isaac as president. Slides of the Vatican and the Ecumenical Council were shown by the Rev. William J. Donlon of the Most Blessed Sacrament Church at a meeting of the Holy Name Society. The Boston Celtics were in first place in the NBA Eastern Division standings with a 37-7 record. The Celtics were seven games ahead of 2nd place Cincinnati.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Ann Marie's Polenta, Eggplant Bake

It seems like I have some multiple ways to make baked eggplant, but each way is different and so delicious, you will want to try them all. At least I have. This one is from daughter Ann Marie.

The secret ingredient which won't be after this is printed, is polenta, and even if you're not fan, I think you will enjoy this combination.

Polenta, Eggplant Bake

2 medium sized eggplant sliced (either with skin on or off)

1 quart of so of tomato sauce

1 package shredded mozzarella cheese bread crumbs about 8 ounces of instant polenta

1 egg

1/2 cup milk

vegetable oil for sautéing

First cook the polenta according to directions. Layer it on a slightly greased cookie sheet and cook in a 350 degree oven for 25 minutes. Set aside. And then cut in squares

Mix the egg and milk together. Dip the eggplant in the egg mixture and then in the bread crumbs. In a frying pan, sauté the eggplant and then drain on paper towel. (You can also cook these by baking them in a slightly greased cookie sheet for bout 15 minutes.)

In a slightly greased baking dish, start with a layer of tomato sauce. Now place the eggplant, tomato sauce and mozzarella cheese, the polenta, tomato sauce and mozzarella cheese, and so on until the top. Then top it with sauce and the mozzarella cheese. Bake covered in a 350 degree oven for 30 minutes. Then uncover over and bake for 10 more minutes. Cool for a bit, and then cut in squares.

Benefit Auction For Montessori School April 4

Business and private donations are being sought for the Ninth Annual Auction benefiting the Montessori School of Quincy scheduled Saturday, April 4.

Donors will be listed in the auction catalog and businesses will be invited to leave literature for the hundreds of auction participants. Over 250 persons are expected to attend this year's auction.

According to Auction

Chair Beata Swierczynski, this year's theme for the auction is "The Next Chapter" and she expects it to be the best auction yet.

The Montessori School of Quincy, 101 Adams St., offers a preschool and elementary program for over 100 students from Quincy and surrounding towns.

The school is a non-profit organization, accredited by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC) and the Association Montessori Internationale (AMI). The school is also affiliated with the Association of Independent Schools of New England (AISNE).

Proceeds from the auction support educational programs at the school and provide tuition aid for eligible students.

All donated items are tax deductible within the law. Upon receipt of each item, donors will receive a thank you letter and tax identification number to be used for reporting the gift.

For more information, call 617-773-8200 or fax, 617-773-2359.

Milton Players Schedules Auditions For Musical

All ages are welcome to audition for the next Milton Players production, "Seussical The Musical" planned for presentation this spring.

Justin McCoubry will direct the production with Chris Hird, choreographer, and Marilyn Whipple, Musical Director.

"A wide range of ages is sought and children eight and older are encouraged to audition," according to Whipple.

Auditions will be held at Cunningham Hall, 75 Edge Hill Rd., Milton. No appointments are necessary, but candidates should arrive fifteen minutes in advance of the auditions and be prepared to offer 32 bars or two contrasting songs.

Auditions are scheduled 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Monday (Martin Luther King Day), Jan. 19; and 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 20. Callbacks will be held at 7 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 22.

Show dates are April 17, 18, 24, and 25, at 8 p.m. and April 19 and 26 at 2 p.m.

"Seussical" is a musical based on the books of Dr. Seuss and presents segments of many of Seuss' most famous books, focusing most promi-321qa nent on Horton the Elephant. The musical first debuted on Broadway in 2000.

At January 25 Mass

Sacred Heart Church, School To Honor Gene, Mary Raux For Long-Time Service

The Sacred Heart School community plans a special tribute to longtime volunteers Gene and Mary Elizabeth Raux at the 10:30 a.m. Mass, Sunday, Jan. 25.

Immediately following the Mass, an Open House at Sacred Heart School will kick off Catholic Schools Week. This year's theme is "Catholic Schools Celebrate Service."

The Raux's are a prime example of service to the Sacred Heart School community, according to Rev. John O'Brien, pastor and Katherine Hunter, principal.

"Mr. and Mrs. Raux are lifelong members of Sacred Heart parish and are highly committed to our church and school," said Rev. O'Brien, adding, "I am most grateful for their invaluable financial assistance and their selfless work."

The Raux have been active volunteers for the school for 47 years beginning in 1962 when they offered their help at the Sacred Heart Bingo Monday nights.

In the 47 years since that time, the Bingo program has contributed over $4,750,000 to Sacred Heart School and the funds help lower tuition for all students. In 2007, Sacred Heart Bingo was the fifth largest grossing bingo in the state.

"Mr. and Mrs. Raux's commitment to the Bingo Program the past 47 years has benefited every child who has matriculated through Sacred Heart School. I am thankful to them both," said Hunter.

In 1991, the Raux took over the duties of bookkeeper and member-in-charge. Those duties were considerable as they not only managed the weekly bingo but also reported the profit to the State after each event, then prepared and submitted an annual report to the State every January.

The couple, also, supplies lottery tickets, snacks and sodas for the players and volunteers.

"We enjoy seeing the players and volunteers every week," said Gene and Mary Raux.

"They are like family to us. Without the support of the parish, school, workers and players, we would not have been able to direct this program. Many thanks to all," said the Raux in response to the honor.

The couple graduated from North Quincy High School in 1942. They were married at Sacred Heart Church in 1951 and raised four children in Quincy. The Raux, both 83, have ten grandchildren.

Gene Raux was an Army Air Corps B25 pilot and was Executive Vice president at Hancock Paint for 22 years. In addition to helping the school's Bingo program, he is currently a lector, Eucharistic minister and usher at the church.

For many years, Gene Raux helped organize the painting of the parish convent, rectory, church, classrooms and halls. He has, also, been named the Holy Name Society President, Holy Name Man of the Year.

Both Gene and Mary Raux who was named Sodality-prefect in 1951, taught at the church's CCD religious program.

SACRED HEART VOLUNTEERS Gene John and Mary Elizabeth Raux will be honored by Sacred Heart Church parishioners at the 10:30 a.m. Mass, Sunday, Jan. 25. The Raux have been active in service to the Sacred Heart community for 47 years.

Mary Raux worked at the Thomas Crane Library, North Quincy, for 22 years. During those years, he helped Sacred Heart students locate books and attend the branch's story time. To this day, some of those students, now adults, remember her help at the library.

Sacred Heart School of North Quincy is a Roman Catholic community with students from pre-kindergarten through Grade 8. Founded in 1961, the school is accredited through the New England Association of School and Colleges.

100 hours for the senior center and other unions plan to aid the project as well, according to Edwards.

Under the current plan, the center will also be fitted with generators and serve as an emergency relief destination, according to Murphy.

Clasby said the Health Department will move in soon using approximately 1000 square feet in the corner rooms at the West end of the building. That move should save the city approximately $60,000 annually in rental fees.

Clasby added that the Health Department will use that space on a 'short-term' basis, but the short term was never defined.

Finn questioned the transfer of $1.2 million in bond funds originally earmarked for a Department of Public Works garage.

In addition, Finn sought a detailed breakdown on future operating costs, such as heat, utilities and programs, but Clasby said estimates were unavailable as comparisons with similar school building varied considerably.

"We're not adding staff," said Clasby who expects new costs will be mitigated by membership fees, volunteer activities, and an active friends group.

As for Koch's use of the capital improvement bond, Finn said, "I'm a little uneasy."

Finn noted that the council reviewed each item in the bond requisition before approving the bond in 2007.

Finn also cited the wording of the $3 million Capital Improvements projects originally designating $1.9 million funds for a Department of Works garage.

Murphy said the garage repair project was not feasible and had been temporarily halted. A different DPW building has been repaired.

Councillors then asked for a report on the progress of all the items in the 2007 bond and determined that several projects had been repaired through the $30 million Honeywell Energy project.

Finn acknowledged that the mayor was allowed to redirect the funds, but said such moves made him 'nervous.'

"That's carte blanche for the chief executive," Finn said, emphasizing that the council approved the 2007 $3 million bond with specific projects in mind.

"I'm sure it will be top-notch," said Gutro of the senior center, but he added, "It certainly isn't 'no-cost.'"

Gutro also cited the $3 million Capital Improvement bond, but acknowledged that the mayor had the "legal discretion to do that....We didn't have to vote for a new approprition."

Finn and McNamee, also, urged administrators to seek reimbursement from the former tenant, Beechwood on the Bay, Inc., for sewer damage allegedly caused by disposable diapers.

Shawn Hardy of the Water and Sewer Department described repairs to the new senior center's sewage system which had, originally, been estimated at $300,000.

Councillors approved that project last summer through a transfer of $300,000 from the Sewer Rehabilitation Fund.

Hardy and Michael Monahan of the Department of Public Works said in-house reviews, labor, and redesigns eliminated the major overhaul and reduced the cost to $50,000.

Raymond sought assurances that the remaining $250,000 will be restored to the sewer fund for residential areas subject to flooding.

"I would like to see the city address the former operators (for the sewage repairs)," said McNamee who described calls to him in previous years regarding backups and overflows, apparently traced to the disposal of paper diapers.

"That's a very good point," said Finn, adding that any remaining Beechwood assets might cover some repair costs.

Finn also, asked Clasby about the stockpiling of asphalt in the center parking lot, but neither Clasby nor any DPW personnel said they knew of such an event.

The major opponent of the evening was Houghs Neck resident Walter Monahan who said he just experienced a $720 tax increase.

Monahan, a 46-year resident of Quincy, said the original site at Pageant Field would have offered senior a central location, an indoor heated track, and interaction with different generations. He said senior don't need gymnasiums.

"We're looking at it, amazing how things change," said Monahan who had participated in a major forum on the senior center 14 months ago.

"We're going to offer a first class (building)," countered Clasby, noting that the new center is on a T-line, the walkways at North Quincy were used for years for Senior Olympics and the building will house all of the COA offices and programs, as well as new programs.

Clasby said a majority of senior residents supported the center location.

As for the 3000 square foot Pageant Field location, Clasby said, "It was never a good site."

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

During, After Winter Storms: Follow These Fire Prevention Tips

I've been thinking of how to address the hazards related to the recent ice storm that took place north and west of Quincy. News reports of power outages conveyed warnings of electrocution hazards where downed power lines were so prevalent; alternate methods of heating homes were then sought by homeowners and stories of carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning were common.

For our own enlightenment I'd like to know the details behind the CO exposure alone where we could then learn valuable lessons from those incidents. In lieu of that information however, I have found a public notice from the State Fire Marshal's Office focusing on overall major storm safety (FIREFACTORS/Office of the State Fire Marshal).

I'd like to share the gist of that notice here with you now. It highlights preventing fires, electrical shock and carbon monoxide poisoning when coping with a disaster. It suggests:

Give your smoke alarms fresh batteries: Smoke alarms can double your chances of surviving a fire. Make sure your alarms have fresh batteries. Consider adding a battery operated smoke detector to your existing hard-wired detectors. In the event you lose electricity and your hard-wired detectors no longer function, a battery-operated detector is present. I myself have done so and installed it on the ceiling at the base of the cellar stairs.

Use flashlights instead of candles: Candles can easily start a fire. Candle fires have more than doubled in the past decade. Power outages can turn deadly when candles are left unattended or misused. If using candles, burn them within a one-foot circle of safety, free of anything that can burn. Never leave candles burning unattended. Place them on a sturdy ceramic or metal candleholder and keep them out of the reach of children and pets.

Use generators outdoors: Fuel powered machines should be used outside the home, away from the home. During this last ice storm at least one fatality resulted when a generator was running too close to a home. The resulting carbon monoxide fumes infiltrated that home, killing an inhabitant.

Carbon monoxide detectors can protect a home from this silent killer: Carbon monoxide (CO) is both colorless and odorless. If you suspect a CO exposure, get out of the home and get fresh air immediately. Call the fire department from a neighbor's house, and if you have symptoms, seek medical help immediately. Protect household members with CO detectors on each level of your home and 10 feet from bedroom doors.

Use caution when using alternate heating methods: Use a screen or glass enclosure on fireplaces where sparks and embers can enter the living space. Make certain wood or coal stoves and their flues are maintained; are free of obstruction and excessive creosote and keep anything that can burn a minimum three feet away from the fireplace or these stoves. Dispose of ashes within a metal container with a lid, outside and away from the home.

Unvented fossil fuel burning space heaters utilizing propane or fuel oil are unlawful for use in habitable living spaces. They are typically designed for use at construction sites where the flow of air and ventilation is significantly greater.

A friend in another community, who was affected by that earlier ice storm, informed me that a merchant recommended he purchase a propane space heater for his home; informing him that he could use it safely indoors. An unvented fuel fired space heater cannot be used within a home. Both oil fired and propane fired space heaters produce copious amounts of CO and other asphyxiates and deplete the house of oxygen.

Do not be tempted to use an unvented fuel fired space heater within your home.

Do not use charcoal or propane grills inside your home: Charcoal produces copious amounts of CO as well and a propane cylinder within a home creates entirely new issues in addition to CO. It is unlawful to store a propane cylinder with a habitable space and a leaking cylinder within a confined space creates an explosion hazard.

Charge up your cell phone battery in advance: If a storm is heading your way, it is a good idea to have your cell phone charged should you lose domestic phone services.

If you suspect a gas leak within your home, leave the home immediately: Call the fire department from a neighbor's house or on your cell phone. Do not turn electrical switches or appliances on or off. Never strike a match as any flame or spark can ignite gas if it is within its flammability limits.

Remember, water and electricity do not mix: All downed wires should be considered live. Be sure to explain this to children. Do not venture into a flooded basement. If charged electrical outlets or the fuse box is in contact with the water and electrocution hazard exists.

Keep furnace and hot water heater vents clear of drifting snow: Nicole's Law was created after a tragedy where snow occluded a gas heater vent, redirecting combustion gases back into the building, killing an inhabitant.

Prevent frozen pipes: In the absence of heat, let the water drip from faucets. Tricking water helps prevent frozen pipes.

Hopefully, we will never have to contend with the inconvenience of an extended power outage. However, if we do, please include these safety considerations in your fire prevention response. It is too easy to embrace makeshift alternatives when household conveniences are lost; therefore safety considerations are imperative to maintaining a safe home environment during an outage.

When adapting and compensating during an outage, think safely. Thank you for doing so.

Quincy Legislators Plan To Give Raises To Charity

At least three of the four state legislators from Quincy say they plan to accept the automatic 5.5 per cent raise due the 40 senators and 160 representatives and donate it to a worthy cause.

The controversial pay hike, reviewed every two years by popular vote, would amount to $3,209 for each legislator, up from $58,237 to $61,440 and add $640,000 to budget for the General Court.

Sen. Michael Morrissey said he plans to accept the raise and donate it "to the best anti-poverty agency on the South Shore." He did not name it.

"There's never a good time to get a raise no matter how you get it," he said. "In deference to the economic times, I'll give it to the people who need it the most."

Rep. Stephen Tobin said he will distribute it to two or three agencies around his district.

"I don't feel comfortable keeping it while so many people are losing their jobs," he said. "I'd like to help someone who really needs it."

Rep. Bruce Ayers said he too will take the money and donate it to a charity in his district.

Rep. Ron Mariano was out of town and unable to comment but a spokeswoman said he was planning to accept the raise but she was unable to say whether he planned to keep it or give it away.

Palmucci Disappointed In State's Billboard Ruling

Ward 4 City Council candidate Brian Palmucci says he was disappointed to learn that the state will not order the removal of the controversial billboard in his neighborhood.

"I, along with my fellow neighbors, am unhappy with the ruling of the state's Outdoor Advertising Board," Palmucci said. "I wish that the board took into account my testimony, as well as the testimony of my fellow Ward 4 residents and decided in favor of the city."

Palmucci said he will continue to support the city's ongoing legal efforts in Norfolk Superior Court and Land Court to have the billboard removed.

"I will continue to support the city's efforts to have the billboard removed through legal action," said Palmucci. "We all must continue to challenge the existence of this neighborhood blight at every turn."

Ward 4 residents were shocked when the roadside 'blight' was erected last April, he said.

Palmucci said that incumbent Jay Davis did not adequately alert them.

A 30-year-old state prosecutor and the one-time president of the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association, Palmucci formed an election committee last month for his run.

Palmucci vows to use his law enforcement experience to help fight the city's growing drug problem. He will also encourage smart, responsible development that will expand the city's tax base, while, also, protecting the neighborhood's unique character.

dium and march with color guard to the church. Kelley's body was to be brought to the church on Engine 37 from Boston.

After the funeral mass, the visitors were to accompany Kelley's body to the gravesite at Cedar Grove Cemetery on the banks of the Neponset River in Dorchester.

Hancock Street from Fenno Street to approximately Billings Road was to be closed from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. to permit those attending the funeral to get to and leave the church of the cemetery.

Meanwhile, investigators blamed faulty brakes for the accident, sparking a review of the department's fleet of aging trucks. Boston Fire Commissioner Roderick Fraser ordered an inspection of the brake systems of 44 other vehicles.

David Blaides, one of three firefighters who were injured aboard Ladder 26 when it crashed into the building, testified to Kelley's heroism.

"He did everything he could," Blaides told the Boston Globe. "He was on the horn. He was on the siren. He said to us, 'Brace yourself. We can't stop this beast. Brace yourself.'"

Kelley's family, his wife, Gloria, and his daughters, Susan, Christine and Maureen, issued a statement eulogizing their departed husband and father.

"Kevin's family gave him the most enjoyment in his life. They loved traveling together and took frequent trips to Disney World and cruises to the Caribbean. He was especially proud of his three daughters.

"His second love was the Boston Fire Department. Kevin is a second generation firefighter and the fourth most senior lieutenant on the job.

"He could have worked anywhere in Boston, but because of his nature, he chose the busiest firehouse in Boston. He was well respected amongst his peers, active in the union and loved going to work. Kevin had a great sense of humor, loved to tease and possessed a tremendous work ethic."

More Snowfall Boosts City Cost To $500,000

What promises to be a rugged winter saw up to six inches of snow dropped on Quincy during the weekend and forecast more of the white stuff and a deep freeze for the rest of the week.

The storm passed uneventful in the city, said Christopher Walker, the mayor's spokesman, even though a snow emergency was declared from 4 p.m. Saturday to 7 a.m. Monday to facilitate snow removal.

"It helped that it came over the weekend," he said.

Walker estimated that the city has spent some $500,000 on snow removal thus far in the winter of 2008-09 with only $300,000 budgeted to that account. The difference will be made up in the Fiscal 2010 budget.

Don McCasland, program director of the Blue Hills Observatory, said 5.7 inches were recorded atop Big Blue but with the dusting Monday the snowfall probably reached six inches depending on the location.

The future looked grim, starting with a low of 11 degrees last night (Wednesday) and continuing with five degrees tonight (Thursday) and six degrees Friday night.

Daily highs of 21 degrees were forecast for the remainder of the week with the thermometer going no higher than 13 on Friday and a 70 per cent chance of snow today (Thursday).

The cold should release its grip on the city Sunday with temperatures warming to the freezing point through the first part of next week and the chances of snow retreating.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, Dec. 30, Detectives Jason MacIsaac and David Pacino were reviewing the previous night's incidents and reports when they came across a Field Interrogation and Observation (FIO) report completed by Officer Timothy Moran.

FIO's are reports submitted by officers when they encounter an individual(s) acting suspiciously, such as being in a place without a reasonable explanation.

In this FIO, Officer Moran stated that he observed a male suspect on Dec. 29 at approximately 11:30 p.m. This suspect was found riding a bicycle in the area of three motor vehicles that were equipped with portable GPS mounts. Due to the large number of motor vehicle breaks that have occurred in the general vicinity, the officer approached the suspect and questioned him and after checking for warrants, let him go.

In reviewing Officer Moran's completed FIO form, the detectives observed that the suspect in the FIO matched the physical description of a suspect related to a recovery of a stolen motor vehicle that occurred on Dec. 18 at approximately 11:33 a.m. The suspect in this case was driving a stolen motor vehicle when it ran out of gas. A security guard offered to help him, but the suspect said he was going to get some gas and return.

The guard noticed that one of the car's windows was broken, so he called the police. The police recovered the car, but the suspect was not found.

The FIO was very specific, stating that the suspect in the stolen motor vehicle theft was missing his front teeth. On Dec. 30, the detectives met with the witness and showed him a photo lineup with the suspect's photo (from a past arrest) mixed in with other similar photos. The witness picked out the photo of the suspect and said that he was "80%" sure.

The witness was asked if there was anything else that he could add that would help the investigation. He then said, "The suspect had longer hair than the picture and he was also missing upper teeth." Since the witness was already "80%" sure and then added that the suspect was missing front teeth, which is not common, the detectives felt confident that they had their suspect.

A more in-depth interview with the witness followed to gather all the information to apply for an arrest warrant. The witness said that on Dec. 18 at approximately 11:30 a.m., he was working in the lobby of 100 Hancock St. when he observed a motor vehicle drive into the parking lot of 100 Hancock St. He watched as the driver stepped out of the vehicle and then began pushing the car further into the parking lot.

The security guard thought that the driver might be an employee so he went out to assist. The suspect told him that he was "all set and just ran out of gas." The security guard said that he observed the suspect then drop a knife and immediately retrieve it from the ground. He also noted that the driver's side window was smashed.

The security guard notified the Quincy Police and relayed the aforementioned events. It was determined that the car was reported stolen on Dec. 17, from Glover Avenue. In an attempt to locate the suspect, the Massachusetts State Police initiated a K9 track, however, the track was unsuccessful.

Based on the totality of the circumstances, the detectives obtained an arrest warrant and later that day the suspect, an 18-year-old Quincy resident, was taken into custody and charged with receiving a stolen motor vehicle. The suspect was given his Miranda Rights and consented to questioning.

After a brief period of questioning, the suspect admitted to numerous car breaks in the North Quincy area and subsequent to this arrest, car breaks are down significantly. Nice Work!

CAR BREAKS: 100 block of West Squantum Street, Berlin Street, East Howard Street, Yardarm Lane, 100 block of Hancock Street. (arrest made for multiple breaks in the north end of the city)

Foundations Help QCAP With Funds For Food, Fuel

Four family foundations have created a $1.1 million emergency assistance fund for residents across the state who are struggling with food and fuel costs.

The Quincy Community Action Program (QCAP), Hancock Street, Quincy Center, is one of the recipients of funds contributed by The Eos Foundation of Boston and Harwichport, the Highland Street Foundation of Boston, the Fireman Foundation and an anonymous foundation.

"Family foundations often quietly and anonymously donate funds to individual organizations and programs," said Andrea Silbert, Eos president, adding that the leaders of the four private foundations wanted to create a "'foundation consortium' to maximize the impact we can make and to set an example of collaboration.

"During this economic crisis, it is more important than ever to step up to the plate and help those in need," she concluded.

David McGrath, a trustee of the Highland Street foundation, warned that "The recent economic turmoil, combined with increases in food and fuel costs, has set the stage for a financially troubling winter for Massachusetts residents."

McGrath urged everyone to consider "charitable giving in whatever way they are able- financial support, donation of food products or volunteering to help those in need."

"We applaud the efforts of these four family foundations in providing aid to people throughout Massachusetts who may be looking for assistance in the coming months," said Lt. Gov. Tim Murray who attended the press conference at the Greater Boston Food Bank.

FOOTNOTES

It seems ironic to realize that, although most Americans are born without foot problems, most of us suffer from them! Neglecting the feet through lack of care and wearing shoes that do not fit properly cause some of those issues. Additionally, diabetes, circulatory problems, and arthritis are contributors. When foot problems affect mobility, they also affect many other aspects of an individual's life. Those who are over age 50 have most likely walked 75,000 miles. If not tended to properly, that alone can cause wear and tear on the feet and ankles that can result in a myriad of foot conditions such as bunions, corns, calluses, and hammertoe. Should you have foot issues, see a podiatric doctor. The human foot is an amazing marvel! When it's complex parts aren't working together properly to allow you to walk in comfort, it's time to seek a podiatrist's attention for diagnoses and treatment. As a physician who specializes in foot care for men, women, and children, a podiatrist's extensive training provides the experience to treat a full range of foot and ankle disorders. Have your feet got you down? Call us at 781-986-3668 for an appointment for comprehensive foot care. We're located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St. in the Randolph Medical Building and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

Q. Please help me. The wind caught the storm door, yanked it out of my hand and now it won't close on its own. It has hydraulic closers, but now I have to pull it closed. I think the wind, in pulling it back too far, has sprung it. How do I fix this? — Kathy, via e-mail

A. First, check to see if the automatic closer is properly attached and operating. Is the closer attached to its mounting brackets on both the storm door and the interior door frame?

Next, check the automatic closer function. Open the door halfway and let it go to see if the closer pulls it shut slowly. If it simply opens and slams shut (or just hangs there), try rotating the closer cylinder (on hydraulic units) and test again. (Pneumatic closers have rate adjustment screws on one end of the cylinder.) Look for oil on the outside of a hydraulic unit — this means the closer is malfunctioning.

If the closer still fails to operate, it probably needs to be replaced. If the brackets are OK, leave them in place, open the door fully and pop out just the cylinder. Take it to the hardware store and buy a new cylinder, install in place and test the unit again. This is much faster than replacing the entire unit, as you won't have to go to the trouble of balancing the brackets.

If your door does not have a safety chain or the chain broke when the wind yanked the door, install a new chain.

Tips To Help Keep Seniors Safer In And Around Their Homes Senior Citizen Security At Home

According to the U.S. Department of Justice, senior citizens usually experience lower rates of crime. But when seniors are victimized, there is a 92 percent chance the crime will occur in or near their homes.

"As we age, our safety and security needs change, so it's important to take extra precautions to keep ourselves and our senior family members safe," said Steve Shapiro, director of product management for ADT Security Services. "Although statistics show seniors are less likely to be vulnerable to some types of crime, they are more likely than any other age group to be victims of crime in their own homes."

To help better protect America's seniors from property crime and personal theft, ADT has developed the following essential safety tips:

- Never hide keys under the doormat, in the mailbox or in a planter, burglars will go straight for these typical hiding spots to look for spare keys. Spare keys should be left with a trusted neighbor.

- If you decide to install an alarm system, consider one that is monitored for burglary, fire, carbon monoxide and medical emergencies. These alarm system features can be life-saving if you, or a loved one, become incapacitated while in the home.

- Install and use good locks on doors and windows. Good locks are the first line of defense against home invasion—it is also important to make sure your locks are in working order.

- Never give credit card, Social Security, phone card or bank account numbers to callers who ask for this information to "verify" prizes. If they have to ask for this personal information, it is a sure sign they are fakes — never give personal data over the phone, unless you know who you are dealing with.

Recently there have been cases of seniors being targeted to send cash to someone posing as a grandchild. If you receive a call like this, you should always call the child's parents for verification, even if they say they do not want their parents to know.

When service or delivery people come to your door, ask for ID and check with their company if you are still unsure. When in doubt, research the company by calling police or the Better Business Bureau. Reputable companies will have no problem with your request for more information.

Most importantly, Shapiro wants everyone to remember, "Thinking about home security should be a top priority, especially as we grow older and live longer."

ADT Security Services, a unit of Tyco International, is the largest provider of electronic security services to nearly six million commercial, government and residential customers throughout North America. ADT's Web site address is www.adt.com.

How To Feel At Home After You Move

(ARA) - Moving to a new community can be a great adventure, if you go with the right attitude and a sound strategy for settling in. Make an action plan and you'll stay focused, organized and proactive -- just what's needed to put roots down fast.

Before You Go

- Complete a change of address form with the post office, which can be done online at usps.com. You'll also want to send your new address to any publications you subscribe to, as it can take up to eight weeks for the change to become effective.

- Contact the local Visitor's Bureau for materials about your new town, which should include a map. Identify important routes, such as those between your home and your office or your child's school.

- Make initial contact with childcare facilities. Depending on the area you move to, you may need to put your name on a waiting list.

- If possible, enroll your children in school. Firm plans will reduce the stress.

- Pack a box with essentials for your first few nights, such as prescription medicine, toiletries, a telephone, clothing, towels, toilet paper and bed linen.

- You'll also want to make arrangements to have utilities transferred to your name or turned on. In addition, you will want to set up appointments to have services such as telephone, cable and high-speed Internet connected.

Upon Arrival

- For safety and peace of mind, change the locks. You never know who has a copy of the house key.

- Locate emergency services -- police and fire stations and the closest hospital.

- Hang drapes or curtains to give you some privacy.

- Select one room, perhaps the family room, as a place of refuge. Make it a cozy space, free of unpacked boxes, empty cartons or anything else move-related.

- Stock the fridge with prepared entrees and the makings for no-fuss meals.

The First Week

- Check with the post office to see if they are holding mail for you. Finish sending out change of address to credit card companies, clubs, associations, friends and family.

- File away all documents related to the move. You'll need them for verification of moving expenses at tax time.

- Call your waste removal company or department of sanitation for a trash collection schedule.

- Open a bank account and arrange for a safe deposit box, if needed.

- Obtain a local driver's license and transfer the vehicle registration.

- Register to vote. Call the local Board of Elections for information.

- Take a tour of your neighborhood to become familiar with your new surroundings. Learn the routes to work, school, grocers, etc.

Help Your Children Adjust

- Maintain family routines. Kids will appreciate the continuity of family life.
- Involve the kids. Allow them to select new furnishings or decorate their rooms.

- Take your children to the local playground. If you move during the summer, it's likely they'll make friends there, which should ease the transition to the new school.

- Try to be home when the children return from their first day at school. Kids feel reassured when a parent is there to hear about their day.

- Watch for signs of adjustment problems. These can manifest with troublesome friends, academic difficulties and irritability or depression.

Get Involved in the Community

- Spend time outdoors. Neighbors may greet you and come by for sidewalk chats.

- Walk your dog in an area where you see other dog owners congregating.

- Schedule an after-work coffee or dessert hour. Invite neighbors to drop by.

- Choose a place to worship and get involved; consider doing volunteer work.

- Select professional service providers such as doctor, dentist and financial and/or tax advisor.

- Find out if your community has a Newcomers Club. Your local library is a good place to start.

- Join a club or take up activities you enjoyed before the move.

- Take a job-related class to develop new professional contacts and update skills.

Don't hesitate to contact local financial and real estate professionals for more ideas or information about your new community. By re-establishing daily patterns and developing ties soon after arrival, your new environment will feel like home in no time. For more tips, visit www.prudential.com/realestate.

Decorating Trends For 2009:

Economy, Nature And Fashion Influences

(ARA) - What's in store for home decorating in 2009? No matter what your taste, you'll find a hue in the 2009 forecast of popular paint colors to suit your style. Since the average consumer spends two to three months planning a painting project, now is the ideal time to review your options, see what's predicted to be popular and choose that perfect color.

Color Influencers

Looking to 2009, color experts are seeing three top drivers of color trends -- the economy, nature and fashion.

"It's not surprising that the primary driver of our 2009 color forecast is the economy," says Donna Schroeder, Dutch Boy color marketing and design manager. "During an economic slowdown, consumers traditionally become more conservative when decorating, oftentimes shifting to neutral colors when painting. However, even with the slower economy, we still expect to see the use of brighter paint colors as accents to the always-popular neutrals."

In addition to the economy's influence on consumer color choices, the mainstreaming of the green movement is creating a renewed consciousness and sensitivity to the environment. The focus on bringing the outdoors into the home has once again made its way into the color forecast. The desire to incorporate basic elements of nature into interior design is still very prevalent.

In contrast to the two more serious drivers, the economy and nature, consumers still want to have fun when decorating their homes. So, many of the bolder and brighter clothing and fashion accessory colors seen on the fashion runways and in retail outlets are also reflected in the forecast.

2009 Color Forecast

All of the colors in this year's forecast can be found within Dutch Boy's Color Simplicity System. The five color themes for 2009 are:

Handmade

Look to this color palette to bring a personal home-made sensibility to your decor. Simple patterns and authentic colors are reflected in the desire to simplify, conserve and repurpose. Colors in this palette include: Dried Stem, Beloved, Sidewalk Square, Mandarin Cove, Tulip Stem, Creamy Camel, Bull Frog and Espresso Latte.

Honest

Clean, natural colors capture the essence of ecology and preservation while the honest simplicity and sustainable sensitivity complement today's contemporary styles. Colors reflect a raw, pure and organic feel. Colors in the Honest palette include: Remember the Alamo, Western Cactus, Berber Carpet, Northern Climb, Not So Neutral, Sea Monster, Route 66 and Twisted Knot.

Dream

Conjuring up images of mystery and fantasy, the soft, floral-inspired colors found in this palette give an enchanting aura to any home. Feelings of whimsy and magic abound in these colors. Colors in the Dream palette include: Amethyst Gem, Purple Ash, Clover Bed, Concrete Thought, Beautiful, Flip-Flop, Pink Satin and Forest Hill.

Ancestry

Connecting with roots and heritage, the Ancestry trend palette lets you embrace your culture with a variety of warm colors that are anchored to a vibrant, global community. Colors in the Ancestry palette include: Infinity Pool, Young Sprout, Fresh Linen, Bronze Beauty, Mount Royale, Classic Red, Camel and Distinguished Navy.

Protecting Your Family From Indoor Mold

(NAPS)—Clearing the air your family breathes could be a matter of controlling moisture inside the home.

According to the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences (NIEHS), indoor mold can grow on almost any surface, and the spores that are released by mold can cause everything from blurred vision and chronic cough to skin rash, sore throat and sinus congestion.

A Yale University study has concluded that mold exposure during the first years of life may even increase the risk of asthma.

An excess of moisture in the home can also lead to cracked paint, peeling wallpaper and moisture bubbles on the surface of walls.

Since mold can be found in warm and humid musty environments such as damp bathrooms, NIEHS recommends venting bathrooms to the outside, and running fans or vents while bathing and structured, these colors enhance a home's architectural features and add a sense of Euro-modern geometry and order to any room. Colors in the Construct palette include: Dried Thyme, Sullen Mist, Rocket Red, Founding Father, Guess Hue, Laguna Blue, Pumpkin Stem and Empire State.

Winter home care

Now that you've been in your home for some of the cold months of winter, it's a good time to do a house check. It's easier to tell during cold weather where you might have air leaks or need more insulation.

• Give your home the barefoot test. Walk the rooms and check for drafts down on the floor under windows, at the exterior doors and near the fireplace.

• While it's likely too cold to apply exterior caulking to window trim, clean plastic sheeting (the kind you shrink with a hair dryer) can be installed on the inside of windows. (Hint: Don't trim to size until after you've used the hair dryer.)

• Even wall plugs and switch plates on exterior walls can be sources of air leaks. Investigate weather-strip insulation pads to seal out cold air. Add childproofing plastic inserts for plugs that aren't being used.

• If you have a basement that's unheated, insulate the pipes with jacketing or install heat tape to keep pipes from freezing. (Be careful not to cross the tape back over itself, as this will cause a fire.) If you have plastic pipes, ask for home-improvement advice, as you'll likely need the type with an automatic thermostat to keep from melting the pipes.

• Have you checked your furnace filter? With the furnace running so often during cold weather, changing the filter once a month can keep indoor air cleaner as well as reduce wear and tear on the furnace motor.

• If you have an attic, check the inside of the plywood and rafters for leaks or wet spots. Use a flashlight to check around chimneys. If yours is an older home, it's not too late to save money this winter by putting down another layer of insulation.

• Don't ignore the outside of the house. You could face costly repairs in the spring if water is flowing toward the foundation. Check downspouts where they empty at the bottom and divert water with splash blocks. Check gutters for leaks.

• If you have a garage, check for leaks under the garage door. As a temporary measure, a thick stack of newspapers (newsprint only, not the slick ads) placed near the leak will soak up water before it travels across the concrete floor.

January Is Radon Awareness Month

Did you know that exposure to radon is the second leading cause of lung cancer after smoking?

Is your house safe?

Now is the time to check.

January is National Radon Action Month and the American Lung Association has partnered with the Massachusetts Department of Public Health to encourage state residents to test their homes and to educate them about the dangers of radon. According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, radon exposure accounts for 7,000 to 30,000 deaths annually. One in 15 homes has levels the EPA considers unhealthy.

Radon is a naturally oc-curing radioactive gas that is invisible and odorless. It can enter your home through holes and cracks in the basement floor or from well water. Prolonged exposure to radon can cause lung cancer. Radon is the second leading cause of lung cancer. The only way to know if your home has a radon problem is to perform a simple test. For information about radon and how to test, contact the Massachusetts Department of Public Health at 1-800-723-6695.

Another QHS Record

Scott's 53 Points Powers Presidents Past Raiders

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raiders squared off last Friday night at NQHS in the first of two meetings this season between the two high schools; round one went to the Quincy Presidents and senior guard Doug Scott - 81-68.

Scott, who was recognized before the game for breaking the Quincy High School all-time scoring record held previously by Bonnie Hirtle (1,348 points, a 2004 graduate of QHS) three days earlier in a Patriot League loss to Hingham High School after scoring 30 points to reach the 1,355 point plateau, had quite an encore performance against the Red Raiders.

Not only did he lead his team to its third win of the season, and in the process helped the Presidents beat the Red Raiders for the first time since the 2006-07 season, he dropped 53 points on North Quincy, breaking yet another QHS record in doing so.

BASKETBALL
Quincy - 81
North Quincy - 68

He finished the game with 15 field goals, including three 3-pointers, and was 20-of-25 from the free throw line. Scott reached the 50-point mark with just under a minute to go in what had been a tightly contested ballgame at halftime.

Quincy (3-3 overall, 2-3 in the Patriot League) and North Quincy (1-5 overall, 0-4 in the Patriot League) battled throughout the first half, alternating leads and momentum. The game had all the fixings of being a barnburner and at the half-time break the Presidents and Scott (28 first half points) held a slim 39-38 lead.

The two teams opened the second half by alternating baskets. NQ's Tim Stille (21 points) tied the score at 43-43 early into the third quarter, but the Raiders could not find an answer for stopping Scott.

With the score knotted at 43-43, Scott put his team on his shoulders by scoring nine straight points in an 11-0 Quincy scoring run. When North Quincy finally stopped the Presidents' streak their lead had ballooned to 54-43. Quincy outscored North by a 22-6 margin in the third quarter and extended a one-point halftime lead to a 17-point advantage (61-44) entering QUINCY'S SETH PULLUM (#31) fights for a rebound in between NQ's Deron Jones (#5) and Mike Stanton (#33).

QHS' DOUG SCOTT was recognized before the QHS-NQHS boys basketball game for breaking the QHS' scoring record of 1,348 points, previously held by Bonnie Hirtle, after going for 30 points against Hingham HS on Jan. 7. 1,408 Career Points; 125 Shy Of City Record

Quincy's Doug Scott Now School's All-Time Scorer

Quincy High School senior guard Doug Scott became the school's all-time leading scorer, for both the boys and girls basketball programs, when he scored 30 points in a Patriot League game against Hingham High School on Jan. 7.

Scott passed Bonnie Hirtle, a 2004 graduate of QHS, who had held the scoring record for the past four seasons at 1,348 career points.

Scott, who was honored by both QHS and NQHS in a pregame ceremony last Friday night at the NQHS Gymnasium, finished the Hingham game with 1,355 career points. But a week of smashing QHS basketball records was just beginning for Scott.

In last Friday's showdown against the Raiders, Scott scored 53 points to break the all-time individual game school scoring record. His 53 points helped to lead Quincy to an 81-68 win over North Quincy.

The QHS records may be Scott's and Scott's alone, but he does have one more elusive city scoring record within his reach.

With his 53 points last Friday, Scott now has 1,408 career points. He is currently 125 points away from Sarah Stanton's (2004 NQHS graduate) city-record of 1,533 career points. Scott is averaging almost 31 points per game this season and with more than half the season's schedule yet to be played he should pass Stanton sometime later this month.

"He is absolutely the most unselfish player I have coached," said QHS head coach David Parry. "All he wants to do is win. Of course he is a terrific pure scorer, but he is also a fantastic defender. He is a joy to coach."

the final eight minutes of play.

"The game came down to that third quarter," said Quincy head coach David Parry. "We had a team talk at halftime because we were not happy with the way we were playing defense. In the third quarter, we played shutdown defense.

"Holding a team as good as North Quincy to just six points in a quarter was as important as the 11-0 run we went on. We knew that North would not go away in North Quincy Wins Third Straight, Improves To 7-1 Overall

Carnell (28 Points) Paces Raiders Over Quincy

By SEAN BRENNAN

On a night when the North Quincy Red Raiders girls' basketball team honored its seniors, it was one senior, in particular, who stole the show.

Siobhan Carnell dropped 28 points on the Quincy Presidents, including 15 points in the third quarter, to lead her team to a 62-40 victory over QHS last Friday evening at NQHS.

The win, the Raiders third straight, upped the team's record to 7-1 overall and 4-1 in Patriot League play. With the loss, the Presidents fell to 0-7 overall.

The contest, the first of two games between the city's high schools last Friday (the boys played immediately after the girls), was played in front of a capacity crowd at NQHS. The Raiders, feeding off the emotion of the pregame ceremonies honoring the team's nine seniors, jumped out to an early 14-3 first quarter lead. Carnell got things started for NQ in that quarter with nine points.

The Presidents would not record a basket until the four-minute mark when junior Colleen Tobin made one-of-two free throws.

In the second quarter, Carnell (4 pts.) and fellow seniors Catherine O'Connell (4 pts.), Julie Lynch (2 pts.) and Jessie Howlett (1 pt.) and sophomore Montana McBirney (2 pts.) pushed the Red Raiders' advantage to 27-15 at halftime.

After a sloppy first quarter, the Presidents, behind the play of senior Leslie Campbell (team-high 10 points), junior Olivia Berry, sophomore Kon Sorensen and freshman Juli Tomer responded with a competitive second quarter. The Presidents got as close as 10 points in the quarter but could never break into the single digits. Quincy would not get any closer the rest of the game.

"My team has a lot of heart. They are young and inexperienced but we play with a lot of heart," said Quincy coach Jeff Bretsch. "Down 15, 20 points they press like there is no tomorrow and work hard on the boards. They never hang their heads and that's all you can ask for."

Ahead entering the second half, the Raiders, and especially Carnell, took it to Quincy after the break. Carnell opened the quarter by scoring on six straight drives to the hoop; included in this scoring run were multiple running layups and one three-point play. Carnell outscored Quincy 15-14 in the quarter and helped push her team's lead to 48-30 with eight minutes to play.

The Presidents did receive contributions from Sorensen (3 pts.), Berry (4 pts.), Tobin (3 pts.) and Campbell (2 pts.) in the third quarter, but had no answer for the shifty Carnell.

The Raiders got six points from senior Kristina Anderson in the fourth quarter, outscoring Quincy 14-10 and finishing the game on a 6-0 run. When the final whistle blew, North Quincy had secured its seventh win in eight games.

Carnell (28 points, 4 steals), O'Connell (10 points, 6 rebounds) and Anderson (6 points, 5 rebounds) were the top stars for the Raiders.

In a Patriot League game on Jan. 6, the Raiders continued their hot start with a 64-31 trouncing of Middleboro High School.

Catherine O'Connell dominated with 10 points and 10 rebounds and co-captain Kathleen Lynch scored nine points and grabbed nine rebounds. Sophomore Montana McBirney added eight points for the Raiders.

On Jan. 5 in a non-league matchup with a very good Brockton HS team, North Quincy pushed its early season record to 5-1 with an impressive 68-64 victory over the Boxers.

Carnell scored 20 points and Catherine O'Connell added 18 points and 12 rebounds. Co-captain Kathleen Lynch played another well-rounded game (9 points-6 assists) and junior Cara Murtagh contributed with seven points and three steals.

Notes: NQ is scheduled to play four consecutive road games. The team played Scituate HS on Tuesday and will travel to Hingham HS (Jan. 16), Brockton NORTH QUINCY'S SIOBHAN CARNELL (#23) knifes through the Quincy defense during the third quarter of the Raiders 62-40 win over Quincy. Carnell finished with a game-high 28 points.

AFTER THE RAIDERS defeated the Presidents 62-40 the teams congratulated each other at half-court. The teams will play again on Feb. 7 in QHS' East Gym.

Coach Barrett has his team focused and playing discipline basketball. They never quit. It was a good win."

Scott, after missing three straight free throws late in the fourth quarter, reached the 50-point mark with under a minute left. But according to Parry, his offense is complimented by his defense and unselfish play.

"He scored 53 points but if you asked him, he would say it doesn't matter how many points he scores as long as his team gets the win," added Parry. "He has a total game. He is so solid on defense, finishing with six steals against North, and he dishes the ball so well (10 assists in the game) and gets his teammates open shots."

"I didn't expect him to score 53 points. But he is a very special player. He either scored or assisted on 75 of our 81 points against North Quincy."

Scott may have finished with a school-record 53 points, but he was not alone in helping the Presidents snap a two-game losing streak.

Fellow seniors Anthony Raddatz (12 pts.) and John Parry, along with junior Robbie Bina, showed up to play against North.

"Scott may be our true scorer, but against North we had guys who played great games," said Parry. "Anthony Raddatz and John Parry played solid defensively early in the game. John took three charging calls in the first half and Anthony was great. The two of them effectively shutdown the lane in the second half and forced North to work for their shots."

"Robbie was playing in his first varsity game (filling in for an injured Kenny Nguyen) and he did a solid job defending their point guard. He turned it up a notch on defense. With Kenny coming back soon, the emergence of Bina really opens up some depth on defense."

With a big win over city rival North Quincy, the Presidents not only stopped a losing skid, they may have also gotten back on track.

Not to say the team is not working hard to get better, but the win should have a ripple effect on the rest of season.

"We enjoyed the win over North, but we held a three-hour practice on Sunday to get ready for Pembroke HS (Tuesday night)," said Parry. "This city is so close and everyone knows everyone, so losing to NQ three times last year hurt. Winning feels great but the season is not over. I am sure the next time we play them they will be ready."

Notes: NQ's Tim Stille (21 pts.) and RJ Barden (14 pts.) led all Raider scorers... NQHS honored longtime athletic department fixture Christopher J. "Dexter" Dolan, who died in July at age 41, in a pregame ceremony. A moment of silence was held before tip-off... QHS and NQHS are scheduled to meet again on Feb. 7... Quincy will play Rockland HS on the road Friday at 6:30 p.m. and North will play next against Hingham HS at home Friday at 6:30 p.m.

Six Quincy Youngsters Advance To District 'Hoop Shoot' Championships

Over the school vacation, six Quincy boys and girls not only took first place in the City of Quincy Elks "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Contest by advancing to the district championship (Jan. 17, Marshfield HS), but also took one step closer to becoming national champions.

The Quincy Lodge of Elks #943 sponsored the "Hoop Shoot", with supervision from the Quincy Recreation Department staff.

The six Quincy champions were from three different age groups and two of the winners were past winners in previous Quincy finals.

Repeat winners included Colin Evans, who is making his fifth trip to the district championship and, Kayleen Lenihan, who will be making her third trip to the finals.

Other Quincy champions for 2008-2009 are Kevin Keenan and Bridget Durgin in the 8-9 age group; Christopher Mann in the 10-11 age group and Kerry Phelan in the 12-13 age group.

All six-city champions will move ahead to compete in the district "Hoop Shoot" competition on Jan. 17 at the Marshfield High School gymnasium.

In this nationwide event, over three million youngsters are involved in the first round of free throw shooting. The first round included shooting 25 free throws with the best shooters moving onto the second round and the QRD, in partnership with the Quincy Lodge of Elks #943 under the Exalted Ruler James Folke, directed this round.

Quincy Lodge of Elks "Hoop Shoot" chairman Ed Miller and Folke presented the trophies to all the champions and the finalists after the city championship. According to Director of Recreation Barry J. Welch, "the free throw contest is just one example of the involvement of the Quincy Elks reaching into the community to contribute to the quality of life of youth growing up in Quincy. We are always thankful for their generosity."

The runner-ups in each category who received second place trophies were Liana Cunningham and Ethan Sit in the 8-9 age group; Hannah Donovan and Mark Munroe in the 10-11 group and David Cooper in the 12-13 age group.

Third place trophies were given to Naomi Kane and Kyle Murphy in the 8-9 age group; Julianna Kane and Timothy Murphy in the 10-11 age group and Tim Keenan in the 12-13 age group.

Other boys and girls who won their local gym contests were Kelsie Dwyer and Sadaf Tauhid in the girls' 8-9 age group; Frank Wahlberg, Curtis Frazier, Jacob Bianculi, Erick Isidoro, Jakieh Blevins and Bryan Hanly in the boys' 8-9 age group; Julia Nelson, Chrissy Norton, Katarina Pollastretti, Brenna Burke, Annie Waterman, Katryna Veasey, Laina Frazier, Kayleen Kozlowski and Allison Della Barba in the girls' age 10-11 age group; Thomas Jaehrig, Hunter Weinberger, Tim Durgin, Scott Bausener, Anthony DeBello, Michael McNeley, Jo-Jo McArdle and Josh Quinlan in the boys' age 10-11 age group; Colleen Jenner in the girls' age 12-13 age group and Alex Ngan, Anthony Green, Xavier Romero, Marc Maskell, Jonathan Fabian, Kyle Richardson, Patrick Janiero, Devin Bragdon and Chris Bock in the boys' age 12-13 group.

Better Business Bureau's Tips To Make Most Of Exercise Goals This Year

With 2009 in full swing, many people are looking to make the most of their New Year's resolutions.

Better Business Bureau reminds anyone looking to make changes in the New Year to be cautious and educated consumers by doing their homework at bbb.org. For those who pledge to start exercising more or who are looking for love, BBB offers these helpful tips:

Joining a gym?

Determine your fitness goals. What are your fitness goals (build endurance, increase strength, become a better tennis player?) and how will you accomplish them (swimming, weight-training, yoga?). If you have a serious health condition, consult with a medical professional when setting your fitness goals.

Consider your budget. What monthly amount can you comfortably devote to physical fitness?

Shop around. Ask friends and coworkers to recommend facilities and pick three that appear to align with your fitness goals and budget.

Check out the facilities. Visit each club on a day and time that you plan to use it to see how crowded it is. Is it conveniently located? Do you like the equipment, classes, amenities (child care, personal trainers) and hours of operation? Are you comfortable with the atmosphere and clientele? Note the cleanliness and condition of the equipment, workout area and locker room, as well as staff member availability.

Talk to members. Are they satisfied? Have they experienced any problems?

Interview staff. Are staff members friendly and helpful? Ask about their qualifications, certification and education.

Review the contract. Walk away from clubs that pressure you to sign on the spot. In fact, take a sample contract home to read it thoroughly. Does it list all services and facilities and the hours of operation? Is everything that the salesperson promised in the contract? What is included in the monthly fee and what's extra? What's the total cost and payment schedule, including enrollment fees and finance charges?

Membership details. How long is the membership term? Can you go month-to-month? Some facilities give customers several days to reconsider after signing the contract; if so, get it in writing.

Cancellation policy. What are your cancellation rights if you move away, are injured, or the club closes? Will the unused portion of your membership be refunded? Those details should be in the contract.

Finally, find out if the club meets state bonding and licensing requirements. And, always check with the BBB for a report on the facility before making a purchasing decision.

Looking for love online?

Don't fall in love with the advertising. Beware of claims such as, an exclusive network of people, for sincere daters only, and beautiful singles just like you. Recently, BBB's National Advertising Division provided a decision in a case between rival online services, requiring one to stop advertising that its methods were based on "the latest science of attraction."

Do your homework. Check out the company with BBB (bbb.org) to make sure it has a history of satisfying customers and resolving complaints.

Don't give in to high-pressure sales tactics. Sales associates may tell people that a low price is only good for that day and ask them to sign a contract immediately. People should take the contract home, read it carefully and make sure they understand what they are signing up and paying for.

Know how to break up. Consumers should not assume that they will stop being billed once the contract runs out. Many online dating sites automatically renew memberships and there are steps that must be taken, such as calling the company, to keep from being billed again.

dating services, consumers can access BBB Reliability Reports™ free-of charge at bbb.org

Swollen Ankles Usually Treatable if Cause is Found

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I retain fluid in my ankles and feet. They swell during the day. After a night's sleep they're normal size. I have taken a diuretic for a whole year, but it's no better. Why? My doctor has thrown his hands up at this. — M.P.

ANSWER: The swelling will get better only if you find its cause. If both feet and ankles are swollen, the possibilities include heart failure, kidney disorders, liver cirrhosis, medicines and, strangely enough, the overuse of diuretics (water pills). One-sided ankle and foot swelling has another list of causes. The swelling gets better at night because when you're in the horizontal position, fluid returns to the circulation.

With heart failure, people have other symptoms — breathlessness when they're up and about. Often, they awaken at night, panting for air.

Kidney disease is detectable with a few simple lab tests.

Liver cirrhosis can be confirmed by a physical examination and lab testing.

Medicines that cause swelling (edema) constitute a pretty long list. On that list are the popular NSAID drugs, like Advil, Aleve, Motrin and Indocin. Female hormones also can bring on swelling. So can the blood pressure medicines called calcium blockers.

Diuretics, when used for a long time and for inappropriate reasons, lead to fluid retention, just the opposite of what they're supposed to do.

On your own, cut was back on salt, not just salt-laden use but salty foods like luncheon meats and commercial soups. Elevate your legs as many times during the day as you can and for as long as you can. Wear elastic hose. Ask your doctor if it would be all right to take a vacation from your diuretic. And have you given any thought to finding a doctor who keeps his arms down?

The booklet on swelling — edema — explains this common condition, its causes and treatments. To obtain a copy write Dr. Donohue — No. 106, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Allow four weeks for delivery.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Make 50-Plus The Best Years Of Your Life

(ARA) - You're getting older, it's true. But it's how you get older that matters. Being afraid of it is like being afraid of getting more channels on your TV. It can be a little disorienting at first (do I watch ESPN 1, ESPN 2 or ESPN 3?), but all the new choices offer a great opportunity for exploration.

Here are five ideas for getting started:

1. Improve your golf swing.

There's no reason that enjoying the great outdoors can't wrap up with a steak and martini at the 19th hole. But just so your swing is not mistaken for a mild seizure you might want to work the kinks out of your game.

"Three components are a must: strength, endurance and flexibility, especially flexibility," says Stacey Camacho, golf pro at Mountain Dell Golf Course outside Park City, Utah. "Stretching, yoga or other fitness exercises help to increase your flexibility, improve your control and boost awareness of your surroundings on the course."

2. Become the master of the grill.

Now is a perfect time to try your hand at mastering that signature grilling recipe you've been working on, without sacrificing flavor or your arteries.

As celebrity chef Bobby Flay notes, just brush on a little olive oil, sprinkle a little salt and pepper, and grill away. This will allow the natural flavor of the food to come through.

Sharpening your barbecuing skills may also be just the reason you've been looking for to get that new grill. You know the one.

3. Keep your relationship going strong.

Make the most of your relationship. In fact, why not make the most of it as often as possible, in every room of the house, if you get our meaning. It's achievable.

"As men get older, they often experience changes in their overall health, causing their sexual health and performance to suffer. Issues may arise simply because of age or weight gain, or bad habits may be catching up with them," says Dr. Marcus Laux, a naturopathic physician and health science advisor to LIFE SPAN labs. "After 50, a safe, natural sexual health supplement like the botanically based 112 Degrees, combined with some simple lifestyle changes, can be a very effective way to enhance sexual performance."

4. Turn yourself into a beer connoisseur.

Nothing goes quite so well with your grilled masterpiece than a cold beer. But what kind of beer, that's the question. The microbrew revolution has introduced a wide range of styles, from India pale ales to imperial stouts to Belgian lambics.

So spend a little quality time with your local beer seller. Sample a different style each week. Do taste tests to see which brewery you like. To help preserve the beer's taste, store it in a cool, dark place at about 40 degrees F.

5. Relax the mind, body and spirit. Go fishing.

Let's be honest, fishing is not really about the fish. If you hook one, great, but if you don't you've at least caught a few hours with no phones, no TV, no traffic. It's just you, the quiet, and whatever you've got stocked in the RV fridge. It can also be a great way to share time with family or friends, without having to deal with their kids.

Growing older is unavoidable, but isn't it the second half of the game that really matters? So get out, get fit and get busy exploring the possibilities.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A BETTER SMILE

When crooked, overlapping, or chipped teeth detract from a smile, it may only take a few subtle alterations to the teeth to improve how the whole smile looks. Tooth contouring and reshaping are cosmetic techniques that can make a big difference while only requiring a single visit to the dentist. With a few deft touches, the dentist can change the shape, length, or position of teeth with minimal (if any) discomfort to the patient. A sanding drill or laser may be utilized to remove small amounts of surface enamel gradually, after which abrasive strips are slid back and forth between the teeth to shape their surfaces. Finally, teeth are smoothed and polished to yield the final results.

With a little dental contouring, you can make a huge difference in the way you feel about your smile. Good cosmetic dentistry can give you a smile that is the envy of others. We stress good oral hygiene and preventive dentistry for the whole family. The recommendations we make are always in the best interest of our patients. Patient education and awareness are keys to prevention and early detection of dental problems. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are committed to providing you with the best possible dental care in a warm and caring environment. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Tooth contouring and reshaping may be combined with bonding to build up areas of the teeth.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Perhaps it would be wise if everyone of us examined our basic philosophy of life once in a while and asked ourselves how sound it is. If it is based on self or selfishness, it is unsound. If it is based on good will, helpfulness, kindness, right living, and good works, it is sound.

Legend says that on one occasion General Robert E. Lee came suddenly upon one of his young officers gazing at himself in the mirror with obvious pleasure and admiration. "You must be the happiest man in the world," said Lee. "Why do you say that, Sir?" asked the soldier. "Because you are in love with yourself, and have no rival in your affection," replied Lee.

We do not know if this story is true, but it reflects a truth. The surest way to lose the love of others is to devote all our love to ourself. And the more intense our self-affections becomes, the surer we can be that no one else will share it. But unfortunately for humanity, the reverse process is equally true. Unselfish affection for others inevitably draws affection in return. The man who can forget himself in his interest in the welfare of others is safe in forgetting himself, for others will not forget him. Love for others is the key to human happiness that is within the reach of all. It does not depend upon riches, no education, nor power, nor social position. It relies within the grasp of anyone who, in the midst of others, will hold out to them the hand of love and fellowship.

Epiphany Lights At Union Congregational

As the dark nights of winter continue after Christmas, the Rev. Martha Swanson, Outreach Minister of Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston, decided a little night light for the community was in order.

As Pastor Jack Swanson was about to direct Sexton Mark Goodwin to begin taking down the beautiful Creche set on the church law and the festive Christmas lights, she prevailed upon him to leave the white lights along the perimeter of the church until Ash Wednesday and the beginning of Lent.

"People need the light of Christ year round," said the Rev. Swanson. "People need the light of Christ year round. Perhaps, especially in these troubling times of darkness, our lights will point to The Light, Jesus Christ."

Sunday services at Union Congregational Church are held at 10 a.m. The public is invited to attend.

Tanglewood Marionettes To Perform Chinese Folktale

Tanglewood Marionettes will perform the Chinese folktale "The Dragon King" on Martin Luther King Day, Monday, Jan. 19 at 11 a.m. at Christ Church, 12 Quincy Ave., Quincy Center.

Admission to the show is free.

The Dragon King is a marionette-based underwater fantasy adapted from Chinese folklore. The show features an intrepid Grandmother who journeys to the bottom of the sea to seek the Dragon King, ruler of all things water, for the answers as to why he has forsaken the land above to a long and terrible drought.

Those planning to attend are encouraged to advise the church how many they intend to bring to this performance via the event registration link on the website: www.ChristChurchQuincy.org or by calling 617-773-0310.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Romantic aspects are high at this time for single Aries looking for love. Warm and fuzzy feelings are also at enhanced levels for Rams and Ewes in paired relationships.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week favors what Taureans do on — namely, love and money. Look for more meaningful relationships for both singles and pairs, as well as an improved financial outlook.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) All lingering shards of that recent bout with boredom are dissipated as you eagerly accept a challenging offer. Your positive mood persuades others to join you in this venture.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might need validation for a possible solution to a situation involving someone close to you. Consider asking a trusted friend or relative to help you with this problem.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Investigate carefully before agreeing to assist a friend or colleague with a personal problem. There might be hidden factors that could emerge later that will create problems for you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your decision to work with an associate rather than go it alone, as you first proposed, brings an unexpected bonus. Be careful not to be judgmental. Allow for free and open discussion.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A loved one's health problem could, once again, make demands on your time and attention. But this time, make some demands of your own, and insist that others pitch in and help.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time for the traditionally staid Scorpion to plan adjustments in your day-to-day schedules. Be more flexible and allow for more impromptu, off-the-cuff actions.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Avoid creating unnecessary fuss over a situation you don't approve of. If it's going to work, it will do so despite your objections. If it fails, it will do so without a push from you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Working with a trusted colleague could open your mind to exploring some considerations you previously dismissed out of hand. The weekend brings news from a loved one.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resolving a recent problem leaves you in a good position to strengthen your influence on how things get done. But continue to encourage ideas and suggestions from others.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new friend suggests an interesting opportunity. But check it out before you snap at it. It might be a good deal for some people, but it might not work in helping you reach your goals.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of helping people solve their problems, making you a most-respected counselor and trusted friend.

60's Dress A Hit At Neighborhood Club Party

Nearing the century mark in age, the venerable Neighborhood Club of Quincy recently took a nostalgic look back at the 1960s with a party featuring the dress of the period 40 years ago. Peter and Patricia Donadio won the prize for the best costume, wearing the look of bikers in black leather jackets and chains.

The Neighborhood Club was established in 1916 as a social gathering place and has since fulfilled that promise by settling in as a good neighbor in the quiet President's Hill section of Quincy.

BIKERS' DRESS worn by Patricia and Peter Donadio (right) won the prize for best costume at '60s night at the Neighborhood Club. Sue and Jim Eagan are at left.

Security Breach Shuts Gates

Quincy Democrats At Obama Inaugural But Not Close Enough

By TOM HENSHAW

A trio of Democrats from Quincy got an up close and personal view of the inauguration of President Barack Obama Tuesday --- well, almost.

Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro, former Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner and Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott had seat tickets but were shut out at the gate.

"We got there about 7:30 a.m.," said McDermott, "and we waited for hours. But there was a security breach right in front of us. Somebody sneaked in through our gate and they shut it down."

"We ended up watching the inaugural from Senator Kennedy's office. He reserved a room in his building and we watched the inauguration from indoors.

"We were told there were about 10,000 who were unable to get in. One whole section of the stands was vacant."

A fourth member of the Quincy delegation, Nancy Noble of Harwich, former secretary to Mayor Arthur Tobin, managed to get in on a ticket that seated her with Congressman William Delahunt's staff.

Failure to view the ceremonies in person didn't really matter to McDermott.

"Just to be in Washington on such a day was quite an experience," he said. "The smiles on people's faces. It was exciting. We were watching history in the making. We will never see anything like this again."

Meets With Koch On Planned Multi Projects

Delahunt Vows Strong Support For City Stimulus

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Congressman William Delahunt pledges to support Quincy projects when the billions of dollars from a proposed Economic Recovery Act (ERA) start flowing out of Washington.

Delahunt called the potential $825 billion ERA a Marshall Plan for America designed to "jump-start the economy" during a press conference at City Hall with Mayor Thomas Koch last week.

Topping Delahunt's list of potential local targets are the revitalization of Quincy Center, as well as funds for school buildings, Quincy Medical Center, and waterfront development aimed at making Quincy a gateway for coastal tourism.

Now is the time to overhaul this country's infrastructure and help revive the private sector, according to Delahunt who promised to do "as much as I can" to keep Quincy in the loop for federal funds.

Koch has already submitted 15 projects totaling $125 million that could be "shovel ready" in 180 days to Lt. Gov. Timothy Murray.

Koch has also lined up an additional 13 projects totaling $162 million that could be "shovel ready" in 180 to 360 days and two renewable energy projects gauged at $15 to $20 million are in the concept stage.

"We want to make sure Quincy is in the queue," Koch said of the city's public works proposals delivered to Murray on Jan. 15.

"Working together is so important," said Delahunt of the need for federal, state and local agencies to plan together.

"We're working with the governor's office to discuss benchmarks," Delahunt said, noting that funds will be dispersed first to "those areas prepared to be 'shovel ready.'"

Koch said the administration is grateful for Delahunt's support.

"This kind of economic activity is going to stimulate the private sector," said Delahunt.

"We built highways, bridges and hospitals (in Iraq)," said Delahunt who estimated the cost to American taxpayers for those projects at $1 trillion dollars. He said it's time to hone in on this country's infrastructure.

In his discussion, Delahunt focused on specific areas of interest, such as Quincy Center development, Quincy Medical Center and the waterfront.

Downtown Development

"Its time has come," said Delahunt who recalled that Quincy Center revitalization was on the agenda when he served as a city councillor in the 1970's.

"The mayor has a plan for downtown (designed to) save and create jobs," said Delahunt, adding, "At the right time, he's going to (unveil) his plans."

Quincy Medical Center

"We have a great hospital here. It's the city's largest employer," said Delahunt, citing the need for accessible high quality health care and jobs for residents.

"The mayor has indicated the health of Quincy Medical Center is important to the health of the city."

Waterfront development

"There will be money to make the City of Quincy a 'Gateway' city for tourism and the 'Cultural Coast from Salem to Provincetown."

Delahunt believes the waterfront project will increase tourism and private investments.

Last September and October, Delahunt voted against stimulus packages prepared during the Bush Administration, charging there was no oversight or transparency in the original bills aimed at bailing out financial institutions.

The current proposals include oversight and clear lines intended to safeguard government spending, according to Delahunt.

"We've dug ourselves into this hole. There's going to be a lot of pain to go around."

"I feel confident we can meet the challenges," said Delahunt, adding there will be difficult times ahead, considering the debt of $11 trillion that's been left by the past administration.

Delahunt and most Democrats fully expect the stimulus package to pass Congress immediately.

While majorities in the Senate and the House support different approaches to an economic recovery plan, few doubt a plan will pass.

An ERA is President Barack Obama's first priority and Congress has a Democratic majority.

Martin Luther King Jr. Day Speaker:

Recruit Young People For 'Incredible Challenges' Ahead

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Boston University Dean Kenneth Elmore, keynote speaker at the city's Martin Luther King breakfast Monday, urged the city's Human Rights Commission to recruit young people for the "incredible challenges" ahead.

In his address, Elmore repeated the theme, "The world is different today," alluding to the imminent inauguration of President Barack Obama, the country's first black president, and attributing Obama's success to the impact of America's youth.

Following his speech, Elmore received a standing ovation from the more than 250 persons attending the event, the 13th Annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast Celebration at North Quincy High School.

Quincy's Human Rights Commission headed by Ann Yeomans, Chairperson, sponsors the annual event.

Rev. David Hefling, Rector, St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church offered the interfaith blessing which was translated by Eric Ling of the Episcopal Chine Center.

Obama's election was fueled by the enthusiasm of "young people who finally said, 'Let's be part of the system again,'" said Elmore.

change, Elmore who is black said, "I certainly wouldn't be here today and neither would Barack Obama."

Elmore traced such changes inspired by King to a massive citizens' movement fueled by the energy of youth.

Dr. King proposed the vision, "You can be great right now," and brought people together and gave young people a sense of purpose and destiny, according to Elmore.

"The fruits of Dr. King's labor will pay true dividends in the inauguration of Barack Obama," said Elmore.

Elmore outlined such urgent issues as poverty, health care and international disputes facing President Barack Obama from his first day in office and said Obama will need all the help he can get and involving young people is essential for success.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 25, 1905, at the Premier Mine near Pretoria, South Africa, a 3,106-carat diamond is discovered during a routine inspection by the mine's superintendent. Weighing 1.33 pounds and christened the "Cullinan," it was the largest diamond ever found.

• On Jan. 22, 1912, Florida East Coast Railroad opened, running between Key West and the mainland. The railroad closed in 1935. Three years later, the roadway was paved, bringing automotive traffic to the Florida Keys for the first time.

• On Jan. 23, 1922, at Toronto General Hospital, 14-year-old Canadian Leonard Thompson becomes the first person to receive an insulin injection as treatment for diabetes. The teenager improved dramatically, and the University of Toronto immediately gave pharmaceutical companies license to produce insulin, free of royalties.

• Jan. 24, 1935, canned beer makes its debut. The Gottfried Krueger Brewing Company delivered 2,000 cans of Krueger's Finest Beer and Krueger's Cream Ale to Richmond, Va. Ninety-one percent of the drinkers approved of the beer, driving Krueger to give the green light to further production.

• On Jan. 20, 1945, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the only president to be elected to three terms in office, is inaugurated to his fourth term. In 1947, the 22nd Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was passed, limiting future presidents to a maximum of two elected terms in office, or one elected term if the president already served more than two years of another president's elected term.

• On Jan. 19, 1953, episode No. 56, "Lucy Goes to the Hospital," of hit 1950s sitcom "I Love Lucy" airs for the first time. The episode, in which Lucy Ricardo, famously played by Lucille Ball, gives birth to a son, was one of the most popular in television history.

• On Jan. 21, 1977, U.S. President Jimmy Carter grants an unconditional pardon to hundreds of thousands of men who evaded the draft during the Vietnam War. In total, some 100,000 young Americans went abroad in the late 1960s and early '70s to avoid serving in the military.

Remembering JFK's Inaugural

The inauguration of President Barack Obama Tuesday brought me back 48 years to Jan. 20, 1961.

To frigid Washington and the inauguration of John F. Kennedy and the fond memories still fresh today.

The sub-freezing 22-degree temperature, snow and bitter winds kept the crowd at an estimated million-many who didn't arrive until later in the day as the temperature rose a bit.

But only some 20,000 reportedly actually saw JFK take his oath of office.

Four of us were lucky to be among those 20,000: then Quincy City Clerk John Gillis, his wife, Vi, my wife, Dorothy, and myself.

There were others from Quincy there. Among them Dick Koch, Kennedy's Quincy campaign coordinator and his wife, Simone.

Dick was close to Kennedy, who became an honorary member of the Koch Club. He had a disdain for hats but Dick treasured a photo of him smiling and wearing a Koch Club baseball cap.

John and I were there with our wives thanks to Congressman Jim Burke who provided four tickets. Two sets of two in different locations.

It was frigid cold. Nearly eight inches of snow had fallen overnight and we sat there, bundled up and with our feet in it.

But no one seemed to mind. This was history and we were there, witnessing it. The thrill of a Massachusetts native son raising his right hand to become President of the United States.

We stayed at the Howard Johnson Motel in Springfield, VA, outside Washington. The night before the inaugural, Jim Burke called to invite us to the Gala headed by Frank Sinatra. Because of the weather there were extra tickets suddenly available.

"Come on in," he said.

We nudged to the edge of the highway and didn't move an inch. All you could see ahead were red tail-lights on stalled cars as far as you could see. They really didn't know how to cope with snow back then. We went back to the motel to watch it on TV.

Kennedy was sworn in by Chief Justice Earl Warren, the 35th and at age 43, the youngest ever elected President.

Cardinal Richard Cushing gave the invocation. Marian Anderson sang the National Anthem.

Poet Robert Frost was reading one of his poems and bothered by the bright sun. Lyndon Johnson, who had just taken office as the new vice president, leaned over to shield him.

Among those on the platform were:

Outgoing President Dwight Eisenhower, then 70. Departing Vice President Richard Nixon whom Kennedy had defeated in one of the closest Presidential elections. Nixon was among the first to shake hands with Kennedy after he took his oath and former President Harry Truman.

The Kennedy family was there, including the rarely seen Joseph P. Kennedy, the President's father, Ambassador to England under Franklin Delano Roosevelt. He and JFK arrived wearing toppers but soon discarded them.

And, of course, there was the co-star of the day: Jacqueline Kennedy, looking radiantly beautiful. She was, the press described, as wearing an olive fitted suit, simple beige coat with a fur collar and pillbox hat. That pillbox was a hat. She would become the style setter for women across America.

There were Hollywood celebrities there, too. When John and Vi rejoined us after the inaugural Vi was beaming: "Guess who we sat next to - Gene Kelly." (The popular movie star and dancer was one of the headliners at the Gala.)

"I gave you the wrong tickets," I told her.

JFK and Obama share historic Presidential "firsts." Kennedy, the first Roman Catholic elected president and Obama the first African American.

Kennedy inspired people-especially the young and instilled confidence in the country-in his election campaign and his three short years in the White House.

Obama did; too, on the campaign trail-and hopefully will while he is the new occupant of the White House.

Kennedy, it was reported, got right to work shortly after taking his oath. He stepped into a Senate office to sign the official nomination papers of his 10 cabinet members.

And sent a message to the White House staff to be there at 8:45 a.m. the next morning.

Obama is eager to get to work. And has a lot of it ahead of him. Challenges! Challenges! Challenges! And campaign promises to keep.

JFK's stirring words in his Inaugural Address still ring out today:

"Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation.

"And so my fellow Americans, ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country."

The torch is now in the hands of Barack Obama, age 47, 44th President.

May he hold it high.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1909 postcard showing the back of St. Mary's Church on Crescent Street in West Quincy. This view is from what is now Fr. McMahon Drive. The basement portion of the church as shown here was built in 1901; Archbishop Williams laid the cornerstone. The top of the church was added in 1917. In the left background is the original church building built in 1841. It was built for the Irish immigrants who came here to work in the granite quarries. It was dedicated by Bishop Fenwick as the first Catholic Church south of Boston and served people as far as south as Plymouth. Later known as St. Joseph's Hall that building has been long gone. In the left foreground is a corner of St. Mary's Cemetery. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Senior Center And Track Community Ignored

On Nov. 13, 2007, a meeting was held in the Park and Recreation Building at Pageant Field. The senior community was invited to start the process for a Senior Center.

The participants were to provide information/analysis, manage own small groups, develop concepts/ideas and seek common ground and action.

One thing that was abundantly clear, all the participants wanted the Senior Center at Pageant Field. Second, the proposed track at Pageant Field would be a magnet to draw seniors to the Center year-round for exercise and planned events.

It is now obvious that what the seniors wanted was not what the Mayor wanted. No other meetings with the seniors for the purpose of discussing location and what the Senior Center would offer was ever held. So much for community involvement: instead it was fast forward to the Myles Standish School on East Squantum Street.

Tom Clasby, Director of Elder Services, said in August 2008, "the building (Myles Standish School) is in good shape. We will be open by Thanksgiving."

On January 12, 2009, Mr. Clasby and other city officials reported that the building needed new plumbing and sewerage work, new electrical systems, new windows, new fire alarm system, new flooring, painting, drywall, handicap accessible work to meet codes and standards, asbestos removal work and new paving of the parking area, etc., etc. That is poor planning! All of this to avoid any building or remodeling at Pageant Field where the majority of the citizens of Quincy want to Senior Center and track. This is poor government!

If anyone wants to contact me regarding this article, I will be at Castle Island with the rest of Quincy's active seniors complaining about my $720 tax increase.

Walter Monahan
Quincy Senior
(Editor's note: Mr. Monahan says he was misquoted in an article regarding the Senior Center in last week's Quincy Sun. "I did not say I wanted a heated inside track. What I want is the surface at the outdoor track heated for year round use.")

Remembering Lt. Kevin Kelley

On Friday afternoon, January 9, I passed a TV at work showing images of a crash scene involving a Boston Fire ladder truck. The picture looked awful. Then, I saw that it was Ladder 26, the "Huntington Express" next to Wentworth.

I know many of the guys there including Lt. Kevin Kelley, who I have known for almost 20 years. He was a great guy, a great firefighter and a "camera ham," which he showed the whole country a few years back on the Discovery Channel on "Firehouse USA Boston," featuring firefighters from Ladder 26 and Engine 37. He seemed to love the camera like a moth to the flame. Being a firefighter, that analogy seemed quite appropriate.

The both of us talked about retirement with the emphasis on "talk." He wasn't planning on retirement. Neither was I. We loved doing what we did. He was a firefighter right to the end. He often wondered how I could spend 36 years with mental health. I wondered how he could still run into flames all the time.

I will miss him.

Furor Over Lunch Issue At Snug Harbor School

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mounting furor over the proposed hot lunch program for Snug Harbor School is expected to climax at a public hearing before the Quincy City Council's Finance Committee in February.

"At this time it is not possible to set an exact date," Finance Committee Chairman J. Vincent Smyth said. "There is some work to be done in advance, but the hearing will be held sometime in February."

Under the proposed program, 51 percent of the 720 students at Snug Harbor would receive their lunches free.

The 49 percent of the students who do not qualify for a free lunch would pay 30 cents per meal.

When the request of the School Committee for a $36,000 appropriation for the purchase of equipment for the Snug Harbor Lunch Program came up at the Council meeting, it was referred to the Council's Finance Committee.

One school committee member said that the reaction of people across the city to the lunch proposal was one of "public outrage."

RELOCATION OF 36 FAMILIES FOR NEW SCHOOL

Efforts to relocate the 36 families affected by the construction of the new Lincoln-Hancock School will get underway Feb. 1.

At that time, Leonard Purpura and other relocation officers will be officially open for business at the Southwest Community Center at Brewers Corner.

Some 85 persons are represented in the 36 families to be relocated so that school construction can start.

In November, the City Council voted the sum of $342,000 to be set aside for possible property damage should suits be filed against the city for land taking by eminent domain.

THE 21ST ANNUAL Quincy Lunar New Year Festival, featuring a variety of free and festive programs, will take place Sunday, Feb. 8 at North Quincy High School from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

6,000 Expected To Attend Celebration Feb. 8

Quincy Lunar New Year Festival Welcomes The Year Of The Ox

The 21st Quincy Lunar New Year Festival will take place Sunday, Feb. 8 at North Quincy High School from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Last year's festival attracted an audience of over 6,000, making it one of the most popular and largest celebrations of the Lunar New Year in Massachusetts.

Chinese New Year begins Jan. 26 and is the most important holiday for Chinese families as it is a time of reunion and thanksgiving. Each year is governed by one of the twelve animals of the Chinese Zodiac. According to the Zodiac, this year is the Year of the Ox, an animal known for being dependable, calm, modest, and for having an open and honest nature.

"The 2009 festival will mark not only the Year of the Ox but also the community's 21st year of celebrating our diversity, tradition, and unity in Quincy," said May Cheung, co-chairperson of the festival. "We hope to build on the success of our previous festivals to bring together the community to celebrate and increase awareness of Asian cultures, and to better serve the needs of Quincy's Asian-American Community."

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. (QARI) invites everyone of all ages and backgrounds to celebrate this annual Lunar New Year festival with a variety of free and festive programs including the traditional lion dance, an array of Asian food, and traditional and modern performances by musicians and dance troupes. Additionally, children are invited to enjoy face-painting, games, crafts and the popular Red Envelope ceremony at the end of the day.

"This year's festival promises to continue a proud tradition in Quincy of bringing together many segments of the community for fun, food, and celebration of Asian culture. The enormous growth of this festival over the years is a testament not only to the dedication and skills of the community volunteers and sponsors; but also to the tremendous pride Quincy has in its diversity," said festival Co-Chairperson Caroline Donohue.

The festival is supported by Grand Sponsors, Comcast and State Street Bank as well as many others.

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. is a not for profit organization dedicated to promoting the development of the Asian-American community.

For more information about the Lunar New Year Festival or QARI, contact QARI at 617-472-2200 or visit www.quincyasianresources.org.

'Redbelt' Fight Film At Crane Library

A free screening of the fight film "Redbelt", directed by David Mamet will be shown tomorrow (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The book illustrates the west side of the Los Angeles fight world.

The New York Times said of the book: "A satisfying, unexpectedly involving B-movie that owes as much to old Hollywood as to Greek tragedy. That may sound like a perilous combination, but the film's visual moderation, contained scale and ambition keep it well tethered. It's a fight film, purely if not simply, which of course also means it's about the struggle to live."

It is rated PG for strong language.

It is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Veterans Benefit Workshop At Atria Marina Place

Local veterans and the public are invited to attend a free workshop focusing on available benefits at 5:30 p.m., Monday, Jan. 26, at Atria Marina Place, 4 Seaport Dr., Quincy.

The seminar will follow a 5:30 p.m. dinner for participants. Space is limited to 35 persons. Interested persons must register by calling 617-770-3264.

The workshop continues Atria's commitment to informing seniors of available benefits, according to Beth Klasskin, Public Relations Coordinator for Atria Senior Living Group.

"As part of our ongoing commitment to making eldercare more affordable, we are working to educate the local community about the availability of Aid and Attendance benefits for veterans," said Klasskin.

According to the United States Department of Veterans Affairs, about one quarter of the nation's population or approximately 70 million people are potentially eligible for VA benefits and services, because they are veterans, family members or survivors of veterans.

During the workshop, coordinators will review the eligibility criteria and show how thousands of families, even in cases of higher net worth, have become eligible for the benefits which offset the cost of care.

The Veterans Aid and Attendance benefit, one of the many benefits available through the Veterans Administration, offers eligible veterans or their surviving spouses a significant monthly pension, ranging from $1,056 to $1,949 per month tax-free.

To be eligible, veterans must have served 90 consecutive days or more with a least one day during a war-time period (World War II, Korea, etc.) and meet medical and financial eligibility criteria.

Atria Senior Living Group which operates the nation's fourth largest assisted living owner-operated group, accommodates 14,000 older persons in their facilities.

Golden Cake, Spice Cake With Oat Flour

Here are two recipes for cakes that my mother always used and that I have been baking for years. One is for golden cake and the other is a raisin spice cake.

The only difference is that instead of using white flour they are both made with oat flour for those who are allergic to white flour as some of our family members.

Oat flour can be purchased at the Good Health store in Quincy Center and sometimes in various supermarkets.

GOLDEN CAKE

11/4 cups sugar
1 stick of butter (or margarine) melted
2 3/4 cups oat flour
2 large eggs (unbeaten)
2/3 cup milk (Soy (Silk) milk can also be used)
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Cream the butter and sugar together until blended. Place the flour, salt, baking powder together in bowl. Now alternately add the dry ingredients with the milk and eggs and beat for one minute. Add the vanilla and mix for two minutes.

Bake in either two cake pans or one baking pan for 35 minutes or until a toothpick inserted in the cake comes out clean.

Here is a recipe for spice cake that has no milk or eggs, but it is truly so delicious, you won't miss either one. I have also used oat flour for this cake also.

RAISIN SPICE CAKE

2 cups water
1 cup raisins
1 stick butter or margarine
1 3/4 cups oat flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 1/4 cups sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ginger
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon cloves
1/2 cup of copped walnuts (optional)

Boil the water and raisins together for five minutes. Add the butter or margarine. Let cool slightly and then add all the other ingredients mixing it until well blended.

Pour into a greased baking dish of your choice. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 35 minutes. I usually use a pan that looks like a large muffin tin with four baking pans altogether in one pan, but any baking pan will do.

Recruit Young People For 'Incredible Challenges'

"He (Obama) can't do that by himself," Elmore said, after asking why the city's Human Rights Commission doesn't have 12-year olds, 20-year-olds and 40-year-old members.

In his conclusion, Elmore described his own delight in an unexpected and unplanned inaugural invitation that would put him on a train to Washington, D.C. that evening.

"We need to make sure to celebrate," said Elmore who said he had no hotel reservations or expectation of food anywhere.

It doesn't matter to Elmore who said, "I can't wait to soak up that atmosphere."

Elmore plans to tell his grandchildren about the event, buy a "nifty shirt and awful souvenirs."

Elmore himself has broken ground himself, offering new programs as B.U.'s Dean of Students, according to Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin who introduced Elmore to Monday's audience.

"He is without a doubt the most innovated, accessible and connected Dean of Students of any university in this nation, especially one with the dimension of Boston University," said Coughlin who described a recent national award presented to Elmore.

Coughlin, alumni of BU, also described King's close ties with Boston University where he studied and, where, in 1964, he donated some 80,000 items.

The city's Human Rights Commission sponsors the annual King tribute.

This year, the commission chose Kathy Quigley, Director of the Germantown Neighborhood Center and Attorney Tackey Chan, community leader, for special awards.

Senator Michael Morrissey praised Quigley and Chan as "two great people." Morrissey noted that Quigley's tough job is a year-round effort and constant in the city's most diverse neighborhood.

When introducing Chan, Morrissey described Chan's successful work at the State House, district attorney's office and sheriff's department and the need for Chan's knowledge in a changing city.

NQHS freshman Samantha Tan sang several solos for the event concluding with a rendition of "No Man Is An Island."

Youngsters from the Germantown Neighborhood Center Chorus won enthusiastic applause after their songs.

Thomas Fabrizio, Director of Constituent Services, was the moderator and introduced speakers. Commission member Frank Poon translated the speakers' comments into Cantonese for the audience.

Commission members include Yeomans, chairperson; Kumu Gupta, Vice Chairperson; Nancy McDonald, Secretary and Harvey Solomon, Treasurer.

Lt. Jeffrey Burrell, David Ezickson, Fabrizio, Edmund Grogan, Rev. Hefling, Dr. Joseph McDermott, Niel Orlando, Norfolk District Attorney's office, and Poon

Associate members include Steve Hennessey, Faye Reed, Peter Hilton and Marco Sandonato.

At Winter Commencement

Quincy College Confers 158 Degrees, Certificates

Over 500 people attended the Quincy College Winter Commencement on Saturday, January 10, 2009 at the Boston Marriott Hotel in Quincy, MA. The college conferred 158 degrees and certificates.

The ceremony opened with the traditional Pomp and Circumstance performed by the South Shore Brass. Elaine Beaupre, a Quincy College Nursing Faculty Member, acted as Mace Bearer, a distinction that is given to the Faculty Member of the Year. Beaupre is distinguished by three decades of service to the College.

The Commencement Address was delivered by Governor Jo-Ann Bragg, a member of the Quincy College Board of Governors and a past graduate of Quincy College. Governor Bragg has been a dedicated civic leader for the City of Quincy throughout the past twenty years. In her speech, Governor Bragg encouraged graduates to persevere in their goals, but be prepared with a backup strategy. At the end of her speech, Governor Bragg was presented with the Distinguished Alumna Award by President Martha Sue Harris.

President Harris and Patricia Vampatella, Vice President of Academic Affairs, oversaw the conferring of the degrees. The South Shore Brass concluded the ceremony with Pomp and Circumstance and the graduates of 2009 processed to the hotel lobby for photos with families and friends.

Koch Team Working On Scaled Down Budget

Mayor Thomas Koch's administration has identified cutbacks "in the millions of dollars" in the first stages of budget planning for the fiscal year that begins in July.

The mayor's budget team has been working on budget preparations for nearly a month, much earlier than is traditional, in anticipation of substantial cuts in state aid the city will likely suffer amid the ongoing state and national economic crisis.

"We are methodically looking at every department every service and every expense, knowing that cuts will be a certainty," Koch said. "We are attacking this crisis head-on, and we are prepared to make the tough decisions that will be required as we work through this crisis."

The work done to date to stabilize the City's finances will be critical to help City Hall weather the economic situation, according to the City's independent auditor, James Powers, who reported preliminary findings to the City Council on Tuesday night, Koch said.

With the city's local financial operations stabilized, much will depend on how much state aid will be cut. The administration's team has been working through scenarios that include 5, 10 and 15 percent cuts to local aid, which this year totaled $43 million to the City.

Those cuts will loom for the fiscal year beginning in July, but state officials have suggested that a round of mid-year cuts are likely forthcoming within the next month.

QCAP Offering Free Tax Help To Low-Income Taxpayers

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) is providing low income taxpayers of all ages with free tax counseling and tax return preparation at the Learning Links Technology Center, 1511 Hancock St.,

Quincy.

IRS-certified volunteers will help taxpayers prepare both federal and state tax returns (as applicable), and E-file the return for faster refunds. A special emphasis will be placed on helping taxpayers claim credits for which they may be eligible, including the Earned Income and Child Tax Credits, and the Massachusetts Circuit Breaker Credit for seniors.

This service will be provided by appointment only on Thursday evenings and Saturdays beginning Jan. 31 through April 11.

Call (617) 657-5345 to learn more and schedule an appointment. Eligibility limits do apply.

John Hancock Plunge Saturday At Wollaston Beach

Are you ready to take the Plunge for Interfaith Social Services?

The third annual John Hancock Birthday Plunge into the frigid waters off Wollaston Beach will take place Saturday, Jan. 24, at 9:30 a.m. with a goal of $9,000 to benefit the many programs at ISS.

The first two Plunges were sponsored by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and held at Mound Street Beach and last year raised more than $5,000.

This year the commission is joined by the Friends of Wollaston Beach and the State Department of Conservation and Recreation and the event moved to Wollaston Beach.

Participants can have their choice of five Plunges in varying degrees of icy challenge --- Full Plunger, Waist Wader, Knee Higher, Dunkin' Toe-nut and, new this year, "I Would If I Could."

No, the latter category was not created for the benefit of Leo Kelly, chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Anyone collecting pledges totaling more than $75 will receive a free Plunge

T-shirt. The shirts will also be available for sale at the Plunge.

Prizes will be awarded to the individuals who raise the most money and wear the most unusual "get-up," as well as the youngest and the oldest participants.

If you cannot participate in the Plunge itself, you can still join in the "I Would If I Could" category and obtain pledges to be part of the fund-raising effort.

ISS assists residents of Quincy, Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth and everyone is welcome to Plunge in.

For further information, contact Leo Kelly, chairman, at 617-773-1534, or Chickie Abdallah, event coordinator, at 617-479-2142.

Roos Campaign Event Tonight

Karl Roos, candidate for School Committee, will hold a campaign kick-off event at the Best Western, Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St. tonight (Thursday) from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

All are invited to attend and meet the candidate.

Council On Aging, Lions Seek Glasses

but can't afford them.

If you have glasses you no longer need and would like to donate them to a worthy cause, call the COA at 617-376-1506 for further information.

Historical Commission Public Hearing On Location Permits

The Historical Commission will consider permits for six locations at public hearings Monday, Jan. 26.

The meeting begins at 7 p.m. in the Robert E. Foy, Conference Room, 2nd fl., Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy.

The public hearings are scheduled as follows.

7:05 p.m. a public hearing on plans to rebuild a handicapped access ramp at Wickens & Troup Funeral Home, 26 Adams St.

7:20 p.m. CrewCuts, LLC, 1212 Hancock St. Request to install two vinyl decals on windows facing Hancock St. and Huntley Rd.

7:35 p.m. T&D Unisex Salon, 1450 Hancock St. Plans to re-letter existing 30" X 128" sign

7:50 p.m. Clinical One, Chestnut Street. Install one 36" X 96" X .040g white aluminum sign reading, "Clinical One National Health Care Professionals" and door lettering.

Also, on the agenda are requests by South Shore Bank, 138 Franklin St., for a change in the logo on the existing sign and by BC Banave Couture, 1358 Hancock St., to replace the existing sign by repairing and painting the existing wood background black and applying a 14" X 3/8" sign with acrylic gold letters.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Fire Prevention: Topics Of Discussion

I met up with a State Trooper from the State Fire Marshal's Office while our conversation gravitated toward some fire cause and origin issues. He has the opportunity to investigate many fires within many communities, while that experience affords first hand knowledge of common fire cause scenarios. Our discussion prompts me to share another look at some of those scenarios with you here.

We were discussing fire fatalities that came about from individuals sleeping with a space heater present and operating within a room. In one instance the space heater fell over, never shutting off as it was designed to do. It, like many other portable space heaters sold within Massachusetts, was advertised with a shutoff feature should the unit fall over. The insurance company, investigating the fire as well, eventually purchased a number of these same space heaters to determine the reliability of that "shut off" feature. They found that in every unit, they failed to operate as designed.

I have never written about this "fall over/shut off" feature where I don't believe that it should be relied upon. Placing a portable space heater on a stable base, 3 feet away from combustibles, and not left on while sleeping, nor left unattended within a room, should assure a reasonable level of safety. They should not be taken for granted; sleeping with one operating within a room is taking it for granted and is unacceptable. As my discussion with the trooper confirms, that practice has led to a number of fire fatalities within this State and that's unacceptable as well.

We also discussed the frequency of electrical fires associated with aquariums. Our discussion focused on the failure of extension cords used for heaters, circulators and lighting.

In my opinion, power strips are inappropriate for this use while the State Fire Marshal suggests that they are more appropriately used with electronics. If an extension cord must be used for aquarium appliances, make certain that it is of appropriate size for the electrical load.

Lastly, we discussed a new favorite of mine, cloth dryers. We both agreed; simple lint screen cleaning with each use is imperative, but over time, is not enough. Particularly with long-term excessive use, the exhaust hose should be removed and checked periodically. As evidenced by my own dryer, lint can bypass the screen and accumulate within the exhaust hose. Consequently, I just removed and replaced my own, as the trooper did as well. Fire investigation experience, and news reports of recent incidents caused by lint accumulation will prompt such action.

You can direct deliberate attention to all three of these issues if they apply. Take moments; be proactive about your own welfare and that of your loved ones. If you use a space heater, do so responsibly, make certain extension cords are appropriate for their use, use those homeowner skills and replace a dryer exhaust vent hose if needed. Thank you for doing so.

Think Before You Drink! Twist The Tap, Not The Cap

Joe Salvatore of Archbishop Williams H.S. wrote the following essay for a 2008 MWRA essay contest. It has been edited to fit this space.

We see it everywhere we go, society's obsession with bottled water. We see commercials showing beautiful water in babbling brooks, beautiful waterfalls in places so picturesque that we can only imagine them. Water so pure and clean it has to be delicious, cool and thirst quenching. We see the advertisements with athletes holding bottled water suggesting it will make us fit. We know it's expensive. It's a multi-billion dollar business! We see the weight-watching adults with bottled water suggesting that it might make us thin. The old quote for the dieter regarding food is, "A moment on the lips is a lifetime on the hips." Perhaps the new slogan for bottled water should be, "A moment on the lips, a thousand years in the land fill".

The impact of plastic waste is only a fraction of what we need to know about the bottled water we are drinking. Water is life. Plain and simple, without water there could be no life. We see it everywhere we live. It covers most of our planet Earth. We use it to drink, we use it to cook, we use it to clean, bathe and shower, and it flows down our drains and toilets and out of our homes back to the Earth. It is something we often take for granted. We don't think about where it's coming from, but we should.

We need water, but do we really need bottled water...? Is it really that good for us...? We hear people every day complaining about the price of gasoline but if we opened those little bottles of water and filled a gallon jug we would realize...we are paying a lot more for something that we could...by simply turning to our tap. The truth is, the total amount of energy that is used to fill that beautiful little plastic bottle of water, transport it, ...refrigerate it and then dispose of the empty plastic bottle could be the same amount of money and energy ... used to fill a one liter bottle one quarter full of oil. What a waste!

The bottled water companies know that we are fearful of polluted water supplies and they use our lack of safe water education to their advantage. What they don't tell us is there is no guarantee that the water in that bottle is any better tasting, any purer, any more regulated, protected or safer than what is flowing right out of the taps in our own homes. In fact it may have come from a municipal water supply itself instead of the beautiful spring pictured on the bottle and—the bottlers don't have to tell us.

We may hear that bottled water is color free, calorie free, caffeine free and sugar free, but ...what are we getting for "free" in those little bottles of water? Random tests of bottled water have found carcinogens, bacteria, mold, benzene, coliform, microbes and chemicals. Chemicals like phthalates have been detected in bottled water. It is the chemical used to soften the plastic of the bottle...

What will be the lasting effects of all this exposure to our bodies and our environment? The more we learn about bottled water the harder it seems to swallow. Is that bottle of water safer, healthier, or more pure? There is no guarantee. The only guarantee the bottled water companies can make is that their water will cost us a lot more money than what we get from the tap.

Is our tap water safe? Yes it is. The EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) is responsible for monitoring our tap water. Here in Massachusetts we know that our tap water is being treated, tested and safely delivered right to our tap. The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) and our local water departments test up to 500 water samples a week. They also check for over 120 different kinds of contaminants each year. The FDA (also) watches over the bottling of water. The problem is: if the water is bottled in the same state as where we are buying it, the FDA doesn't have to be involved at all. Who is protecting us? The EPA, along with state and local governments, has a lot more people spending a lot more time watching our water supply.

We know that yes, some bottled waters are regulated but, we can rest assured that when we turn on our tap all the water that flows is being regulated? We can go one step further to assure ourselves that our water is the best and our environment is safe by installing an in-home water purification system.

Stop! Think before you drink! Is the convenience of that bottled water today ... worth more than what we will leave behind for the Earth's future? Has ...laziness replaced our common sense? Some people hold their bottled water like ...a status symbol. The truth is, it's the symbol of an uneducated consumer. With each sip we are contributing to the 25.5 billion plastic water bottles being sold each year. The bottling plants use more than 17 million barrels of oil to make those plastic bottles. For our convenience the bottled water is delivered to ...stores requiring more fuel to transport... The bottling plants produce 2.5 tons of carbon dioxide producing the water. All of this is being done for our "convenience" ... at an outrageous cost to ... our pocketbooks and ... our environment.

We can replace what we lose from our pocketbooks but once we ruin our environment it is gone forever. Before you twist off the next cap research what that bottle means. Did you know it takes three liters of water to make one liter of bottled water? Does that make sense to you? Educate yourself. Protect yourself. Protect our Earth. Skip the bottles and use the tap. Drink up! It's safe!

Four Chaplains Sunday Recalls Heroes Of WWII

Acts of heroism and courage are not confined to those who bear arms in wartime and that reality will be on display Sunday, Feb. 1, or "Four Chaplains Sunday," as designated by Congress.

The story of the Four Chaplains of different faiths who willingly gave their lives to help save some 200 shipmates in the sinking of a troopship, is one of the most inspiring to come out of World War II.

It was early on the morning of Feb. 3, 1943. Most of the 900 men aboard were asleep as the troopship Dorchester wallowed through the icy seas off Greenland when suddenly it was struck by a torpedo.

Confusion reigned and the coolest heads aboard were those of the chaplains, who led the soldiers to boxes of life jackets, passed them out with boat drill precision and, when the boxes were empty, gave their own life jackets to others.

The four, lieutenants all, who gained chaplain immortality that terrible day were:

George Fox, a country boy from Vermont, a Methodist.

John P. Washington, a slum kid from Newark, a Catholic.

Alexander D. Goode, a city boy from Washington, a Jew.

Clark V. Poling, a parson's son from New York City, a Reform Church of America.

The work of the Four Chaplains helped save 209 of the Dorchester's complement and the last anyone saw of them they were standing on the slanted deck, arms locked together, all praying to the same God they worshipped in different ways.

Driver Suspended For Leaving Pre-Schooler On School Bus

School administrators have suspended a school bus driver after learning that a pre-school child was left, unattended, on a school mini-bus for at least 15 minutes.

According to reports from the school administration, the driver will be suspended until a full investigation and hearing is conducted.

The student should have been dropped off at Snug harbor School around 11:15 a.m. Jan. 16, but was found alone on the bus, 15 minutes later, at the department's Quantum Street bus depot.

Administrators have not yet announced the time or date for the department's hearing on the matter.

Sheriff's RSVP Program Seeking Volunteers

Norfolk county's RSVP Volunteer Program is currently seeking volunteers to assist the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office and Correctional Center Re-Entry Program at the House of Correction in Dedham.

The Re-Entry Division focuses on helping inmates, once released, to make a smooth transition from jail back into the community.

The Re-Entry Resource Room Volunteer will be required to have effective communication skills, basic computer skills (Word, Excel etc.) and be available to volunteer typically on weekdays from either 8:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. or 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. This volunteer would be the point person who would assist the inmates in finding information about specific programs and services.

Norfolk County RSVP is sponsored by the Norfolk County commissioners and is affiliated with the Federal Corporation for National and Community Service, one of the nations' largest volunteer agencies.

To become an RSVP volunteer or for more information, contact Kimberly Driscoll at Norfolk County RSVP office, at 781-329-5729.

Smashing Lighting Upgrades On A Shoestring Budget

(ARA) - The economy may be in the doldrums, but that doesn't mean your decor has to be there too. It's possible to turn dark, dreary and dated decor into light, lively and "now" on just a shoestring budget.

What's the secret to sprucing up on a shoestring? Lighten up - literally.

Upgrading your home's lighting can impart a whole new atmosphere, and you don't need to spend big bucks on pricey new fixtures to do it. Simple, budget-friendly changes can make a big difference in how your home looks and feels, and how much you enjoy living there.

The experts at the American Lighting Association (ALA) offer a few tips for creating a big impact on a small budget.

First, consider the first impression guests (or potential buyers) have of your home. "Upgrading exterior lighting or entryway lighting can improve the curb appeal and first impression of your home," says Monty Gilbertson, manager of Lighting Designs by Wettsteins in La Crosse, Wis.

Michael Berman, a lighting consultant with Chatsworth, Calif.-based Lamps Plus, agrees. "Replacing old, worn-out fixtures, purchasing inexpensive landscape lights to highlight interesting architectural elements or plantscapes can make it 'love at first sight' for potential buyers," he says.

Once you've upgraded the outside, take a look at the first parts of the house guests see - often the entryway or dining room on modern floor plans.

"Changing the dining room chandelier and/or the foyer light will make major strides in improving the look and, in some cases, the efficiency of your home," Gilbertson says. "Fixtures in the entryway should set the style for the rest of the house," Berman adds. "Even a small flush-mount fixture can add style to an otherwise lackluster entry."

Next, install dimmers throughout the house, even in rooms where you might not normally think of using them, like the kitchen and bath, suggests Joe Rey-Barreau, an education consultant for the ALA and an associate professor at the University of Kentucky's School of Interior Design.

An upgrade that's well within the skills of most do-it-yourselfers, installing a dimmer can completely change the character and quality of a space. For example, dimmers in a bathroom enable you to use the facilities in the middle of the night without the jarring impact of turning on bright, overhead lighting. In a master bedroom, they can create a soothing or even romantic mood.

In other rooms, take a look at your table lamps, advise both Rey-Barreau and Jeff Dross, senior product manager for Kichler Lighting in Cleveland. "One way to make an impact on a small budget is by changing outdated lampshades with newer trend-forward versions that incorporate fashion-friendly colors, fabrics or patterns," Dross says. "Many companies sell stand-alone shades at budget-friendly prices."

Consider how you use table lamps as well, Rey-Barreau says. "How many do you use in a room? What types? Table lamps can create a more diverse quality of light, and adding a few accent lamps in a room can really change the quality of a space," he adds.

Simple upgrades in kitchens and baths can also deliver big impact and enhance your home's value on a shoestring budget, the experts agree.

Modern kitchens often hide lighting under cabinets or in the ceiling through recessed lighting. "Adding fixtures that can be shown off and enjoyed can make a big impact," Dross says. "Adding mini pendants is a good place to start. They add aesthetic appeal and build an interesting focal point at a fair price." Or, upgrade from a single bulb fixture in the kitchen to a multi-bulb unit with a dimmer, Gilbertson suggests.

In baths and kitchens, consider replacing fixtures with dated finishes with more contemporary choices. Many manufacturers now make light fixtures in finishes that complement some of the more popular choices for plumbing fixtures, Rey-Barreau points out.

Finally, when you're lighting a room, keep in mind that you need to use more than one light and more than one kind of light. A balance of overhead lights (on dimmers), floor lamps and/or table lamps will produce the most aesthetically pleasing, livable atmosphere.

To learn more about how to use lighting to enhance your home's decor, livability and salability, or to find an ALA showroom near you, visit www.AmericanLightingAssoc.com, or call (800) BRIGHT IDEAS (800-274-4484).

Around the World to Wollaston
by Rob and Noel

After returning from the Peace Corp., we wanted to start our lives together in a home with a nice yard, near the T. As first time homebuyers, we didn't know where to begin, until we met our CENTURY 21 Annex Realty agent Steve Marcus at a Peace Corp alumni event. He walked us through all the considerations of purchasing a home. We were thrilled to buy our first home in Wollaston three days after we were married.

Remodel Your Kitchen For A Great Return On Investment

(ARA) - Remodeling a current home instead of buying a new one is a popular decision among homeowners in today's economy and housing market. It's also a wise choice, for when the time comes to sell, the return on investment for many remodeling projects is significant, especially in the kitchen.

According to the 2008-2009 Cost vs. Value Report from Remodeling Magazine, the national average cost recouped from a major, mid-range kitchen remodel is 76 percent. And until you're ready to resell, you'll have a beautiful kitchen designed for your lifestyle.

"For many people, the kitchen is the most important, and busiest room in the house," says Connie Edwards, certified kitchen and bathroom designer and director of design for Shenandoah Cabinetry. "Whether you're remodeling to create the kitchen of your dreams, or to simply increase the value of your home, keep in mind that you, or the next family, will spend a lot of time in this room. You'll want to make it as comfortable, beautiful and functional as possible without breaking the bank."

Before you take that first step and begin demolition, Edwards offers a few vital tips to help create your dream kitchen, save precious time and increase your home's value.

Plan, Plan, Plan -- Good design begins with a great plan. It takes thoughtful preparation and while a bit complex, it's also exciting. A kitchen remodel is a big investment, so know how much you are willing to spend and plan ahead on the layout and design features. If you do, it will be easier to manage your budget and completion date. Keep in mind that hardware, paint and wall coverings can easily be updated to reflect the latest trends, but make sure your big purchases like cabinetry, countertops and appliances are something you can live with for years.

Think About the Way You Live -- Your new kitchen design should be based on the way your family lives. How many people will be in the kitchen at one time? In addition to cooking, will you use your kitchen for dining, entertaining or homework? Does anyone in your family have special needs?

Do you need a lot of storage? Prepare an inspiration folder of ideas you've seen in magazines or digital pictures you've taken of elements you like. The more you share with your kitchen design specialist, the easier it will be for them to get that sense of your family's lifestyle.

Your Personal Style -- When selecting your kitchen cabinets, are you traditional, contemporary or somewhere in between? Manufacturers like Shenandoah Cabinetry offer hundreds of door style options and accessories. Before you head to your local Lowe's, it's important to know your style so your designer can help create a unique, customized look. Think about what appeals to you -- styles, finishes, colors, etc. From a practical standpoint, review your priorities -- your "must haves" -- against your target budget.

Pay Attention to Detail -- It's the little things that make a big difference. Beautiful details allow you to really personalize your new kitchen. To give your kitchen a custom-like look, consider adding decorative accents such as molding build-ups, ornaments and corbels. Including decorative accessories such as hardware, glass door inserts and under cabinet lighting can also make the room sparkle. Visit a kitchen design specialist at your local home center to discover even more ways you can add the perfect touch.

Use Space Efficiently -- No matter the size of your kitchen, it's important to maximize space and keep things organized. Accessories such as the Base Pot & Pan Organizer, Roll Out Tray Divider and Spice Door Cabinet from Shenandoah's OrganizationOptions help create a kitchen that is as hard-working as it is beautiful.

Take Measurements -- Be prepared with accurate measurements of your current space and double check your work. You can download tools like grid paper at www.ShenandoahCabinetry.com/planner.asp. Have your installer validate the dimensions or obtain professional measurements. Your kitchen design specialist will appreciate your detailed information. This will also help avoid measurement errors that can lead to costly delays and incorrect product orders.

For most people, the kitchen is the heart of their home. It's where families and friends congregate and busy lives intersect. It's where we prepare meals, eat, share, learn and celebrate. For more remodeling tips and design ideas to help make your kitchen the heart of your home, visit www.ShenandoahCabinetry.com or speak with a kitchen design specialist at your local home center.

Banging Plagues Gas Water Heater

Q. My wife and I are plagued with a banging gas water heater. When it heats, it cracks and bangs. We have "soft" water that has no lime in it. The tank is 16 years old. Our old home used well water, but we never had this problem. Can you help define our present problem? — Pat and Mike in Howell, N.J.

A. From your description, it seems like the banging noise starts after you use hot water. The tank begins to heat the fresh water that has taken the used water's place, and so about five minutes after you use hot water from the tap, the heater begins banging.

My first thought is that, even though you have water with a low mineral content (and/or a water softener), mineral buildup within the heater is still a good possibility. It is, after all, 16 years old, and if it wasn't maintained regularly, then quite a lot of mineral deposits could be lining the bottom of the tank.

First try flushing out the tank. This is a relatively quick task that doesn't require you to shut off the water.

You should turn the heat control to its lowest setting, without turning off the pilot light. Let the tank cool for a half-hour. Then, working carefully, as the water will still be warm, attach a short water hose to the drain tap near the bottom of the heater, run the other end into a bucket and drain water from the tank. You may see some white sediment or rust-colored water with the initial burst of water. Once the tank has drained, close the tap and return the thermostat to its regular setting.

The water tank should be flushed once or twice per year, even if you have soft water, to clear out the inevitable mineral sediment. Survival Tips For Colder Weather

Here are a few easy tips from the experts at Lowe's:

- Protect your pipes. To prevent freezing, insulate exposed interior pipes typically found in unfinished basements and install cold-weather faucet covers on exterior faucets. Insulation comes in different materials, lengths and diameters and is precut for easy installation. There's no need to remove the insulation after winter because it helps reduce energy used to warm water.

- Keep pipes from bursting. When pipes freeze, water only trickles out or won't come out at all when a faucet is turned on. Turn off the water at the main shutoff valve immediately to prevent water-pipe bursting -- a major source of flooding.

- Optimize heating by plugging drafts. "To test for leaky windows, place a playing card into the crevice of an outside door or window; if it fits, you need to reseal your windows with caulk," says Bill Dodd, vice president of merchandising for Lowe's.

Also, remember to change furnace filters frequently. Clogged filters reduce airflow through the heating/cooling system, forcing the unit to work harder and less efficiently.

- After a snowfall, save your back. Snow throwers can clear most surfaces in a fraction of the time required by shoveling with much less effort. Single-stage throwers are best used on small driveways, sidewalks and patios where snowfall is 7 inches or less.

- Storm recovery. Following a storm, check your home for physical damage. Always wear proper safety equipment such as heavy boots, gloves and safety goggles when clearing away fallen tree limbs and other debris. Stay away from downed or dangling power lines.

Ensure your chain saw is equipped with an anti-kickback chain that is well sharpened.

- Generator safety. Use portable generators outdoors in a well ventilated area. Carbon monoxide detector to protect your family members.

- Storm survival kit. When bad weather strikes, it's important to be prepared. You can create a winter storm survival kit in advance for less than $100. The kit should include a first-aid kit, a flashlight or 12-hour safety light stick, batteries, a two-way radio with weather band, a snow shovel, ice melt, and blankets.

On Friday, Jan. 9, at approximately 3:05 p.m., Detectives Gerard O'Rourke, Brian Coen and William O'Brien of the Quincy Police Drug Unit set up surveillance in the Quincy Square area of Temple Street and Hancock Street after receiving information that drug deals were taking place in this area.

During surveillance, detectives observed three males exit the Soup Kitchen at 1306 Hancock St. These males were known to the detectives as either dealers or users of drugs.

The three males walked over to the parking garage behind 1385 Hancock St. and then temporarily separated. Suspect #1 and suspect #2 kept walking to a corner of the garage while suspect #3 waited. Detective Coen observed the two suspects huddle in the corner, make a hand to hand exchange and once this was completed, suspect #2 placed his hand in his right pants pocket. Suspect #1 placed his hand in his jacket pocket.

The three suspects then retraced their steps, walking towards Hancock Street. Detective Coen advised the other Detectives that he believed that a drug transaction had taken place, so they moved in and confronted the suspects on Hancock Street.

Detective O'Rourke identified himself as a Police Officer and after separating suspect #1 from the others, he provided the suspect with Miranda Warnings (Right to remain silent . . .) and then asked him what he was doing in the garage.

Suspect #1 responded, "Nothing." Detective O'Rourke then pat-frisked the suspect and felt a pill bottle inside the jacket pocket, the same pocket that Detective Coen observed Suspect #1 put his hand into after the exchange.

LT. DAN MINTON

A Job Well Done

Detective O'Rourke recovered a prescription bottle with numerous yellow pills. The bottle's label that shows the owner's name was torn from the bottle. According to the Drug Unit, this is a common tactic for people who sell their prescription medication.

Suspect #1 was asked if this was his prescription and he denied this, but then added that the pills are for "anxiety." Detective O'Rourke asked the suspect how he got these pills and the suspect blurted out that he did not pay for them. The suspect then said, "I might have just found them."

Suspect #1 was asked if he received the pills from suspect #2 and it was at this time that suspect #1 said he wanted to speak to a lawyer. Upon closer examination, Detective Coen believed these pills to be Clonazepam (a class C substance). During this time, Detective O'Brien questioned suspect #2 after giving him his Miranda Warnings.

When asked what he was doing in the parking garage with suspect #1, he said that suspect #1 gave him a cigarette. Detective O'Brien asked the suspect to show him the cigarette, but the suspect said he smoked it. The detective knew this was not true, but the statements were important to show the suspect's lack of credibility for court purposes.

Detective O'Brien gained consent to search suspect #2 and found five $20 bills in the same pocket that the suspect put his hand in just after the exchange. There was nothing else in the pocket.

Suspect #2 had a wallet in his rear pocket that contained $6.00. When asked why the money wasn't in his wallet, the suspect did not have an answer. Based on the totality of the circumstances, the detectives believed that suspect #1 had purchased the pills from suspect #2 for $100.00.

Suspect #2, a 45-year-old Boston resident, was placed under arrest for "Distribution of a Class C substance, Conspiracy to violate the controlled substance laws and Selling a controlled substance within a thousand feet of a school."

The $100 was seized as evidence.

Suspect #1 was placed under arrest for "Possession of a Class C substance and Conspiracy to violate the controlled substance laws." The pills were packaged and forwarded to the state food and drug lab for analysis.

A check of suspect #2's criminal history shows that he was convicted for Possession to distribute a Class B substance in Quincy District Court in 1999.

Nice Work!

In the past few years, there has been a significant increase in misuse of prescription medications, whether it be using someone else's meds or using one's own inappropriately. A recent study conducted in 2007 by the National Institute of Drug Abuse, a component of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, shows a significant increase in the "non-medical" use of stimulants, depressants, pain killers and cough medicine for students assessed at grade 8, grade 10 and grade 12.

Where are kids getting these medications? Often times these medications are removed from the family medicine cabinet by our children, or their friends, either for personal use and/or to sell on the street. Getting hooked on these medications can lead to a life similar to the suspects in this story. As parents, one of our responsibilities is to discard medications no longer being used and to store current meds in a secure location.

QUINCY'S JIM FINN (#7) shoots on net during the Presidents' 4-3 win over North Quincy on Dec. 20 at the Quincy Youth Arena. The two teams played for a second time on Jan. 14 and the Raiders avenged that earlier loss with a 4-0 victory.

Red Hot Red Raiders Icemen Reel Off 5 Straight

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raiders are heating up the ice in 2009.

After dropping a non-league game on Dec. 20 against Quincy High School, 4-3, the Raiders have reeled off five straight victories over Brockton, Middleboro, Whitman-Hanson, Quincy and Silver Lake High Schools to up its record to an impressive 6-2-2 overall. The team currently shares the top spot in the Patriot League with Pembroke High School at 5-0-1.

On Saturday (Jan. 17), North Quincy traveled down to Kingston to play the Lakers of Silver Lake and rolled to a 4-2 win. The Lakers (5-5-1) got on the scoreboard first with an early first period goal, but the Raiders responded by scoring the tying goal and then 12 seconds later, scoring what would prove to be the game-winning tally.

Senior forward Scott Richardson, with an assist going to senior forward Paul Reardon, tied the score at 1-1 halfway through the opening period. Less than 15 seconds after Richardson's goal, senior forward Brandon Gilmore, the Patriot League's leading scorer (12 goals, 11 assists, 23 points), barreled down the right wing and wristed a laser under the crossbar to put the Raiders ahead for good, 2-1.

"I was afraid we left our gear on the bus early on," said NQ head coach Michael Ciarletta. "It seemed like we got that one (goal) and it was a domino effect. Our spirits lifted and we were a different team."

With about six minutes remaining in the first period, junior forward Brandon Whitehouse collected the rebound off a shot from senior Matt Rodriguez and buried it into the back of the net to give NQ a 3-1 advantage. At the end of 20 minutes of hockey the score was 3-1 North Quincy.

The Raiders continued their aggressive attack early on in the second period. Senior forward Brian McLean closed out the offense just five minutes into the second. His goal gave NQ a three-goal lead. Silver Lake would get one more on the board four minutes after McLean's tally, but they would be denied throughout the rest of the second and the entire third period by junior goaltender Matt Brundige (20 saves.)

The win over Silver Lake matched Pembroke High School's victory over the Lakers early in the week. Both NQ and Pembroke have matching league records and are scheduled to meet for the one-and-only time on the ice Feb. 4 at the Quincy Youth Arena (7:10 p.m.).

Last Wednesday (Jan. 14), the Raiders and the Quincy Presidents met for a second time this winter. The first meeting on Dec. 20 was a benefit game for Patrick White and Quincy escaped with a win, 4-3.

Since that initial game, the two teams have been moving in different directions. North hasn't lost to a Massachusetts team since that 4-3 loss and has brought their record to 6-2-2, while Quincy has struggled to score goals and have seen their record drop to 3-5-1. (The Presidents defeated Hanover HS, 6-2, on Jan. 17).

Near the end of the period Whitehouse scored the fourth goal of the game for the Raiders. Brundige (211 goals-against average), playing behind a stout defense, earned the shutout in goal.

"We starting to really roll and play all three zones," said Ciarletta. "We are really executing our system, finishing our chances and we are getting great goaltending. A recipe for success."

North Quincy played Duxbury HS on Monday (Jan. 19) and was scheduled to play against Scituate HS on Wednesday (Jan. 21) before hitting the road on Saturday to play against Hanover HS. With nine Patriot League games remaining, the Raiders are in a dogfight with Pembroke for a league championship.

The rest of the 2009 NQ roster includes seniors Joe Vaipando, Kevin Chenette, Evan Verhault and Bob Fontana, juniors Jake Mullaney, Ryan Gorman, Trevor Richardson, sophomores Derek Graham, Frank Mastorilli, Brendan Glynn and Brian Grasel and freshmen Tim Marks, Mike Adduci and James Dunn.

For Quincy, the 4-0 loss to NQ preceded a big 6-2 league win over Hanover HS on Jan. 17. Against Hanover, Quincy received goals from Kevin Keith, Scott Vallatini (captain), Mark Gilbody (captain), TJ Higgins, Seamus McKenna and Derek Murphy.

The team played Silver Lake Wednesday (Jan. 21) are scheduled to play against Pembroke HS on Saturday (QYA, 7:50 p.m.).

Page is shooting 44% from the field on the season and 67% from the free throw line this year. For the season, Page has scored 172 points, averaging 14.3 points per game. The average places her in the top-15 in the Commonwealth Coast Conference (CCC) standings.

She has also been a dominant force from behind the three-point line and has grabbed 79 rebounds, helping to lead the Pride to an early 10-2 record.

Page scored a season-high 27 points and snatched 14 rebounds against Rivier College in a 86-83 win and Defensively, Page is tied for the team lead in steals with 22 and is second on the team with 44 defensive boards.

Quincy Posts 1st Win, Downs Pembroke

By SEAN BRENNAN

The wait is finally over for the Quincy Presidents.

Winless in their first eight games on the season, Quincy (1-9 overall, 1-8 in the Patriot League) earned its first victory of the season with a 53-50 decision over Pembroke High School on Jan. 13.

"It was a tough and tight game," said Quincy head coach Jeff Brestsch. "The team has been playing tough all season long and a lot of our games have been close but we could never finish off teams until last week."

"We have dropped two games in overtime and numerous others have not been decided until the final minutes. But this win over Pembroke got us over the hump. It was good to see this team finally pull out a close game at the end. Hopefully we can keep it going."

Against the Titans of Pembroke, the Presidents dominated on the offensive and defensive glass, collecting every major rebound to maintain and control ball possession. According to Brestsch, this aspect of the contest was the difference between a win and a loss.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

"We did a great job rebounding on the offensive and defensive glass. It was the difference in a three-point win and it was what we have been working on in practices. The girls responded."

Junior forward Colleen Tobin was the number one star for the Presidents. Tobin scored a career-high 19 points and collected 14 rebounds to lead the way for Quincy. Fellow junior Leslie Campbell contributed to the victory with 15 points and sophomore guard Kori Sorensen scored 13 points (including two 3-pointers).

The Presidents and Titans played an evenly matched first half of basketball; at the halftime break Quincy trailed by three points. In the third quarter Quincy asserted itself on defense and at the end of quarter held a 39-37 lead.

"In the second half we did a nice job breaking the press and pressing them on defense," added Brestsch. "Juli Tomer and Campbell did a nice job breaking and defending their press. It was one of our best halves of basketball this year."

With a two-point lead entering the final quarter Quincy bore down and held on to win despite a late-game run by Pembroke.

"They pulled close down the stretch because some of our best players were in foul trouble, but we played our game at the end and pulled it out," said Brestsch.

Although the team may have just one win so far this season, Quincy is getting better and better every game, and the future looks bright moving forward. The Presidents will graduate four seniors (Kerri Ryan, Deanna Hutchins, Katie Chernicki and Elisa Lam) in June, but the core of the team will be back and better than ever.

The starting backcourt this season is made up of a freshman (Tomer) and sophomore (Sorensen), and the front line will return Campbell and Tobin, plus junior Olivia Berry, a bright spot on the court this year.

"For many of these players this is their first experience playing major minutes at the varsity level," said Brestsch. "They have been competing but the experience is not quite there yet. But with players like Tomer, our defensive specialist as a freshman, Sorensen, Campbell, Berry and Tobin we have a core that should only improve."

"This season still has a long way to go, but the team is already itching to play some of these teams again next year. If we can learn from our mistakes and get better this year than we should be that much better next season."

Quincy followed their win over Pembroke with a 53-42 loss to Patriot League opponent Rockland HS on Jan. 16.

The Presidents trailed by ten points at halftime (33-23), and a late-game rally that brought the game to within two points gave the team hope for back-to-back victories, but it would not be.

"We clawed our way back into that game," said Brestsch. "But late foul trouble hurt us and we just couldn't pull it out."

Quincy played Hanover HS Tuesday night and are scheduled to play against Middleboro HS this Friday on the road.

Youth Meet At Reggie Lewis Track Center Feb. 19

The Reggie Lewis Track & Athletic Center (Boston) will be holding a youth meet during school vacation week in February for any interested Quincy residents looking to remain active during their week off from school.

The Boston Center for Youth and Families (the "Recreation" branch of the Boston Parks & Recreation Department) will be involved as well in the meet.

This meet will be a low-key with ribbons for awards and with an order of events and not a time schedule. The meet should last about two hours, with the scheduled time being from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Besides the track events there will be a throw clinic that is more geared toward students in grades 7-12.

Any questions or for more information, email QHS track coach Geoff Hennessy at henndog89@netscape.net.

QRD To Hold Soccer Skills Program Starting Jan. 26

The Quincy Recreation Department (QRD) will be holding its eight-week Soccer Skills Program for girls as part of its evening recreation gym programs.

This program, according to Recreation Director Barry J. Welch, will feature activities and instruction to improve the fundamental soccer skills of each youngster. All participants will also take part in mini-games.

The Soccer Skills Program will be offered on Monday nights starting Jan. 26 and will have two separate age groups for the program. From 6:30 p.m., the program is for girls in grades 5-7 and from 7:30 p.m. the program is for girls in grades 8-11. The program will be conducted at the Broad Meadows Middle School Gym.

Don Martin, head coach of girls' soccer at QHS, will direct the program. QRD staff members will assist in coaching the program.

Registration will be taken on the first night of the program and space is limited. After the registration period, participants will engage in their first night of training and are asked to wear sneakers and appropriate gym attire.

The Soccer Skills Program is scheduled to conclude on March 23 and there will be no sessions on Presidents Day (Feb. 16).

North Quincy Defeats Hingham, Scituate

The North Quincy Red Raiders continue to steam through the competition this winter.

Coming off an impressive 62-40 victory over Quincy High School on Jan. 9, North went two-for-two against Patriot League foes Hingham and Scituate High Schools last week to run its record to 9-1 overall and 6-1 in league play.

North Quincy traveled to Hingham last Friday and won 57-42. Senior Siobhan Carnell led all scorers with 25 points, and on the year is averaging 20 points per game. Fellow seniors Jessie Howlett and Kathleen Lynch and junior Cara Murtagh also contributed for the Raiders in the win, the team's fifth in a row following a loss to Rockland HS on Jan. 2.

Howlett dropped 10 points on Hingham and finished with six steals; Lynch finished with eight rebounds, six steals and seven assists and Murtagh had eight steals and three assists.

Last Tuesday (Jan. 13) the Raiders stomped out Scituate HS, 57-37, behind a game-high 26 points from Carnell. The heralded senior also ended the game with four steals.

"This is Siobhan's third year playing varsity," said NQ head Michael Jorgenson. "She is averaging 20 points per game and is playing at a real high level. Teams have been keying in on her recently, but when they try and shutdown her offense it just opens up more opportunities for the rest of the team."

"She is a great player and a great leader for this team and we wouldn't be where we are without her this season."

Senior Catherine O'Connell backed the play of Carnell with a monster game herself. O'Connell scored 14 points and blocked two shots to help North run its league record to 5-1. Kathleen Lynch continued her stellar play with eight points and five steals and Murtagh finished the game with eight steals and three assists.

"I have two returning starters from last year's team (Carnell and Kathleen Lynch), but I also have six other seniors on the team," added Jorgenson. "They have gelled together quickly this year and once we completely find our team identity we should play even better as a unit."

"I have coached many of these seniors for four years and I kind of know what to expect. Our experience helped us win some close games early in the season, specifically in the games against Natick and Weymouth in our holiday tournament. These two teams play in the Bay State League and those games were a good test to see how we stack up against better teams."

One player that has impressed with her work ethic and play in the early part of the season has been senior forward Kristina Anderson.

"Kristina has really transformed herself into a better basketball player this season," Jorgenson added. "She earned herself a starting role with self-motivation and hard work. She has been one of the brightest spots on a team that is filled with them."

With nine Patriot League games yet to be played the Raiders are currently sitting pretty atop the Fisher Division with their 6-1 record. The change in leagues this season from the Atlantic Coast League (ACL) to the Patriot League (PL) has not seemed to faze the Red Raiders. The team continues to rack up the wins at a rapid pace.

"There has been and will be some ups and downs playing in the Patriot League this season," said Jorgenson. "Every game is competitive, but the combination of last season's success in the ACL and our returning talent has allowed us to see what can be possible if we play as a team and play hard every time out on the court."

"Last year was special and this year we have a chance to do something even more special."

North was scheduled to play a non-league game against Brockton HS on Monday, Silver Lake HS on Tuesday and will host Whitman-Hanson HS this Friday (6:30 p.m.) and Duxbury HS on Jan. 27. The games against W-H and Duxbury pit North Quincy against the two best teams in the Patriot League's Keenan Division.

Quincy, North Quincy Well-Represented At State Relays

The combined Quincy-North Quincy girls' winter track team had several great performances last week at the Massachusetts State Relays (Jan. 17), held at the Reggie Lewis Track & Athletic Center, Boston.

The team of Erica Brady, Jess Davis, Mary Schwartz and Alyssa Mullen took seventh place in the 4 x 800-meter relay and the same team finished eighth in the Distance Medley relay.

The 4 x 200-meter team of Ashley Bergonzi, Cristy Sorensen, Mabel Setow and Brianne Phelan ran their best time of the year. The team finished the 4 x 200 race in a time of 2:06.2.

The Quincy-North Quincy team was also represented on Monday at the Paul Davey Invitational at Franklin High School. The freshmen-sophomore meet, held in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., saw Erica Brady place second in the 1000-meter race and Olivia Toldness finishing second in the high jump.

Other Q-NQ athletes attending were Julia Ross (one-mile), Julie Doyle (1000-meters) and Juliette Callahan (the dash).

The team's next scheduled Tri-Meet is Jan. 29 against Patriot League opponents Middleboro and Whitman-Hanson High Schools. Q-NQ will also run against Hanover and Hingham High Schools Feb. 2. Both tri-meets will be held at the Reggie Lewis Track Center, Boston.

Staying Healthy Doesn't Have To Break The Bank

Tough economic times are causing many people to tighten the belt on personal finances.

But trimming fat from the budget, such as cancelling gym memberships, doesn't have to lead to an expanding waistline.

Experts at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute offer the following free and low-cost strategies to help maintain good health as well as possibly reduce various cancer risks.

Get walking

Staying fit and healthy can be as simple as lacing up a pair of sneakers and going for a walk. Moderate to intensive aerobic exercise, according to studies, also can reduce the risk of recurrence of several cancers, including colon and breast.

"You don't have to be a marathon runner, but the more you exercise, typically the greater the beneficial effect," says Jeffrey Meyerhardt, MD, MPH, a Dana-Farber gastrointestinal cancer specialist.

A study by Meyerhardt found that colon cancer survivors who exercised regularly had a 40 to 50 percent reduction in the risk of recurrence or dying. "The most consistent evidence we have so far for reducing the risk of several types of cancer is exercise and avoiding becoming obese."

Meyerhardt says there are many free or inexpensive ways to workout, but recommends consulting a doctor first. Some tips include:

- Using the stairs rather than an elevator.
- Walking or riding a bike rather than driving.
- Taking an exercise break or quick walk at work.

- Playing a team sport.
- Using a stationary bicycle or treadmill while watching TV.

"An apple a day..."

It doesn't cost anything to walk by the cookie aisle and into a store's produce section, but taking that little detour can provide many health benefits. A diet that is low in processed sugars, red meat and calories, but high in fruits and vegetables and loaded with antioxidants is one of the simplest ways to help maintain a healthy weight and reduce the risk of certain cancer.

Eating one or more apples a day is a good start. Studies have found that it may reduce the risk of breast, mouth and colorectal cancer. The skin of an apple contains the cancer-fighting antioxidant quercetin. Stacy L. Kennedy, MPH, RD, LDN a nutritionist at Dana-Farber, says that eating apples uncooked and unpeeled provides the most benefit from the quercetin. "Many of the beneficial nutrients in fruits and vegetables are concentrated in the pigment or rich colors, which are often in the skins."

Other foods that are both healthy and cancer-fighting include pumpkin, sweet potato, squash (butternut and acorn), carrots, and other orange fruits and vegetables. They contain carotenoids, a cancer-fighting nutrient that has been shown to lower the risk of colon, prostate, lung, and breast cancer.

Quit smoking: Save money and lives

Buying cigarettes and other tobacco products can really take a bite out of a budget. Kicking the habit can result in both a healthy lifestyle and a significant financial savings.

According to the American Cancer Society, smoking is the most preventable cause of death in the United States. It also causes more than 80 percent of all cases of lung cancer and increases the risk of oral, throat, pancreatic, uterine, bladder, and kidney cancers.

"Even though there have been many recent advances in lung cancer treatments, the most effective way to eradicate lung cancer is to prevent it from ever happening," explains Bruce Johnson, MD, director of the Lowe Center for Thoracic Oncology at Dana-Farber Johnson and his colleagues emphasize that it is never too late to quit. People who stop and remain nonsmokers for at least 10 to 20 years can cut their risk of developing lung cancer in half.

Quitting smoking isn't easy, but the following tips may help those who want to quit:

- Plan the quit day. Choose the method of quitting, recruit help, support and encouragement from family and friends, and remember the reasons for quitting, such as family, children, or personal health.

- Follow the four D's:
Deep breaths;
Drink lots of water.
Do something to avoid focusing on cigarette cravings;

Delay reaching for a cigarette – the urge will pass.

Avoid triggers: Get rid of cigarettes, lighters, matches, and ashtrays and avoid being around people who are smoking.

Limit use of alcohol Limiting alcohol consumption can save money and it may lower the risk of developing some cancers.

Researchers at Dana-Farber found that postmenopausal women who consume one alcoholic drink a day may increase their risk for breast cancer. "Women need to consider the possible effects of alcohol on breast cancer risk when weighing the risks and benefits of alcohol consumption," says Wendy Chen, MD, PhD, a breast cancer expert. "Our findings indicate that in some postmenopausal women, even modest levels of alcohol consumption may elevate their risk of breast cancer."

The bottom line, the Dana-Farber experts agree, is that many people can simply and inexpensively improve their health, and possibly reduce numerous cancer risks, by exercising, eating more fruits and vegetables, stopping smoking, and, if they consume alcohol, drinking it in moderation.

Health Insurance: Know Your Options

Many families are having to make tough decisions now. First to be paid out of the budget are necessities like food, utilities, mortgage and car payment. Sometimes health insurance goes away because families can't afford it. Sometimes the insurance goes away because of a job loss.

In either case, you might have options to find affordable insurance.

If you've just left an employer that provided health insurance, ask about signing up for COBRA, which is a continuation of the group health insurance through your employer.

Generally you can be eligible for up to 18 months of coverage, unless there is a qualifying event that can stretch the time to 36 months. COBRA is more expensive than your regular insurance was (especially if your employer picked up part of the cost), but it's much less expensive than paying for the medical expenses you might incur. For more information on COBRA, check the U.S. Department of Labor site (www.dol.gov).

If you have an ongoing need for prescription drugs, contact the drug manufacturer about discounted or free prescriptions.

Call your state's department of insurance. Ask what others in the same situation are doing.

Visit your local insurance agents and see what they have to offer for individual policies. They'll know up-to-the-minute information on policies that are available. Keep in mind that the agent is going to get a commission on whatever policies you buy. Check online for ratings of the companies he or she recommends. Go to www.insurancefreeadvice.com for reviews, and A.M. Best (www.ambest.com) for ratings information. Once you get a policy, read every word.

Check eHealth Insurance (ehealthinsurance.com) for quotes and information. If you're paying for COBRA, check into COBRA alternatives on this site. Unfortunately, they don't have information for all states, but for the ones that are covered, an A.M. Best rating is shown.

Look to your alliances. If you're a member of a group such as AARP or a fraternity, or if you're a college graduate, check for group policies based on your membership.

If you're self-employed, check trade-specific organizations that pertain to your field, or Small Business Service Bureau (www.sbsb.com) and membership benefits in the National Association for the Self-Employed (www.nase.org). Call the Chamber of Commerce in your area. Sometimes it will have group plans for local small businesses.

Cold Weather Health Hazards

A cold snap that gripped the region last week can produce more than rosy cheeks and chapped lips.

Extreme cold weather presents a number of preventable health hazards, including hypothermia, frostbite, and carbon monoxide poisoning.

"I think people sometimes underestimate how dangerous the cold weather can be," says Sharon Giordani, NP, director of Emergency Services at Quincy Medical Center. "But when the temperature and wind chill drop the way they have recently, people really need to take some extra precautions to stay safe and out of the emergency room."

Frostbite is damage to the skin and underlying tissues caused by extreme cold marked by loss of feeling and color in the affected areas. It most often affects areas farthest from the heart -- the nose, ears, cheeks, chin, fingers, or toes -- and can cause permanent damage, or in severe cases, can lead to amputation.

Hypothermia, or abnormally low body temperature, is a more serious condition. It occurs most likely at very cold temperatures, but can happen at less frigid temperatures (above 40°F) if a person becomes chilled from rain, sweat, or immersion in cold water. Hypothermia affects the brain and inhibits the victim's ability to think clearly or move well. Left untreated, it can be fatal.

Carbon monoxide poisoning is another health hazard that increases during the winter months when furnaces, gas fireplaces, and portable heaters are being used and windows are closed. If heaters and gas-burning appliances are not functioning properly, they may produce carbon monoxide. When breathed in, the poison replaces the oxygen in a person's bloodstream, starving the heart, brain, and body of oxygen. Symptoms may include breathing problems, chest pain, dizziness, drowsiness, confusion, headache, nausea, or loss of consciousness.

"The fact that these conditions often happen without a person realizing it makes them particularly dangerous because they won't know to do anything about it," says Giordani, adding that the very young and very old are most susceptible to cold weather-related health problems.

"Most cold weather emergencies can be avoided with a little prevention, including dressing appropriately (layers of warm synthetic clothing, hats and gloves), limiting time spent outdoors and ensuring that heaters and gas-burning appliances have been inspected and are working properly."

PREVENTION STRATEGY QUESTIONED

While both the American Dental Association and the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons recommend giving prophylactic antibiotics to patients with prosthetic joints, there is little evidence that doing so with starve off infection. So says a recent study that looked for evidence that this standard practice of administering antibiotics to dental patients with artificial joints has any effect. With the number of artificial joints implanted annually expected to rise to about four million by 2030, and many authorities urging less use of antibiotics, this is bound to be a big issue for people with artificial joints. Health experts have been warning for some time that unwarranted antibiotic use is leading to a rise in antibiotic resistance. This informative column on prophylactic antibiotics has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. Teeth are meant to last for a lifetime. They will take care of you if you take care of them. If you're looking for a family dentist who understands the needs of everyone in your family as individuals and as patients, we hope that you will consider us. We believe in preventive care for the whole family. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesia with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

PS: New guidelines also suggest that dental patients at risk for endocarditis (infection that can strike an artificial heart valve) receive fewer antibiotics than previously recommended.

We need you.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

We all know that we should live each day as it comes... Sometimes this is a hard thing to do. We seem to be burdened with yesterday's troubles and tomorrow's anticipation and fears...

With this thought in mind, we would like to share with you some wise and profound thoughts of some great men of time gone past...

Benjamin Franklin urged: "Never leave that till tomorrow which you can do today." And Ralph Waldo Emerson made the point: "One of the illusions in life is that the present hour is not the critical, decisive hour. Write it on your heart that everyday is the best day of the year. He only is right who owns the day, and no one owns the day who allows it to be invaded by worry, fret and anxiety. Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could."

... And John Newton once said: "We can easily manage, if we will only take, each day, the burden appointed for it. But the load will be too heavy for us if we carry yesterday's burden over again today, and then add the burden of the morrow to the weight before we are required to bear it."

Yes, yesterday's gone and there is no real hiding place from today. Now is the day, the hour! There is little we can do about yesterday and tomorrow is uncertain, but today is vital and is all we can really "deal with." ... Today is the day! Own today! Get on with those unfinished tasks. DO IT TODAY!

Temple Shalom To Screen 'The Front' Saturday

"The Front" starring Woody Allen will be the next featured film of the Winter Movie Series entitled "When America Wasn't So Welcoming" at Temple Shalom of Milton Saturday, Jan. 24 at 7 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

In this 1976 film, written by John Vogel and directed by Martin Ritt, Woody Allen plays a man of no real talent or strong political convictions who is paid to be a front for a group of black-listed writers during the McCarthy period of the early 1950's. There are comedic elements in his attempts to pass off stories he hasn't read as his own, until he comes under the view of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The donation for admission, including popcorn or a drink, is $3 per person in advance, or $5 at the door.

To reserve tickets in advance or for more information:

Call 617-698-3394, email templeshalom@yahoo.com or visit www.templeshalomonline.org.

The temple is located at 180 Blue Hill Ave. (Rte 138), Exit 2B off Rte. 93/128.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you're getting kudos and other positive reactions to your suggestions, don't let the cheers drown out some valid criticisms. Better to deal with them now than later.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Following your keen Bovine intuition pays off, as you not only reassess the suggestions some people are putting in front of you, but also their agendas for doing so.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You continue on a high-enthusiasm cycle as that new project you've assumed takes shape. You're also buoyed by the anticipation of receiving some good news about a personal matter.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your eagerness to immerse yourself in your new assignment is understandable. But be careful that you don't forget to take care of that pressing personal situation as well.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time to learn a new skill that could give a clever Cat an edge in the upcoming competition for workplace opportunities. Enjoy the arts this weekend with someone special.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You could risk creating an impasse if you insist on expecting more from others than they're prepared to give. Showing flexibility in what you'll accept could prevent a stalemate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although you can weigh all factors of a dispute to find an agreeable solution for others, you might need the skilled input of someone you trust to help you deal with an ongoing situation of your own.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The good news is that your brief period of self-doubt turns into a positive "I can do anything" attitude. The better news is that you'll soon be able to prove it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time for Sagittarians to start making travel plans while you can still select from a wide menu of choices and deals, and not be forced to settle for leftovers.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Like your zodiacal sign, the sure-footed Goat, you won't allow obstacles in your path to keep you from reaching your goal. Don't be surprised by who asks to go along with you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Let your head dominate your heart as you consider the risks that might be involved in agreeing to be a friend's co-signer or otherwise act as his or her backup in a financial matter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Prioritize: Resolve to close the door and let your voice mail take your phone calls while you finish up a task before the end-of-week deadline. Then go out and enjoy a fun-filled weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your capacity for care and compassion helps to bring comfort to others.

Wind Power Workshop Jan. 29 In Merrymount

The Quincy Environmental Network and Clean Water Action will sponsor a free workshop in wind power Thursday, Jan. 29, at 7 p.m. at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Holy Trinity Parish, 227 Sea

St., Merrymount.

Charles McClelland, wind site analyst for the Wind Energy Center at UMass-Amherst, will discuss the basics of wind power and answer questions on this source of renewable energy.

Wind power has great potential along the coast and several projects have either been completed or are in progress around Massachusetts. At least three have been proposed in Quincy.

The three from Quincy flew down to Washington Sunday afternoon and stayed at a Marriott Hotel in Alexandria, Va., near the Pentagon across the Potomac from the nation's capital.

They jumped into the social whirl right away with dinner at the Washington outpost of Legal Sea Foods and a reception by the U.S. Conference of Mayors at the Bombay Club.

"Tom Koch wasn't there and Doug was once president of the City Council, so we figured it was all right for us to attend," said McDermott.

After the new president was duly sworn in and concluded his 10-minute address, they retired to the Sonoma Restaurant for a post-inaugural reception thrown by Delahunt and McDermott filed his report to the folks back in Quincy.

It was an intimate gathering by the standards of Washington social life on Jan. 20, 2008. Only about 200 showed up.

Later, the group planned to attend a reception at the Library of Congress and after that dinner at a Georgetown restaurant and one of the many parties or inaugural balls around the town.

"We hope to go to the Northeast Ball," said McDermott. "It's a sellout and we don't have tickets but we were told not to worry about it. You're never without something to do here."

"We're going to tour the city on a tourist bus tomorrow (Wednesday) and catch a 6 p.m. flight back home."

Ward 1 Democrats To Caucus

Ward 1 Democrats will caucus Saturday, Feb. 7, at 10 a.m. at the Commonwealth Restaurant, 79 Parkway, Quincy Center, to select 10 delegates and three alternates to the state convention.

The 2009 convention will be held Saturday, June 9, at the MassMutual Center in Springfield where Democrats from across the state will meet to discuss and adopt a party platform.

Delegates and alternates will be equally divided between men and women. Anyone at least 18 years of age and a registered Massachusetts Democrat as of Dec. 3 is welcome to attend the caucus and run for delegate.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Ward 1. Those not elected delegate or alternate may apply to be add-on delegates in the categories of youth, minority and disabled.

Challenges to the delegate process must be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston MA 02120, within 10 days of the caucus.

For more information, call Ward 1 Chairman Michael Berry at 617-479-2787.

For Over 2,000 City Employees Koch Seeks Wage Freeze With Unions

Mayor Thomas Koch will ask more than 2,000 city workers to give up contracted pay raises for the upcoming fiscal year as part of the city's efforts to weather the ongoing economic crisis.

Koch said he has begun talks with union leaders about a wage freeze beginning July 1. He declined to elaborate on specifics in the middle of confidential talks with employees. He said wages for all non-union employees will be frozen.

"We are taking every action possible to answer this crisis, and I look forward to continuing to work in good faith with our employees for the best interest of the City," Koch said. "We have not faced challenges of this magnitude for some time, and we all, including our workers, recognize the gravity of the situation."

Most union contracts call for between 2 and 3 percent raises for the fiscal year beginning July 1, a date in which the City is anticipat-

Light Blue SUV Sought In School Girl Stalking

The yellow flag of caution went out to parents of students at Point Webster Middle School this week after one of the girls reported she was stalked by a man in a car and offered a ride.

The car was described as a small, light blue sports utility vehicle (SUV) and the driver a male in his 40s with short, black hair.

Police, stymied by the paucity of evidence, called it an isolated incident and asked residents, particularly Point Webster students, to report anything suspicious as their investigation continues.

The incident also gave school authorities an opportunity to reiterate in a letter to parents some of the personal safety skills that are taught in the schools.

For Outstanding Community Service

George Burke Quincy Sun Citizen Of The Year

Atty. George Burke, who has given the community long dedicated public service and generous philanthropy, is The Quincy Sun Citizen of The Year for 2008.

He was selected for the honor by a judging panel from a field of 34 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

He is the 25th recipient of the award established in 1985 for outstanding community service. He will receive the award at a reception at the Quincy Sons of Italy in March.

Burke was nominated by Guido "Buddy" Pettinelli, retired Quincy police officer, who said:

"George has worked to improve and gives back to the community. He has done that not only recently but for years.

"He has served this city with honor, dedication and integrity. George has served his community politically, religiously and very generously."

Sun publisher Henry Bosworth and editor Robert Bosworth said:

"We congratulate George and thank him for his outstanding service to the community.

"We also want to congratulate the other 33 nominees. Being nominated is an honor in itself."

When informed of his selection, Burke said:

"This is a prestigious honor I want to thank The Quincy Sun, Buddy Pettinelli for nominating me and members of the panel for selecting me."

Members of the panel were:

Rev. William Harding, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church; Frank Santoro, principal of Quincy High School; Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Association; Bette Campbell, executive director Quincy Access Television and Robert Noble, who with his wife, Gloria, were the 2007 recipients, the only husband and wife team to receive the award.

Burke began his political career in 1959 when he was elected Ward 5 councillor. And went on to become president of the City

Residents Complain Of Dangers At Furnace Brook Ramp

By LAURA GRIFFIN

An exit ramp installed a decade ago to ease traffic congestion has turned into a traffic nightmare for West Quincy residents who last week described narrow misses and dangers due to the Furnace Brook off-ramp (1-93-South) into Willard Street and Ricciuti Drive.

"Something has to be done," said Karen Djerf who then described the obstacles confronting her and her neighbors navigating the roadways at the West Quincy rotary.

Djerf and John Storella-Mullin said cars speed off 1-93 down the ramp at Willard Street and Ricciuti Drive with no regard for a "Yield" sign.

"They just pass you," said Storella-Mullin, while another neighbor said of drivers, "I don't think people know what yield means."

Often, Djerf said she has a car full of little athletes, sometimes heading for Quincy Youth baseball, and she's dodging speeding drivers who are "using the exit as a cut-through" and "don't yield."

According to the residents, drivers avoid congestion on 1-93 South by speeding off the Furnace Brook ramp at Willard Street past Ricciuti Drive.

These drivers ignore a "Yield" sign, and, then immediately, re-enter 1-93 South after bypassing the rotary.

"It's created a real problem," said Jim Carson of Loring Street who, last week, urged the City Council's Public Works Committee to protect the residents.

"They (cars) can't cross safely," said Storella-Mullin who wants a red and green traffic signal that will make drivers exiting the expressway stop and "deter people from getting off and on" through the ramps.

Storella-Mullin suggested that MassHighway use cameras and updated technology to better interpret and solve the problems.

MassHighway engineers studied the intersection at the request of Council President Jay Davis who represents Ward 4 and John Gillon, Director, Department of Traffic and Parking.

Gillon outlined the state's findings last week and concluded that the state's traffic engineers do not recommend either Stop signs or a traffic signal.

However, the state does plan some improvement in the spring, according to Gillon who noted the ramp was created to accommodate the trucks transporting "Big Dig" dirt to the former landfill, now Granite Links golf course.

In fact, the roadway was built privately by McCourt Construction and labeled the "Expressway Wonder" because it was constructed in record time.

Since then, Gillon said the pavement markings have worn off and "vehicles are floating into other lanes."

The January MassHighway study found only property damage due to traffic accidents in the area, and no fatalities justifying a traffic signal, according to Gillon.

Gillon told the committee that MassHighway rejected a proposal for "Stop" signs as well.

The report concludes, "A traffic control signal is not warranted at this time based on the accident history."

However, the state does recommend the following improvements which they will undertake in the spring.

Pavement Markings: Repaint markings in the spring with thermoplastic paint to provide three lanes for approximately 200 feet "to help reduce sideswipe type accidents."

Signs: Signs providing advance warning of the intersection, and advisory speeds need to be replaced or updated.

Flashing warning beacon: is recommended. "A late summer installation is anticipated...."

40 To 60 Picket Plaza

Coughlin Wants $300 Fine, Protesters Want Marijuana

By LAURA GRIFFIN

It was deja vu, the 1970's all over again, and time to protest for pot last week on City Hall Plaza prior to the City Council meeting.

Some 40 to 60 supporters of public marijuana smoking waved their signs and raised clenched fists from City Hall Plaza as dozens of passing motorists blared their horns to spur them on.

The pickets organized by a group called Socialist Alternatives protested a proposed ordinance filed by Ward 3 Kevin Coughlin to establish $300 fines for public pot smoking and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Just before the 7:30 meeting, the group, still 50 plus strong, filed quietly into City Council chambers filling the seats held just minutes earlier by a similar number of supporters of a proposed Asian supermarket in North Quincy.

And that's when the party ended.

For the next three hours, the pickets sat in silence through lengthy and detailed discussions of development plans, municipal finances, the city's audit, the city's debt service, bonding status, information on Standard & Poors and traffic in North

KEVIN COUGHLIN

Quincy.

By 10:30, the numbers had dwindled considerably.

Fewer than a dozen protesters remained to hear the council accept gifts for the city's school-based drug education program, DARE: $1000 from Boston Financial Data Services and $10,000 from State Street Bank.

Shortly, after 11 p.m., Coughlin formally presented his proposal and councillors sent the proposal to advertising and the Ordinance Committee for hearings.

By that time, only eight pickets remained.

One picket said the council's deadly boring agenda was deliberately conducted to avoid discussion of his major issue, the fines for marijuana.

"It was a filibuster," he said.

Several persons have since called council offices for the information on the public hearing but the date has not yet been set.

Coughlin said the pickets were exercising their right to protest.

In submitting the proposal, Coughlin said the passage of Question 2 by voters in November could open the door to serious problems.

Question 2 decriminalized the possession of less than one ounce of marijuana but left the door open for municipalities to set higher civil fines for smoking or possession.

PICKETS FOR MARIJUANA held signs last week protesting an ordinance proposed by Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin that would institute a civil fine of $300 for public marijuana smoking. "The people have spoken; Don't fine us for smokin'" read one sign while others invited passing drivers to honk their horns and they did. The signs above refer to the state's November referendum decriminalizing possession of one ounce or less of marijuana. No date has been set for committee review.

What kind of mortgage are you looking for?

- If you're a first-time homebuyer, you probably have lots of questions. That's fine. We're happy to give you the time you need. That's the kind of bank we are - that's the kind of people we are.
- If you're an experienced homebuyer putting down a significant amount on a new home, a quicker-payoff, shorter-term mortgage might be right for you. Or maybe you'd rather have a 30-Year Loan. It's your choice!
- And if you want to refinance using your equity, we can help make that happen too.

Colonial Federal is a dependable, trustworthy community bank. Our loan officers are not on commission so their only goal is to help you get a loan you understand and can live with. If you pay your loan off early, we don't hit you with pre-payment penalties. And we're here to answer your questions after the closing too. Sound good? Come see us or call Angela Blanchard, Cathy Barry or Eileen Flibotte at 617-471-0750.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 26, 1838, the first Prohibition law in U.S. history is passed in Tennessee, making it a misdemeanor to sell alcoholic beverages in taverns and stores. Despite an often-vigorous effort, the federal government failed to prevent the large-scale distribution of alcoholic beverages, and organized crime flourished.

• On Feb. 1, 1893, Thomas Edison finishes the first movie studio on his property in West Orange, N.J. The studio, a frame cabin covered with black roofing paper, was built on a pivot so it could be turned to face the sunlight throughout the day. Edison spent $638 building the studio, which he called a "revolving photographic building."

• On Jan. 27, 1918, the first Tarzan film, "Tarzan of the Apes," is released. The silent movie, based on Edgar Rice Burroughs' novel, was the first in a long line of Tarzan productions. Olympic champion swimmer Johnny Weissmuller starred in 11 Tarzan movies from 1932 to 1948.

• On Jan. 28, 1959, the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League sign Vince Lombardi to a five-year contract as the team's coach and general manager. In his first season, Lombardi guided the Packers to a 7-5 record and a third-place finish in the NFL's Western Conference.

• On Jan. 30, 1972, in Londonderry, Northern Ireland, 13 unarmed civil-rights demonstrators are shot dead by British army paratroopers in an event that becomes known as "Bloody Sunday." In April 1972, the British government released a report exonerating British troops from any illegal actions during the protest.

• On Jan. 29, 1980, the U.S. Postal Service issues a stamp honoring comedian W.C. Fields. On screen, Fields was a misanthrope who hated children and animals and fought bankers, landladies and the police. Friends reported that his stage presence reflected Fields' true personality.

• On Jan. 31, 1990, the Soviet Union's first McDonald's fast-food restaurant opens in Moscow. Throngs of people lined up to pay the equivalent of several days' wages for Big Macs, shakes and french fries.

Crowley Moving Closer To Run

Former Police Chief Robert Crowley still has 'em guessing.

Will he run for the city council this year? He seems closer to stepping into the political arena than he did a couple of weeks ago.

"I'm leaning toward it," he says. "I will make a final decision in three or four weeks."

And he adds:

"If I do run and am elected I will be a full-time city councillor."

Crowley, who lives in Squantum, hasn't publicly indicated whether he would run for the Ward 6 city seat held by Brian McNamee or councillor at-large.

Those close to him say it would be for the Ward 6 seat.

Crowley has been attending city council meetings or watching them on Quincy Access TV.

He has also picked up voter lists at City Hall and key area maps.

Crowley, 61, retired from the Police Department June 1, closing out a 38-year police career.

He ran a tight, tough ship as chief.

THIS YEAR'S CITY ELECTION is off to one of the earliest starts with four new candidates already running:

Margaret Laforest and Martin Aikens of the Zoning Board are candidates for the Ward 1 seat, Brian Pulmucci, Ward 4, and Karl Roos for School Committee.

And veteran Mike McFarland is also already starting getting things rolling for his re-election campaign for councillor at-large.

McFarland has a reception set for Thursday, Feb. 12, 5 to 7 p.m. at the Alba Bar & Grille, 1486 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

I'D LIKE TO thank our "Washington, D.C. Bureau" for their coverage of President Barack Obama's inauguration in last week's Sun and follow-up this week:

THREE WELL KNOWN Quincy figures are recovering from serious injuries from falls on ice.

Bob Galligan, head of Great Western Adams Inn, suffered rib fractures.

Former City Auditor Bob Foy, a pelvis fracture.

Jim Felci, former WJDA salesperson and a member of the Salvation Army Advisory Board, a hip fracture.

The accidents all happened around Christmas and the three are slowly on the mend.

Watch your steps, folks. It's still dangerous out there. (And still 50 cold long days to spring.)

FRIENDS AND PATIENTS are glad to see Allan Yacubian, North Quincy High School legend, easing back to work at his Wollaston dental office after surgery last November.

Allan, as most people know, was the model for The Yakoo, the beloved NQHS mascot, created in 1957 with classmate Peter Fredricksen the artist.

"I feel fine," he says. "And want to thank everyone for their get-well cards and wishes and especially the Quincy Medical Center and Boston Medical Center for wonderful care I received."

A 1958 graduate of North, Allan is a generous benefactor to both his alma mater and Quincy High School and has helped bring the schools closer together.

I RECENTLY HAD the pleasure of speaking to the Quincy High School Journalism Class.

Hope the kids got as much out of it as I did. As an old newspaperman I was impressed with their enthusiasm and interest in journalism.

Opportunities aren't as great in that field today as they were a few years ago, but the kids had that look of determination.

And they are fortunate to have a teacher like Sandy McNeice, who really knows her subject.

And to have Chris Natalizia, faculty advisor, for the impressive school paper, The Pony Express.

Thanks for your letter and kind words Sandy and Chris and the kids:

Ward 3 Democrats To Caucus Feb. 7

Ward 3 Democrats will caucus Saturday, Feb. 7, at 10 a.m. at the Commonwealth Restaurant, 79 Parkingway, Quincy Center, to select nine delegates and three alternates to the 2009 state convention.

The convention will be held Saturday, June 6, at the MassMutual Center in Springfield to adopt a party platform.

Delegates will be divided equally between men and women. They must be present at the caucus and consent to the nomination in writing. All ballots will be written and secret.

Those not elected delegate or alternate may apply to be add-on delegates in the categories of youth, minority and disabled.

Challenges to the selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston, Mass. 02129 no later than 10 days after the caucus.

A YOUNG WOMAN mailed this 1906 postcard from Arnold Street in Quincy Point with a little note to a friend in New Bedford. Thank You, Interact Club Students

I wanted to say "thank you" to the over 30 Quincy High School and North Quincy High School students of the Interact Club and their club advisor Lynne Houghton, who helped out on Saturday at Sacred Heart School's 7th Annual Lunar New Year Event. These students gave up either their Saturday morning or Saturday evening to help the parents at Sacred Heart School host a multi-cultural celebration for about 250 teachers, students, families and friends. The members of the Interact Club were unfailingly helpful, polite and enthusiastic. They did every job with a smile. You hardly ever hear or see on the news stories about young men and women who are making great choices; who are helping their communities in small, but important ways. Well, Quincy has an entire cadre of these young adults who have already learned the importance of helping others. These students are a credit to their parents and an asset to the City. It makes me feel very positive about our future when we have such a great group of young people at both of our High Schools. I look forward to seeing what they will make of themselves in the future.

Dottie's Epiphany

I made a big discovery this winter. I am an old lady.

It came as an awful shock to me. I'd never even considered it. I had to be hit over the head with the fact that I am an OLD LADY and to be honest with you, I am still reeling.

All of a sudden I found that I could not come and go as I pleased. I found out I was terrified of falling. I found I could not navigate the huge pile of ice and snow I had to climb over in order to cross the street (of course if the crosswalks were properly shoveled, etc.).

I live one street over from my church...closer than I've ever been to it, but I might just as well be in another state. I tried to go to church, as was my usual custom, but I'll never do it again. I climbed the mountain to cross Hancock Street and got to church, but coming home was my downfall-literally.

When I climbed the mountain to get home, my right leg landed in soft snow up to my hip and the rest of me was sprawled on Hancock Street. Mercifully, a car did not hit me, but I was very, very lucky. Had that been hard-packed ice, as was the mountain I climbed over, I would have broken my leg and found myself a block or so down the street right in front of the church I'd struggled so hard to get to. Very convenient if I'm needed the last rites!

Ironically, as I waited to cross the street there was a young man standing beside me. He had his hood down over his face and I don't know if he knew I was beside him. He was wearing sneakers and I was concerned for him. I need not have worried because he leaped over the mountain-landed perfectly on Hancock Street-dodged cars and made it safely to the other side, as I began my ascent over the mountain.

Then it hit me - I'm an old lady and I belonged home in front of my TV-not mountain climbing. Boy was that realization hard to take.

As I write, we are in the middle of a snowstorm and I'm in front of my TV where I'll probably stay until next spring. God willing I'll see you all then. Older for sure and hopefully wiser.

Of course I realize that Hancock Street was built for horse and carriages-not for the thousands of cars that use it daily. Keeping it clear in a snowstorm is no mean feat.

Delayed Tax Rate Costly To City

By FRANK McCAULEY

By next May, the city of Quincy will have paid $901,240 in interest on money borrowed and reborrowed to keep the municipal government operating during the long delay between the 1980 tax rate.

Between July 6, at the start of the fiscal year, and Dec. 3, three weeks before the tax rate was set, the city borrowed $28 million on tax anticipation notes (T.A.N.'s). The interest: $558,880.

In November, when most of the T.A.N.'s matured, the city was still without income from the collections, so $20 million in notes had to be renewed. The interest: $250,434.

In January, the city was forced to renew $12 million in T.A.N.'s that had already been renewed once. The interest: $91,926.

City Treasurer-Collector Robert E. Foy III will present a picture of the city's finances to the City Council at the request of Councilor Joseph J. LaRia.

HEARING SET FOR SUIT ON TEACHERS' RAISES

A Feb. 11 hearing date has been set on teachers' union suit seeking to order Mayor Arthur H. Tobin to fund raises with the teachers.

The raises, totaling about $1.1 million were negotiated between the Quincy Education Association (QEA) and the School Committee in December. A supplemental budget request for those raises, sent to Tobin by the school committee, has never been passed on to the city council for appropriation.

Mayor Tobin, noting that the tax rate has been sent, has claimed no further money can be appropriated by the council this fiscal year.

Essay Contest Winners Tell 'Why I Love The Neck'

Ocean breezes, friendly neighbors, a sense of community. The winners of the "Why I Love the Neck" Essay Contest had no trouble putting their love for their seaside neighborhood into words.

Sponsored by the Hough's Neck MOTHERS Club, the contest sought essays from both children and adults on why they loved Hough's Neck. Nearly 70 entries were received, with a panel of Hough's Neck judges selecting three student winners and one adult winner, including: Alison Coleman, first place, elementary school division; Sydney Shuttleworth, runner up, elementary school division; Madeline Kamb, middle school division; and Sandra McCauley, adult division.

Contest winners were presented with savings bonds and certificates at the MOTHERS Club's recent meeting, where they read their prize winning essays. Elementary school winner Alison Coleman noted the many activities available to Hough's Neck residents.

"There are a lot of things to do, like parks and fields for kids to play," she wrote. "There is stuff inside, too, like the Maritime Center where you play on the computers, board games, TV and arcade games, or the Manet Health Center. They have different stuff every month, like sewing, bingo, and more things."

Runner up Sydney Shuttleworth pointed to the beauty of the Hough's Neck peninsula in her essay. "Sometimes if I go out of Hough's Neck for a while then I come back, I know we're in Hough's Neck because it is so beautiful," she wrote.

"I love Hough's Neck in the summertime because on a real hot day you get a cool breeze off the water. You don't have to travel far to get to the beach, and my family and I can sail our boat all around Boston Harbor."

Middle School winner Madeline Kamb took her devotion to Hough's Neck even further, noting, "The name Necker goes further than just a word - it could almost be considered a religion." She added, "Neck-ers are not only people and neighbors, they go the extra mile of being capable of being called family."

Lifelong Hough's Neck resident Sandra McCauley, 72, the contest's adult winner, agreed.

"Growing up in the Neck, I took a lot for granted," she wrote. "I assumed everyone lived in a place where people accepted their neighbors as they were, allowing them their privacy except when they thought they needed help - which was given without fuss - and then left them to their privacy again. I thought that anyone could walk the streets in safety, day or night. I never felt afraid, roaming about as kids do. If I needed anything, there was always someone near at hand to go to."

"Hough's Neck is not just a place, it is a state of mind!" McCauley noted. "There is nowhere in this world as unique as 'the Neck.' As it says on the t-shirt my daughter gave me, 'Proud to be a Necker!'"

Monthly Book Discussions At Crane Library

If you like to read and discuss books, the Thomas Crane Public Library is forming several book group starting Feb. 5.

Topics range from reading about Boston and New England history non-fiction books with regional angles.

The first group will meet on the first Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. starting Feb. 5 where a discussion of "Ten Hours Until Dawn" the true story of heroism and tragedy aboard the 'Can Do' by Michael Tougias will be held. The book depicts a gripping account of a maritime disaster that occurred during the Blizzard of '78.

Other groups include "World Literature" which meet on the second Friday morning of each month at 10 a.m. starting Feb. 13 to talk about novels from around the world.

Another group "Fiction Plus" will meet on the third Wednesday of each month at 7 p.m. starting Feb. 18.

That group will read an eclectic variety of literary fiction plus the occasional non-fiction. The group will also discuss "Lincoln at Gettysburg" by Gary Wills.

On the fourth Tuesday of each month starting Feb. 24 at 7 p.m. there will be environmental and wellness topics with a "Green Reads" group, co-sponsored by the Quincy Environmental Network.

No advance registration is required. All groups meet in the Quinsy room on the top floor of the main library at 40 Washington St.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Sharks Of New England Slide Presentation At Library

A free slide presentation featuring the local shark population by Capt. Tom King will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St. This program is suitable for adults and for children age six and up.

There are 15 different species of sharks that inhabit New England coastal waters. The event will show how to distinguish a shark from other fish and how to differentiate male and female sharks.

Capt. King has been fishing since the mid 1940s, and had his first boat in Boston Harbor in 1949. King's charter boat service out of Scituate offers coastal cruises and fishing for a variety of local species including sharks.

Honored At Pinning Ceremony

Fifty Two Graduate From Quincy College Associate Degree Nursing Program

Fifty-two graduates of Quincy College's Associate Degree Program in Nursing recently received their distinctive school pins signifying their graduation.

The Professional Recognition Pinning Ceremony was held at Bethany Congregational Church attended by faculty, staff and members of the graduates' families.

Margaret Rancourt, Coordinator of the Part-Time Associate Degree Program in Nursing, praised the graduates for their hard work. She acknowledged their accomplishments as well as the family and friends who helped them achieve their goals.

Kristin Parks, Chair of the Associate Degree Program in Nursing, emphasized the significance of nurses in society. She discussed how nurses are present for birth as well as the passing of life on earth. "Through this intimate human interaction, a special bond is formed among nurses," she said.

Martha Sue Harris, President of Quincy College, also reflected on the importance of the Nursing Program and the impact that nurses have on humanity.

Paula Jo Beniers, a graduate of the Class of 2008, encouraged the graduates to enjoy every moment of the evening. She confided that she had been too distracted by future concerns during the time of her own pinning ceremony to fully appreciate the significance of the event. Beniers currently works as a nurse for Tufts Medical Hospital.

The graduates were dressed in all-white attire and carried crimson roses.

The graduates chose whom they wanted to do the pinning: Susan Cahill, a member of the Nursing Program Faculty; a professor, a nurse or a family member. The ceremony concluded with the presentation of special student awards and closing comments by Margaret Rancourt.

The recipients were: Kobina Abban-Saah, Karen Arana, Deliris Arroyo, Positive Credit Report, Low Interest Rates

Koch Says Finance Reforms To Save Several Million Dollars

Mayor Thomas Koch says financial reforms pushed by his administration have prompted a positive credit report and low interest rates for required City borrowing that will save taxpayers at least several million dollars.

In the face of a nationwide economic crisis, the city borrowed $46 million for pre-existing projects at an interest rate of less than 1 percent, lower than a number of other municipal bonds issued by cities in Massachusetts recently.

The borrowing package is for long-existing projects such as the new Quincy High School and others that have been paid for with short-term borrowing over the last several years.

Koch has not sought to borrow money for any new projects since taking office last January. The low interest rates were secured after the city was able to maintain its A and A+ ratings with agencies Moody's and Standard and Poor's, respectively.

The City's financial advisor, Cinder McNeerney, of First Southwest Company, said the positive ratings were a direct result of the administration's efforts to clear deficits, overhaul financial operations, and conservative spending.

"This is a positive sign of progress, but we have much work to do," Koch said. "We will continue to identify problems. Work to fix them, and do everything possible to secure our city's future."

The positive news comes at the same time independent auditor issued a draft report of the city's financial condition and how to best fix the problems. The report, authored by James Powers, highlighted a number of the same solutions as the credit report, specifically the City's correction of inappropriate accounting methods in the Water and Sewer Department, unfunded budget items, and the elimination of deficits.

"This report will be our roadmap for moving forward," Koch said. "It highlighted some of the work we have been able to accomplish, and some that we still need to get done to right our ship. I am confident that with the action taking to date, we are well on our way to a stable future."

McNamee Seeks Sewer Repair Funds From Beechwood Center

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee wants any funds left in the Beechwood On the Bay coffers directed to the city's Sewer Rehabilitation Fund.

In a resolution filed last week, McNamee formally asked Mayor Thomas Koch to review the final financial statements of the Beechwood non-profit, officially Beechwood Community Life Center, with an eye to reimbursement funds for the city.

McNamee believes that the Beechwood daycare is responsible for thousands of dollars in damage to the sewer system at the former Myles Standish School which was leased to Beechwood for one dollar a year for more than a decade.

The Beechwood trustees have begun filing for dissolution, according to Jill Butterworth, Deputy Press Secretary, Office of Attorney General.

At this time, there are no figures available on the final assets of the agency. Beechwood's 2007 financial return listed $255,505 in net end of year assets or fund balances. However, the agency, also, outlined a $103,018 operating deficit.

No figures are available for 2008.

Council, state representative and Norfolk County district attorney.

As district attorney he was noted for cracking down on drug abuse and for establishing pioneer drug education classes in Massachusetts schools.

As a philanthropist he has given most generously to numerous worthy causes. Among them:

Scholarships of $1,000 each to 104 Quincy and North Quincy High School graduates to attend the University of Massachusetts, his alma mater. And $750,000 to the university where he was a basketball star.

A $25,000 basketball court at the South Shore YMCA.

Repairs at St. Ann's School and donations to St. Ann's Church exceeding $200,000.

The $40,000 George Burke Fitness Center at the new Quincy High School. He is a 1950 graduate of QHS where he captained the basketball team. And attended Thayer Academy where he captained that basketball team and is a member of the Hall of Fame.

Numerous generous donations to such worthy causes as Father Bill's Place, Quincy Medical Center, where he is a member of the QMC Foundation Board, Salvation Army, Germantown Neighborhood Center, Thomas Crane Library, Quincy Teen Mothers, Quincy Community Action Programs, Quincy Historical Society, Interfaith Social Services, Boy Scouts of America.

In 2004, he rescued the Colonel John Quincy Tankard, which had been put up for auction in New York City by United First Parish Church, which needed money for repairs for the historic church.

The tankard is the only known direct link to Colonel Quincy, for who the city was named. The grandfather of President John Quincy Adams, there is no known photo of him.

Burke's bid and cost to bring the heirloom back to Quincy was approximately $200,000.

The tankard is on loan to the city and on display with security in the lobby of the new City Hall. Burke said he has provided in his will to gift the tankard to the city.

Burke is a 1956 graduate of UMass-Amherst and 1959 graduate of Boston College Law School where he was class president.

At UMass, he is in the Hall of Fame with only one of four player numbers to have been retired. Burke and Julius Erving shared the same number in different years. He is also in the New England Basketball Hall of Fame. And was a Boston Celtics rookie.

He is a Korean War era veteran, with the rank of captain in the U.S. Army. He is a member of the Quincy Bar Association, the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and U.S. Supreme Court. He is a member of Morrisette Legion Post.

A Wollaston resident, he and his wife, Sandra (Back-often) have been married 50 years. They have five children, Jeanne-Marie Hanlon, Susan Lee Burke-Lewis, Joanne Burke-Sherman, George G. Burke, III and Debra Lynne Burke-Corley and 12 grandchildren.

Burke is the founder and senior partner of his law firm located at 339 Hancock St.

Tough Measures Suggested To Balance Fiscal '10 Budget

City Councillor At-Large John Keenan has filed a resolve suggesting specific draconian measures that could be used to meet expected increases in costs and cuts in revenue in the budgets for Fiscal 2010 and the balance of Fiscal 2009.

A second resolution, proposed by Ward 1 Councillor Daniel Raymond and At-Large Councillor Joseph Finn, would have the Finance Committee devise a mission statement for deliberations on the Fiscal 2010 budget.

Both resolves were filed in the Jan. 20 Council meeting and referred to the Finance Committee for consideration along with budget discussions.

Keenan's proposal asks Mayor Thomas Koch to consider cuts in personnel in all departments, including Police, Fire and Public Works, reductions in school class sizes, closure of the Wollaston and Adams Shore libraries and the sale of advertising on fire engines.

Other cuts on the long list of recommendations include consolidation of fire stations, reconsideration of the Central Middle School construction schedule, a reduced school transportation program, further consolidation of school athletic teams.

Also reduction of hours at the Main and North Quincy libraries, private inspections with certification rather than city inspections, sale or lease of certain parks, and reductions the number of fire apparatus during certain shifts.

Other revenue sources suggested by Keenan include increased fees for street opening permits, a trash collection fee, "hot spot" fees for excessive crime-related calls and fees for excessive fire alarms, increased fees for facilities used by leagues and groups.

Also increased fees for seasonal camps and recreation programs, increased fines for late return of library books, fees for advertising at Adams Field, and limited advertising on police vehicles (an "adopt a cruiser" program).

The Raymond-Finn proposal calls for the Mayor, the Council President, the Finance Committee Chair, the Chief Financial Officer and the Chief Assessor to prepare an analysis of the Fiscal 2010 budget and tax rate and its impact on the average homeowner.

All department heads would submit to the City Council a list of personnel openings budgeted but not filled for Fiscal 2008 and 2009.

The Finance Committee before April 20 would vote on a Mission Statement that includes the goals of the committee and the methodology it would use during deliberations on the Fiscal 2010 budget.

One of the questions to be answered in the Mission Statement is: "Should we take action in order to guarantee the residential homeowners that their real estate tax payments will not increase for Fiscal 2010?"

Ward 4 Democrats To Caucus Feb. 7

Ward 4 Democrats will have a caucus Saturday, Feb. 7 at 10 a.m. at the Commonwealth Restaurant, 79 Parkway to elect delegates and alternates to the 2009 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Delegates will be divided equally among men and women.

The convention will be held Saturday, June 6 at the MassMutual center in Springfield. At that time, Democrats from across the state will adopt the party platform. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Ward 4.

Candidates for delegates and alternates must consent to nomination in writing and must be present at the caucus. All ballots will be written in secret. Those not elected as delegates or alternate who meet the qualifications, may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority or disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct at the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed at the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland St., Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129 no later than 10 days after the caucus date.

For more information, call Chairman Thomas A. Fabrizio, 617-479-0037.

Raymondi: 'Not Going To Have A Hearing With A Gun To My Head'

City Council Cancels Meeting With B.J.'s Over Permit Claim

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council last week voted 6-2 to cancel a scheduled February meeting with the B.J.'s Warehouse development team after learning that the company's legal council is claiming a special permit by default.

Raymondi and five other councillors voted to cancel the hearing after concluding that, under the circumstances, the council would have little to no leverage in requiring B.J.'s to adapt their project to council recommendations.

"I'm not going to have a public hearing with a gun to my head," said Ward 2 Daniel Raymondi, adding that the council was not about to "roll over like dead seals" on the B.J.'s project.

Councillors indicated they will hold the hearing or reschedule a public hearing if the 'applicant files a waiver and re-engages the process,' according to Raymondi.

Otherwise, both City Solicitor James Timmins and Raymondi agreed, "It's a litigation matter."

"We've made a grave mistake," said Raymondi, referring to the council's apparent failure to act on the B.J.'s application within the legal time limits.

The council learned of B.J.'s claim after City Solicitor James Timmins described a Jan. 20 letter from B.J.'s attorneys, Lisa Goodheart and C. Dylan Sanders of Sugarman, Rogers, Barshak & Cohen, P.C.

In the letter, Goodheart

and Sanders claim the special permit has been granted automatically, because the council failed to act in a timely manner under the law.

Timmins called the letter, "an orchestrated attempt to threaten this body."

"The special permit is granted as a result of the failure of the special permit granting authority to hold a public hearing on or before October 7, 2008 (the last day of the public hearing period, as extended by agreement) and issue a final decision within ninety days."

Under the law, the council must conduct a public hearing as Special Permit Granting Authority (SPGA) within 65 days of a formal filing and issue a decision within 90 days of closing the public hearing.

In their letter, Goodheart and Sanders, said the time is up and the special permit is automatically granted.

"If this goes in by default, I think that's a shame," said Councillor John Keenan who voted with Raymondi, as did Councillors Joseph Finn, Michael, McFarland, Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, and Leo Kelly, Ward 1.

Developers for B.J.'s Wholesale Club, Inc., announced plans for a 84,000 sq. ft. outlet at 200 Crown Colony in July, 2008, and had hoped to break ground in November.

However, the project hit a roadblock, when the Planning Board rejected the B.J.'s site plan by a 2-2 vote in October.

The company took the Planning Board decision to Land Court and as a backup plan, sought a Planned Unit Development or PUD designation from the City Council in October.

City Solicitor James Timmins said the Land Court judge issued no findings on the issue, and, in early January, sent the matter back to the Planning Board for further site plan review.

The judge's ruling offered "a way for the city to maintain control over the project, rather than the Land Court," said Timmins in interpreting that decision.

In the meantime, the clock was running on B.J.'s application for a special permit.

Council President Jay Davis whose district includes the Crown Colony property and Ward 6 Brian McNamee opposed the motion.

Timmins expressed "concern as to how the city has dealt with this."

Council members agreed to a new procedure to insure better tracking of PUD applications.

Ward 5 Democrats To Caucus Feb. 7 At Commonwealth Restaurant

Registered Democrats in Ward 5 will be hold a caucus at The Commonwealth Restaurant 79 Parkway on Saturday, Feb. 7 at 10 a.m. to elect 10 delegates and four alternates to the 2009 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

City Gets A-1 Bond Rating

Good News And Bad News On Economic Front

By LAURA GRIFFIN

There's good news and bad news on the city's economic front and City Council got a heavy dose of both at last week's council meeting.

The good news is the city has an A-1 bond rating and can finance bonds, short-term, at rock-bottom interest rates, but the bad news is the city's book-keeping has been as tangled as cold pasta.

Cinder McNamee of First Southwest Co. outlined the city's position in the bond market while Jim Powers of independent auditors, Powers and Sullivan of Wakefield, presented a preliminary or draft audit report.

The draft details nine lax and unacceptable practices called management weaknesses, including deficit accounts and, in one case, a fraudulent practice in the 2008 budget and in budgets past.

As one example, the audit found a $1 million deficit in the police and fire department detail accounts, in some instances, due to slow collections.

Administrators have received the preliminary report and auditors from Sullivan and Powers will file a final report in the spring with notations on the city's improvements or non-improvements.

Powers and Sullivan focused on the 2008 budget which was prepared in the Phelan administration and executed for six months each in both the Phelan and Koch administrations. The 2008 fiscal year ended on June 30, 2008.

"The City's financial condition has significantly deteriorated over the last several years," noted auditors in their draft. "If this condition is not reversed, the City's ability to provide essential core services will be adversely affected."

Mayor Thomas Koch hired the auditing firm last spring in an effort to overhaul the city's approach to funding and financing.

Since then, Koch reorganized the city's finance departments into the Municipal Finance Department and appointed former treasurer Warren Sproul as Director.

The effect of such changes should be included in Powers and Sullivan's final report in the spring.

As for the good financial news, McNamee told councillors the city has the "highest short-term notes rating" possible as an "affirmation of what's taking place in the city."

Both Standard & Poors and Moody have issued an A1 rating for short-term bonds, according to McNamee.

In layman's terms, that means that the city can bundle all $46 million in new and old bonds at a 1.5 percent rate bid by Bank of America for a one year term.

An additional premium of $360,452.12 brings the borrowing rate down to point 72 percent or less than three quarters of one percent.

McNamee did point out that rating agencies generally look favorably on municipal bonds as cities, towns and states tend to be good credit risks.

She also stated that, in order to keep the ratings, the city must address its structural deficiencies and increase its reserve funds.

Quincy's most favorable asset for bond rates is its potential "economic base," said McNamee, adding that for bonding agencies, "They see it (Quincy) as a powerhouse."

McNamee did warn councillors that the bond premium should be encumbered and used only to help defray the initial payments on the bond.

As for the audit, Powers and Sullivan reviewed the 2008 finances and budget, and found serious problems in fund reporting, recording, oversight, and planning and, in at least one case, a deliberate misstatement of debt.

The auditors attributed some major finance problems to past practices. "The demands of balancing the FY2007 and FY2008 budgets along with limiting the increase in real estate taxes have led to aggressive revenue projects which fell well short of projections...."

In addition to major restructuring and internal controls, the auditors recommended strengthening the collection process on receivables and tax liens, new oversight on cash accounts, and rebuilding the stabilization and reserve fund balances.

The most glaring problems include the following:

Inadequate internal controls-Reconciliation of cash and investments

Police and Fire fund deficits.--The police detail fund had a deficit of $875,000 as of June 30, 2008 and the fire detail fund had a cash deficit of $125,000, partially due to uncollected receivables.

The auditors estimate a $400,000 to $700,000 deficit even after all payments are made.

Allocation of Indirect Costs--This issue affecting enterprise funds in 2007-08 has been addressed and corrected, according to the auditors

The Honeywell contract, also, raised red flags for the auditors, as did the lack of the monitoring of Honeywell performance and effectiveness.

The auditors recommended several practical changes, such as the following:

Better reporting of school activity funds. Both the school department and the city are "in violation of the law" by not following the legal requirements for auditing student activity funds and providing detailed reporting of all balances and expenditures.

The auditors warned that such funds could be spent on purposes outside the scope of the law.

Requiring all city employees to take a one-week or longer vacation as an internal control function designed to help an employer to detect errors, inefficiencies and irregularities.

The snow and ice budget is of particular interest this year as the budget is already hundreds of thousands of dollars in the red due to this season's snowfall.

The auditors found that "under-budgeting" snow and ice budgets has been a consistent practice with the city. Although it is legal, "it does not demonstrate prudent budgeting practices."

Auditors discussed the financial status of Quincy College, but are requesting additional documents.

Quincy College funds are separated from city finances as an enterprise fund.

The auditors, also, recommended establishing an internal audit function, which was approved by City Council last fall, but no action has been taken.

At this time, the acting auditor is an employee of the Municipal Finance Department, rather than chosen by the City Council. To date, the council has not acted to hire an auditor or to contract with a firm. The position has been vacant for eight months.

Councillors discussed several issues with Powers before referring the audit report to the Finance Committee.

Councillor Joseph Finn pointed out the councillors were at a disadvantage as they'd only received the 80 pages of double-sided fine print hours earlier.

"We received this, this evening," said Councillor Joseph Finn, adding it was "frustrating" to have it "just handed to us tonight."

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond questioned the dollar value of Quincy College as an asset for the city and in potential discussions for separating the college from the city.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee sought opinions from Sullivan and McNamee on restructuring the city's $31 million debt for the Honeywell project to lower interest rates than those contracted with Honeywell.

In addition, McNamee questioned whether Honeywell's assumptions on savings are correct now that fuel costs are lower.

These audit statements relate to the Honeywell issues and activities in 2007 and 2008.

"Although the contract was executed in May of 2007, the City did not budget for the $1.4 million scheduled lease payment due in (the FY2008 budget)."

"The city paid the lease payment prior to the appropriation order in May 2008...." The transaction was left off the cashbook until the appropriation was voted and that "could be considered fraud."

"The FY2007 financial statements properly recorded the capital lease liability, but reported a $32 million capital asset in error."

The audit report and management letter filed with City Council is a preliminary or draft report.

In keeping with municipal audit practices, Powers and Sullivan will issue a final report in late Spring when they incorporate the administration's response to their recommendations.

Barber and owner John Smith recently celebrated the grand opening of his eclectic new barbershop, Crew Cutz, located at 1212 Hancock Street in Quincy Center.

On hand to celebrate were Mayor Thomas P. Koch, Quincy 2000 Collaborative Executive Director Dean Rizzo, Discover Quincy Executive Director Mark Carey, area business owners, and Crew Cutz staff members.

Crew Cutz is an innovative, modern barbershop that combines the current styles of today with a throwback to the good old days. While additional services such as a free internet café, tanning, and complimentary back and shoulder massages give Crew Cutz a fresh and modern edge, other services such as a razor shave and shoe shining are reminiscent of the traditional barbershops from years past.

Smith said he is optimistic about starting a business in these economic times.

"I strongly believe that if you have a solid business plan, offer a product that is unique and different, and provide stellar customer service, you can succeed even when the economic forecast isn't ideal."

While working through college, Smith performed haircuts at UMASS-Amherst where he was known as the "Dorm Room Barber."

In 2007, following graduate school, Smith began his career as a school guidance counselor while simultaneously working at Floyd's Barber Shop in Boston, where he met his colleagues and current "Crew" staff, David Martiroso and Keith Battles.

Initially, Smith had plans to continue his education at Rutgers Law School in New Jersey to obtain his Juris doctorate in business law; however, he decided to take a chance and open Crew Cutz with the help of his attorney instead of waiting the three years to finish law school.

In the future, Smith said he hopes to continue his career in education as well as teach high school students the art of barbering.

Crew Cutz is located at 1212 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169, (617) 934-4920. Hours are Monday-Saturday, 10:00 a.m. - 8:00 p.m. Services include men's and boy's haircuts, tanning, shoe shining, razor shaves. Crew Cutz can be found online at <http://www.myspace.com/crewcutz>.

Blue Hill & Quarry Museum's David Hodgdon Participates In World Cup

David P. Hodgdon, founder and Executive Director of the Blue Hill Adventure & Quarry Museum, recently participated in the World Cup Combined Nordic events at Whistler Olympic Park in British Columbia, Canada.

Hodgdon was part of the 12-member team of international Nordic Ski patrol, and the only person from Massachusetts and just one of two from the United States to take part.

The World Cup '09 games are a precursor to the Vancouver Winter Olympics in 2010. On January 16-17 Hodgdon participated in the Federation of international Skiing (FIS) Nordic Festival, which showcased the Nordic Combined World Cup competition. His Nordic Ski Patrol was responsible for the Ski Jump and Cross Country races.

Hodgdon has past experience working Winter Olympics and World Cups. Starting with Lake Placid in 1980, he has worked in the Salt Lake City and Calgary Winter Olympic Games; he did not work in the Torino Winter Olympics in 2006 as the Italian army took over the role of Ski Patrol.

The concept of Nordic Ski Patrol goes back to the days when St. Bernard dogs were used to rescue skiers trapped in avalanches and accidents. Hodgdon helped to start the Northeast Chapter of the National Nordic Ski patrol and then went on to found the Nordic Ski Patrol for the Blue Hills area.

The National Nordic Ski Patrol magazine did a special on the 40th anniversary of the founding of Nordic Ski Patrol in 2008, which Hodgdon co-authored.

Hodgdon and the Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum, located in Presidents Place in Quincy Center, will host a talk and slide show presentation on Feb. 2 from 7:30-8:30 p.m. in the basement conference room.

For more information, contact Kumu Gupta at 617-328-0703.

Dentist Lectures On Dentures To Seniors

Dr. Dan Sweeney recently held a presentation about dentures for seniors under the sponsorship of the Council on Aging at the Koch Park and Recreation Complex.

The doctor answered an array of questions such as "What if my current dentures are loose and I don't like the way it looks?" and "How long do dentures last and when to they need to be replaced?"

During the presentation, which revolved around the comfort, beauty and security of Altadonics Assurance Dentures, Dr. Sweeney was able to involve the entire audience.

The program ended with lunch provided by Dr. Sweeney's office. The presentation was a success and the Council on Aging is grateful to the doctor for donating his time.

If you would like to know some more about Dr. Sweeney's expertise, he can be contacted at 539 Adams St., East Milton, or call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1506.

Koch Seeks Wage Freeze With Unions

ing major cuts in state aid and other financial constraints amid an economic crisis that is believed to be the worst in at least a generation.

Substantial budget cuts are a near certainty, Koch said, adding that the administration has already identified cutbacks "in the millions" of dollars for the new fiscal year. Koch is expected to deliver the annual City budget to the City Council much earlier this year than is traditional to provide more time for a full public review of the city's fiscal situation.

"We are focused on protecting the core services of the City, but we know that there will be difficult decisions ahead," Koch said.

Talks aimed at a wage freeze will be the second time in less than a year that the Koch administration has negotiated with all of the city's unions. In the fall, the city's unions agreed to join the state-run health insurance program called the Group Insurance Commission, a move that will save taxpayers $4 million in health insurance costs in the upcoming fiscal year.

Any wage freeze will no impact the mid-year state aid cuts announced last week by

Gov. Deval Patrick, Koch said. The city expects to receive firm numbers from state authorities this week, but officials estimate that the city could be forced to cut an additional $2 million or more from a city budget already slashed by $5 million over the last several months.

"These cuts are more difficult because they come half-way through the fiscal year, but we will be ready to make decisions as soon as we have hard-numbers," Koch said, adding that his team has been dissecting spending for months looking for areas to save money.

C-Mart Public Hearing Slowed By Traffic Issue

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council last week continued the public hearing on the C-Mart supermarket proposal for 30 days after the city's traffic engineer turned thumbs down on the traffic remedies and analysis previously submitted by the developers.

"I am not going to be able to offer a positive recommendation tonight," said John Gillon, Director, Dept. of Traffic and Parking.

Gillon then described existing bottlenecks on the two narrow access roads to the site, Hayward and Holmes Streets; heavy vehicle traffic and parking at similar Asian supermarkets in Boston, and the potential for additional traffic congestion on West Squantum Street as well as Hancock Street.

Gillon, also, challenged the "20% (traffic) discount" that C-Mart's traffic engineers had used in estimating vehicular traffic.

BSC Group estimated a high number of pedestrian shoppers versus shoppers using vehicles in preparing its report for C-Mart.

JACK GILLON

Gillon concluded, "... this particular proposal raises many question and the proponent should answer all issues to the satisfaction of the City."

"There are problems out there," Gillon told councillors. "Maybe they'll convince me."

Attorney Christopher Harrington who represents C-Mart Supermarket II, Inc. asked councillors for the 30-day extension after explaining that BSC Group needed additional time to review Gillon's findings which they had just received.

Councillors unanimously agreed on the extension but voted 6-2 to close the 'public comment' portion of the hearing as requested by Council President Jay Davis.

Davis said the public hearing could remain open even if councillors accepted no further "public comment" and City Solicitor James Timmins later agreed.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond and Councillor Joseph Finn opposed the motion.

Approximately 60 persons attended the hearing and nearly a dozen carried signs supporting the supermarkets. None spoke.

In the past the issue has drawn up to 500 observers to public hearing sessions and over 100 residents and businesspersons, many with the aid of a Chinese language interpreter have addressed the councillors.

No date has been set for the continued hearing.

Women's Fitness Classes To Start Feb. 2

The Quincy Recreation Department, in cooperation with the Mayor's Commission on Women, will be conducting registration on a first-come-first serve basis for two Women's Fitness classes starting Feb. 2 at the Fore River Clubhouse.

Both programs will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 8:15 a.m. or 9:15 a.m. Mrs. Karen Gaughan will be the instructor.

Each class includes exercises to improve and strengthen flexibility, endurance and overall fitness. Adaptations in the exercises allow each participant to work out at their own pace.

The cost of the ten-week program is $60. The sessions begin Feb. 2 and will end on April 10. Registration will be taken at the first class.

Persons who cannot make this registration may register weekdays at the main office of the QRD, One Merrymount Parkway or online at QuincyRec.com.

Raise Over $5,000 For Interfaith Services

25 Out Of 150 Take The Frigid Hancock Plunge

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Of the nearly 150 people who braved the cold, windy morning on snow-filled Wollaston Beach Saturday, 25 of them actually went in the water!

The third annual John Hancock Plunge was sponsored by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, the Friends of Wollaston Beach and the State Department of Conservation and Recreation to benefit Quincy's Interfaith Social Services.

Chairman of the QBCC Leo Kelly was excited about the change in venue from Quincy Point's Mound Street Beach to Wollaston Beach because of the increased exposure this location brought to the Hancock Plunge.

Kelly was right about that. Not only was it the largest crowd of participants and spectators the event had witnessed but the media was there in full flurry. Representative of Quincy Access TV, New England Cable News, Marshfield Radio WAITD. The Sun and the Patriot Ledger were all there to report the plunge.

"We try to keep people interested in the day and in the beaches, even in the winter, and I'm glad we're doing this to recognize John Hancock, whose birthday was yesterday and who doesn't get nearly enough recognition in Quincy," said Kelly.

"He was a great patriot and should be recognized in Quincy to the limit."

Radio personality Hank Morse of WROR, WKLB and WTKK, who was there to take the plunge, said, "I want to be here for Interfaith Social Services who feed people every day."

"They're a selfless group and they brought me down here because I'm not in the best shape and I scare the fish back to Cape Cod and make it safe for the other swimmers."

"When everybody gets together like this, you don't even feel the cold. The plunge will last 10 seconds, but tonight when you go home you'll feel good that people are having a meal and are being taken care of because of your efforts."

ISS Executive Director Laura Stracco expressed her extreme gratitude for the support her agency receives from funds raised during the Hancock Plunge.

"The Plunge this year is so critical for us," she said. "We have been inundated this year with requests for financial assistance and for food and we have had an incredible increase in the number of requests for counseling."

"People are feeling anxious, getting depressed during this current economic crisis. They are losing jobs. It's such a stressful situation."

Fees for counseling are offered on a sliding scale basis, and Stracco reports that ISS is one of the only agencies in the area that will offer counseling for a fee which often times slides all the way to zero, depending on financial need.

Event coordinator Chickie Abdallah reported exclusively to The Sun that the event has raised more than $5,000.

"It's just overwhelming," she said, "how people will reach out and help one another. You have to be a good neighbor. I had help along the way and we must pay it forward, and feel good when we put our heads on the pillow at night."

A group of seven good humored men from Executive Lawn Care of Quincy energetically plunged into the frigid waters.

"I think this is a fun event, human activity at its dumbest, and I'm rally excited about it," said crew-member Chris DuComb, who was taking his first plunge.

The Marine Unit of the Quincy Police Department was on hand, and in the water, to insure the safety of plunge participants, who made their way over ice and snow before hitting the ocean.

Even the now-famous "Dunkin' Toe-Nuts," six of them this year, negotiated the precipitous beach to get their toes wet.

Official, ribbon-topped plungers' plungers, along with gift certificates from local merchants went to 9-year-old Shawn Kelly of Quincy, winner of the prize for the youngest plunger; Jennie Penz, for the oldest plunger; and Lorraine Paolucci, for the best costume.

Brian Abdallah, owner of Executive Lawn Care, who raised $600, won the top fund-raiser award, beating out the Marine Corps League's Caddy Post with its $435 donation.

Merchants who donated gift certificates and products for the event were Sea Street Dunkin' Donuts, clam chowder from Best Western Adams Inn, Coop's Bar and Grille in Quincy Point and McKay's Breakfast & Lunch.

And this year's Hancock Plunge had its first corporate sponsor --- the Quincy Citizens Bank.

Interfaith Social Services is a private, non-profit, multi-service agency serving residents of Quincy and surrounding areas.

Its services for those in need include: The Pantry Shelf, providing free food; The Career Closet, providing free workplace attire for women; Homesafe, a program assisting those threatened by homelessness; and the New Directions Counseling Center.

The Bureau Drawer, a thrift shop organized and operated by volunteers, assists in raising fund for the agency, and donations are welcomed. ISS is also supported by gifts from individuals, businesses, organizations and faith communities.

Donations may be made payable to Interfaith Social Services and mailed to Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, c/o Chickie Abdallah, 38 Silver St., Quincy 02169.

On Monday, Jan. 19, 2009, at approximately 9 p.m., Officer Michael Duran was on routine patrol when he observed a vehicle drive past him on Sumner Street towards Main Street. The officer noted the license plate was not illuminated, so he turned around and pulled up behind the vehicle, which was then at the intersection of Sumner and South Street.

Officer Duran observed the vehicle as it went onto South Street towards Main Street. The officer clocked the vehicle traveling 35 MPH in a 25MPH zone. The officer activated his blue lights and siren but the vehicle turned onto Main Street and then made an abrupt right turn onto Harrington Avenue. The vehicle, with four occupants, continued to travel on Harrington Avenue at a slow speed but did not stop. The two rear passengers looked back at the Officer as they moved about their seats. The two front seat passengers also appeared to be moving around in the vehicle. Officer Duran notified dispatch that the vehicle was not stopping, then moments later the suspect vehicle stopped on Harrington Avenue.

Officer Duran approached the driver (suspect #1) and recognized him as someone he had dealt with in the past. He also noticed that no one was wearing seatbelts. When the driver provided his license and registration, Officer Duran observed that the driver's hand was shaking. The Officer requested identification from the passengers so that he could issue them citations for "Failing to Wear a Seatbelt." One passenger provided identification but the other two did not have any. Both left side windows were down at the time so that the Officer could speak to all the occupants. As the Officer spoke to the occupants, he focused his attention on the right rear passenger, who was wearing an oversized sweatshirt with a dark colored metal object protruding from underneath.

Fearing that this occupant could be concealing a weapon, Officer Duran inquired what he was hiding. The suspect (#2) looked around at the other passengers and did not reply. When asked a second time, he again did not reply. Officer Duran then took out his service weapon and held it at the low ready position as he instructed all occupants to place their hands on the interior roof.

Suspect #2 complied but on two occasions brought his hand down to his waist. Officer Duran then pointed his gun at the occupants and instructed suspect #3, who was sitting in the left rear seat, to slowly take his right hand and lift up suspect #2's sweatshirt. When suspect #3 lifted up suspect #2's sweatshirt, Officer Duran saw a Tec 9 firearm (large capacity assault firearm) on suspect #2's lap. The small metal portion first viewed by the Officer turned out to be the barrel end of the weapon. Officer Duran immediately radioed QPD Communications, broadcasting the keyword, "Gun", which resulted in all available units responding to his location.

At the same time, Officer Tom Loughlin who had just arrived, cautiously walked up the right side of the suspect vehicle. Suspect #2 then opened the right rear passenger door of the vehicle and fled up the driveway of 50 Harrington Avenue. As he fled the vehicle, the firearm that was on his lap fell to the floor below where he was sitting. Officer Loughlin pursued the suspect and apprehended him in a backyard a few houses away.

Detective William Ward assisted Officer Loughlin and after advising the suspect of his Miranda Rights, a pat frisk was conducted and a Silencer, which belonged to the Tec 9 firearm, was found in the right front pants pocket of suspect #2. Officer Matt Patten arrived on scene and while Officer Duran held the other three suspects at gunpoint, Officer Patten reached in and grabbed the Tec 9 firearm to prevent the other suspects from using it. Officer Patten secured the weapon in the police cruiser trunk and as he did this, he noted that the firearm's serial number was obliterated. With Officer Patten providing cover, Officer Duran then removed suspect #1, the driver from the vehicle and handcuffed him. A quick pat frisk revealed $250.00 in multiple folds, which Officer Duran knew from his training and experience that drug dealers often have money in separate folds indicating separate drug transactions. Officer Patten then removed suspect #3, the left rear passenger, from the vehicle and read him his rights, then found bullets, a loaded magazine for a 380 handgun and a knife on the suspect. This knife was a large folding knife, manufactured so that the handle could be used as brass knuckles. Detective Brian Coen arrived on scene and observed a Smith and Wesson .380 firearm underneath the drivers seat, which was visible from the left rear passengers seat, as the left rear door was open. Detective Brian Coen recovered the firearm and removed a fully loaded magazine from the firearm. Detective Coen turned the firearm and magazine over to Detective Tom Cleary. Officer Steve O'Donoghue then systematically removed suspect #4 from the vehicle. She was read her rights as per Miranda to which she stated she understood. She was searched by Officer Siobhan O'Connor, who found a small bag of marijuana and fifty-nine Oxycotin pills on the suspect. The estimated street value is $4720. She also had $273.00 and a cell phone. The money was in two folds of ($253 & $20). The drug evidence was later turned over to Detective William O'Brien. While all suspects were detained on scene, QPD Dispatcher Carol Flynn confirmed that none of the individuals possessed a License to Carry a Firearm or a Firearms Identification Card. Nice Work! Suspect #1, a 17 year old Dorchester resident, was charged with Possessing a Firearm Without a FID Card, Illegal Possession of Ammunition, Trafficking Class A (Oxycotin) Conspiracy to Violate Drug Law, Drug Violation Near School or Park, Failure to Stop for Police, Speeding, Defective Plate Light and Seatbelt Violation. He also had two outstanding arrest warrants. Suspect #2, a 17 year old Dorchester resident, was charged with Possessing a Firearm Without an FID Card, Illegal Possession of Ammunition, Carrying a Firearm Without a License, Defacing Firearm Serial Number, Illegal Possession of a Silencer, Possession of a Large Capacity Feeding Device, Trafficking Class A (Oxycotin), Conspiracy to Violate Drug Law, Drug Violation Near School or Park, Knowingly Resisting Arrest and Failure to Wear Seatbelt. Suspect #3, a 24 year old Boston resident, was charged with Possessing a Firearm Without an FID Card, Illegal Possession of Ammunition, Carrying a Dangerous Weapon to wit Brass Knuckles, Trafficking Class A (Oxycotin), Conspiracy to Violate Drug Law, Drug Violation Near School or Park and Failure to Wear Seatbelt. Suspect #4, a 19 year old Boston resident, was charged with Illegal Possession of Ammunition, Possessing a Firearm Without an FID Card, Trafficking Class A (Oxycotin), Conspiracy to Violate Drug Law, Drug Violation Near School or Park and Failure to Wear Seatbelt.

Detectives questioned the suspects and then passed on this information to the Boston Police Homicide Division, who are now looking at these suspects as being involved in a murder a few weeks ago! Again, Nice Work!

STOLEN MOTOR VEHICLES: Wollaston Avenue, Broad Street

PAST BREAKS AND ATTEMPTS: Bicknell Street
CAR BREAKS: Holbrook Road, Faxon Road, 200 block of Atlantic Street, Parkingway.

SAFE WALKING: Due to recent snowstorms, some of the sidewalks are difficult to maneuver and may require walking in the street. It is recommended that pedestrians walk towards traffic for many reasons. Visibility may be limited to the driver by uncleared snow from the windshield, snow or sun glare or salt coated glass. The roadway may also be icy in spots. The roadway could also be narrowed by snowbanks making it tight for two cars to pass by each other. These conditions are only worsened by drivers who text or engage in lengthy cellphone calls. Pedestrians often have limited vision or hearing due to winter clothing so they may be unaware of an approaching car coming up behind them.

By facing oncoming traffic, a pedestrian will have a chance to jump out of the way of a threat.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

A Closer Look At Fire Prevention Incidents

As promised, I'll occasionally convey some details concerning recent fire incidents. Included herein is three, one recent incident in Quincy, another 2 from Newton.

In Quincy, a child accidentally tipped a lamp onto a mattress and left it there. The lamp contained an incandescent bulb, hot enough to ignite the mattress over time. It did and we were called to a bedroom fire soon afterwards.

A typical incandescent light bulb emits heat at around 260 degrees Fahrenheit. That's enough heat that consideration should be given to maintaining a lamp on a stable base, away from combustibles, so that the hot bulb and combustibles will never come in contact with each other. In this instance they did while the lamp hadn't been returned back onto its stable base; consequently the resulting bedroom fire.

Two recent incidents in Newton caught my eye as well. Both took place during the holiday season, both involved chimney fires. Although I am unaware of the details surrounding both incidents, conclusions and recommendations can be made here just the same.

I suspect one of three things occurred causing these two fires. If over time a fireplace is frequently used, creosote can build within the masonry flue. Creosote is a tarry, combustible residue and byproduct left attached to the flue walls, which can build upon itself, eventually occluding or partially occluding the flue way. It can also eventually ignite.

A flue is meant as a passageway to conduct combustion products, gases, heat and hot embers, to the outside of a structure. It is not designed to house an actual fire. This is particularly true of older chimneys where flue liners are not present or where mortar has broken down leaving spaces where fire and embers can migrate and ignite wooden structural members.

Either way, both possibilities suggest that chimneys should be both inspected and cleaned prior to seasonal use. Make certain the flue remains clean and clear of creosote, vegetation and nesting material, while a thorough inspection can assure the chimney's integrity as well.

The wood framing around a fireplace can also become more susceptible to ignition over time. Years of fire can breakdown wood framing adjacent to masonry making it easier to ignite. Consequently, there are those instances where one final larger fire is too much for the immediate structure and the framing ignites. This typically occurs within the wall making it more difficult to detect. The fire then extends through concealed spaces behind the wall and can be well underway prior to detection.

It happens, and once again emphasizes the importance of respecting, inspecting and maintaining fireplaces and chimneys on a regular basis. Particularly with older structures, preventive measures are a necessity. Be safe!

Rev. Swanson Teaching Sermons Start Feb. 1

Rev. John Swanson of Union Congregational Church, Wollaston, Pastor, an Adjunct Professor at Eastern Nazarene College, will be giving teaching sermons in February.

On Feb. 1, he will focus on the Minor and Major Prophets of the Bible, looking at the role of prophecy in Bible times and today.

His sermon on Feb. 8 will look at the Book of Psalms. Pastor Swanson will give an overview of the history, structure and various genres of the Psalms as well as their timeless teachings and applications.

For President's Day, Feb. 15, he will lecture on the Presidents of "The Roaring Twenties." Warren G. Harding, Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover, in a sermon entitled, "Nice, Sad and Unlucky." Though largely a history lesson, Pastor Swanson will also touch on the Old Testament lesson for the day, II Kings 5:1-14.

Sterling Students Conducting Third U.S. Troop Drive

Sterling Middle School's Third Annual U.S. Troop Drive is underway and ready to accept donations.

"The Sterling community greatly values the dedication, leadership and spirit our troops embody," said Principal Christine Barrett in describing the students' enthusiasm for the project.

"To show our appreciation, the staff and students are providing various items needed by the troops."

After the items are collected, students will assemble the care packages for the soldiers serving overseas. The "Troop Drive" will wrap up Friday, Feb. 13.

Persons interested in contributing to the drive may drop off supplies at Sterling Middle School, 444 Granite St., Quincy.

FOOT NOTES

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

CALCANEUS FRACTURE

The calcaneus is the bone in the back of the foot commonly referred to as the heel bone. This bone helps support the foot and is important in normal walking. The joint on top of the calcaneus is responsible for allowing the foot to rotate inwards and outwards. Fractures of the calcaneus are almost always the result of high-energy injuries, which can occur as a result of a fall from a height, such as a ladder. Other causes of a calcaneus fracture include automobile accidents and sports injuries. The calcaneus can also sustain a stress fracture, an injury sometimes seen in long-distance runners and other athletes. Calcaneus fractures cause significant swelling and pain in the back of the foot. The first step in treating any foot problem is an accurate diagnosis. This requires a comprehensive history, physical exam, and, in some cases, x-rays and lab tests. Depend on it - whatever is causing your foot pain, whether it's heel pain or a disease, a hereditary condition or any number of ills that can plague the feet - you can count on us for relief. For family podiatry that combines state of the art technology and old-fashioned care and compassion, call 781-986-3668 for an appointment at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals. P.S. Calcaneus fractures may be treated in a cast, or surgery may be recommended.

Septic Tank Maintenance

Q. I have a septic system, and in the five years that I've lived in this house, I have never put in RID-X (a bacterial treatment for septic tanks) until this month. How do I know if I need to do this? Is it really necessary to do it every month? I don't know how long the septic tank has been in. — Valerie B., Edwardsville, Ill.

A. Septic-system additives claim to keep bacteria levels in the system high, as bacteria play a role in processing the waste in a septic tank. The jury is out as to whether regular monthly application of these additives really helps maintain the system. I have used additives to kick-start a septic system that had been unused for several months, but didn't need to add more in the months afterward.

The best way to make certain your septic system works well is to have it cleaned and inspected by a septic service. As it has been more than five years since you moved in, with no maintenance done, it's probably time for a pump-out. If you're using additives because frequent backups are occurring, it's definitely time for a pump-out.

Find out as much about your tank as possible from the service technician during the visit. How big is your tank? Its size, the number of occupants in the house and state guidelines on septic tanks will determine how often the tank needs maintenance. Does your system have a septic field, or holding tanks?

Once this maintenance is done, you can keep the system healthy a number of ways. Additives are one method, but you also can keep the tank's bacteria count high by not using too much water and not dumping bacteria-killing cleaners or chemicals down the drain. Never flush cat litter, cigarette butts, coffee grounds, dirt, latex or prescription medicines down the drain.

Now Is The Time For Smaller Home Remodeling Projects

(ARA) - While new home construction has come to a grinding halt in most of the country, smaller home-renovation projects are still a viable option for homeowners.

In fact, the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) recently reported a "slight increase" in minor remodeling projects in its third-quarter 2008 Remodeling Market Index.

What does all this mean for homeowners? It spells opportunity. And for those who want to invest in their homes, it's tough to beat bathroom additions and remodels, which rank high on NAHB's list of the most prevalent remodeling jobs.

Bathroom upgrades still provide a solid investment return, even in the present tightening economy, according to Remodeling Magazine's 2008-2009 "Cost vs.

Value" report. The magazine estimates that a midrange bathroom redo will recoup nearly 75 percent of its cost; a bathroom addition recoups just under 65 percent.

Get the most for your money. Thinking about a new or improved bath? If so, avoid the high cost and hassle of creating under-floor plumbing connections -- one of the most expensive and time-consuming aspects of any bath project. Instead, use macerating technology, an above-floor plumbing system that can be installed right on top of an existing floor in any part of the house in only half a day.

With this type of installation, waste and water are pumped away and up from the plumbing fixtures through small-diameter piping into the sewer or septic tank. No more digging to set plumbing drainage lines.

"This technology is easier, more convenient and less invasive," says plumber Mike Sikorski of East Taunton, Mass., who installs Saniflo brand plumbing products. "It saves my customers an average of $1,000, and that's on the low side."

Mike Coletto, another Saniflo installer and an independent plumbing, HVAC and electrical contractor in Illinois, agrees. "If a bathroom is on your project list, consider above-floor plumbing -- especially if you're planning a basement remodel," he says. "Saniflo makes installing a basement bath a snap."

Here are some additional ways to keep your home bathroom remodel low-cost:

• Fix up vs. Replace: Instead of buying new cabinets, resurface or paint them; update handles and drawer pulls. Repair damaged walls and redo the caulking around sinks. Tile only halfway up the wall.

• Improve vs. Expand: Instead of knocking down walls, gain space by replacing a hinged door with a pocket door. Put in a recessed medicine cabinet. Install a bowed shower curtain to increase the interior shower space.

• Lighten and Brighten: Repaint, using neutral colors. Repair damaged flooring, or install tile right over the floor. Place task lighting over the vanity, instead of installing a window.

• Think Green: Replace old windows with energy-efficient models and you may qualify for a federal tax rebate. Replace leaky faucets with low-flow models.

Remodeling Trend: Make Room For The Parents

(ARA) - Think you have a crowded house? Maybe you're not alone. Surprising new data from the U.S. Census Bureau finds that many Americans are making room in their home for parents, followed by siblings and other relatives.

From 2000 to 2007, the number of parents who move in with their adult children grew 67 percent to 3.6 million. Even more interesting, the number of parents younger than age 65 in these households increased by 75 percent and those 65 and older rose 62 percent.

With uncertain economic times and higher housing costs, combining households has become a more prudent approach to managing expenses. If you're planning on making room for parents, siblings or others, a room remodel might be first on your agenda. It is estimated that more than a million homes undergo a remodel or renovation each year. And now's a great time to connect with contractors.

Kitchens remain the most popular room for remodeling, according to the National Association of the Remodeling Industry (NARI), because they tend to keep their resale value. Kitchen upgrades come closer than any other home improvement project to recouping the remodeling cost when the house is sold.

And today, many people are looking for cost-effective yet environmentally sound remodeling techniques. In their book, "Green Remodeling: Changing the World One Room at a Time," authors David Johnston and Kim Master write, "Green remodeling actually makes and saves money. And this is not just long-term energy saving costs; the cost to implement green features ("first costs") is often less than remodeling by conventional standards. In the long term, green renovations increase the resale value of your home."

If you're looking for home improvements that are also good for the environment, consider these green remodeling tips from Pella Windows & Doors:

• Windows -- Install Low-E double or triple-pane windows for at least the east and west windows, subjected to intense morning and afternoon sunlight, causing significant summer heat gain. Look for a Solar Heat Gain Coefficient (SHGC) of 0.40 or less. And select ENERGY STAR qualified windows and doors for greater energy efficiency.

• Lighting -- Purchase compact fluorescent bulbs; they typically use 75 percent less energy.

• Appliances -- It makes economic sense to buy energy-efficient appliances. The initial price is often less than the cost of running them over a long period of time. For a greener home, look for the ENERGY STAR label when selecting appliances.

• Daylight -- Consider adding natural light sources like larger or additional windows and doors to reduce the need for artificial light.

• Flooring -- Buy more durable and natural surfaces like tile, stone, cork, harvested wood, exposed stained concrete or bamboo.

Living in perfect harmony with your relatives may not be your first choice during tough times, but it could be the most cost-effective. Remodeling or updating your home could make the transition much smoother. Visit your local Pella Window & Door showroom for ideas or visit www.pellareplacement.com.

(ARA) - Glistening metal discretely mounted beneath acres of gleaming granite clearly, this is not the utilitarian stainless steel sink your grandmother washed dishes in decades ago. Briefly deemed too industrial-looking by some designers to be included in contemporary, upscale kitchens, stainless steel is back, better and more beautiful than ever.

Stainless steel is again enjoying a place of honor in American kitchens. Here are six reasons to love stainless steel:

The trend towards "green" building and decor is still going strong, with more homeowners, builders and designers looking for materials and practices that will reduce a home's environmental impact. Stainless steel fits the "green" bill because it is recyclable. And modern stainless steel sinks, like Houzer's Novus Sink Series, are often made from recycled materials. In addition, stainless steel's durability ensures years of use and beauty, minimizing the need to replace and discard older, worn out sinks - thereby keeping them out of the waste stream.

Gleaming, clean-looking with elegant lines, stainless steel easily pairs well with a range of decorating styles - from modern to contemporary to country. Stainless steel sinks also develop character as they age. Scratches in your enamel or solid surface sink might spell the end for the fixture, but stainless steel develops a patina of small scratches over years of use, lending it a natural depth of character that can easily be cleaned and buffed to shine like new.

Versatility is as important as beauty in modern kitchen design, and new stainless steel sinks are more versatile than ever. With design options ranging from two- and three-bowl sinks and the ability to be mounted beneath countertops, to the capability of expanding a cook's usable work space, stainless steel sinks afford wide adaptability. Extending countertop space is a popular feature, and sinks like Houzers Novus series meet the challenge with two sliding, removable platforms -- one with an integrated drainboard -- that are perfect for meal prep, staging and cleanup.

Stainless steel is relatively light when compared to other sink materials, yet it offers strength and durability that ensure years of use when properly cared for. Modern styles achieve strength and a modern look without seams and mount well under the counter. Stainless is also easy to clean and naturally germ resistant.

Whether you have the budget of a home improvement show or a more modest amount to spend on your kitchen renovation, you can find a stainless steel sink to fit your budget. It's possible to find an affordable, modest stainless sink for a few hundred dollars. And designer sinks, like the Novus line, sell at prices that compete credibly with high-end designer sinks of more trendy materials.

Stainless steel lends itself to the classic clean lines of many contemporary kitchen designs, lifestyles and tastes. Once a stainless steel sink becomes the showpiece of a kitchen, its versatility and durability ensure that multiple owners will be able to use and enjoy it for many years.

Credit-Card Changes to Favor Consumers

Credit-card changes dictated by federal regulators were supposed to take effect by the end of the year. They didn't. The feds have now given credit-card companies (that weren't too pleased with the changes anyway) a year and a half to get ready.

Here are some of the changes that will take effect in the summer of 2010:

- If your interest rate goes up, the card company will no longer be allowed to impose that higher rate on pre-existing balances — unless a payment is more than 30 days late.

- When you open an account, your interest rate will be disclosed to you, and the card company will be required to honor that unless your payments are late.

- No more universal default. If your credit score plunges due to not paying a different debt, the card companies can no longer raise your rate because of your payment record to others.

- If you have both purchases and cash withdrawals on your credit card at different interest rates, the banks will no longer be able to apply your payment only to the balance with the lowest rate while the other balance continues to accrue higher interest. Any payment amount over the minimum will be applied to the higher interest balance.

- There will be no more arbitrary middle-of-the-day cutoffs to accept payments. If a payment is received by 5 p.m. on a given day, it's considered as being received that day.

- If there are to be changes to your account, you must receive 45 days notice.

- You must be given an adequate amount of time (21 days) to receive and pay your bill.

- There will be no more two-cycle billing, where card companies have gone back to ding you with interest on the same amount a second time.

Suggestion: Use 2009 to get organized so that you're never late on a payment again. Make more than the monthly minimum payments and get the balances paid off as soon as possible. Don't give the card companies any reason to use their remaining loopholes to raise your rates. There's a good chance that more people are going to be denied credit, as the card companies won't be able to make as much money with questionable practices.

(AKA) - Stroll your neighborhood and chances are you'll spot landscape shrub roses decorating someone's garden or backyard. Take a drive into town, and you'll see them planted at your favorite shopping center.

If you haven't noticed, landscape shrub roses have taken the country by storm. In home gardens, in containers and along highways, these low-maintenance roses bloom continuously from spring until frost with little to no effort.

"Anybody can grow these hard-working roses, no matter where they live. If you can grow grass, you can grow landscape shrub roses," says James A. Baggett, editor of Country Gardens Magazine. He likes Knock Out roses for their drought tolerance and disease resistance, especially against black spot.

When designing with shrub roses, think of them as you would any flowering shrub, only this one will bloom continuously all season and do all the work for you!

Here are some tips on using landscape shrub roses in the garden and throughout the landscape.

Whether you live in a city or the 'burbs, have a small garden plot or large acreage, the gardening and decorating possibilities with shrub roses are endless. Plant them individually among other shrubs, annuals and perennials, in mixed beds and borders.

Renowned garden designer Jon Carlotto prefers to plant shrub roses in containers. "I like to give them perfect planting conditions such as good drainage, rich soil and the addition of regular fertilizer that won't be an overdose to neighboring plants," he says. "The results are outstanding when roses are planted in formal urns or combinations of rustic pots."

From small apartments to grand homes, containers filled with shrub roses bring an understated sophistication to any sized deck, porch and patio. Pot them up in large and small containers, around a gazebo, poolside, or your entranceway for the perfect plant for all seasons.

Nothing says simple elegance like the original Knock Out rose. Try planting them "en masse" against your front porch or home. The large clusters of cherry-red blooms say "welcome" with a generous bloom cycle of every five to six weeks. Against your house, porch or deck, the rich, eye-popping red color is a sure winner.

Looking for plants with great curbside appeal that add year-round beauty? Cluster shrub roses around a mailbox or blend with perennials to create visual curb appeal. Plant the award-winning Rainbow Knock Out along with perennials. This lovely coral pink rose complements any color scheme and the blooms almost look hand-painted with rich yellow at the base. The plant adds height and color for maximum curbside appeal.

Do you have an unsightly utility unit, shed, trash can, or pool pump you want to hide? How about a slope or a hazardous spot to fill? Group hardy and attractive roses for a showy "cover-up." Try planting Pink Double Knock Out with double flowers in a cheerful bubble gum hue. Unfazed by heat, this hardy shrub rose will cover up those unsightly spots with a pink profusion of color.

Want to create a natural privacy fence in your backyard? Shrub roses will keep wandering children, pedestrians or stray dogs out of the landscape with a colorful "living wall" hedge.

You don't need to dream anymore about having a showcase formal garden. Stake and trim your favorite shrub roses to grow as small rose trees for the look and feel of an English garden. Mix in old-fashioned favorites such as spiraea and hydrangea to create an enviable cottage garden.

Hosts Boston Latin Academy Saturday Quincy-North Girls' Hockey Eyes Post-Season Berth

By SEAN BRENNAN

The ever-improving Quincy-North Quincy girls' hockey program has hit a little bump in the road this winter, but the future of the team is still bright.

Q-NQ (5-6 overall, 3-5 in Patriot League/Southeast South play) last won a game on Jan. 12 when they defeated Martha's Vineyard High School, 4-0, at the Quincy Youth Arena. Since then the team has dropped games to Marshfield HS, Barnstable HS and Falmouth HS, but with six games remaining on the schedule, the team remains in contention for a post-season berth.

"We have been improving as of late," said head coach Kelli Doolin. "We have dropped a couple of games in a row, but, as a team, we are working on some things and hopefully we can pick off where we started (the team opened the year by winning four straight games)."

"This team is very young and we have had some growing pains on the ice. The progression we are seeing recently speaks to just how determined and hard-working these girls are this season."

With only three seniors on the roster, Q-NQ has been receiving plenty of production from a number of underclassmen. Junior forward Colleen Newcomb leads the team with 10 points and

"The play of Colleen has helped keep us in games," added Doolin. "She is a leader on the ice and has been a big help in getting the team prepared in practice. Presley, who is just a freshman, is right behind her in production. She is just one of several freshmen who have been contributing all season long."

On defense Q-NQ is in good hands. Sophomore goalie Shannon Coleman has been receiving solid defensive support from seniors Meg Gillespie and Brenna Morrissey and junior Anna Bythrow.

"With Coleman playing well in goal and some good defense from Gillespie, Morrissey and Bythrow, we are starting to click in all zones," said Doolin. "We may be struggling to get wins at the moment, but we are going to be a very strong team the rest of the year and moving forward into next season."

One of the team's pre-season goals was to make the post-season. If the season ended today, Q-NQ would probably be on the outside looking in, but a strong ending to the schedule and some help from other local teams could propel them into the playoffs.

"It all depends on our record and at what point (record-wise) becomes the cut," Doolin said. "It was one of our goals to make the post-season and at this point we have some work to do to get there. With six games left, the opportunity for Q-NQ is still on the table."

This young team has nowhere to go but up. The team is expected to graduate only three players this year and will have six juniors back to go along with three sophomores, four freshmen and nine eighth graders. If things progress like Doolin believes it can, Q-NQ just may be a dominant force in girls' hockey for the next few years.

"This is a talented group of young players. Each game we are starting to improve in all three zones (offense, defense and special teams) and they are learning from the mistakes that have been made."

"The one great thing about them is that they never stop playing, no matter the score. For a young team that is good to see as a coach. I believe that next year they will be even better as a team and some of these tough losses will turn into wins."

Quincy-North Quincy played a good Duxbury HS team on Wednesday (Jan. 28) and will host Boston Latin Academy on Saturday (Jan. 31) at 3:10 p.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Raiders Headed For Post-Season; Presidents Have Work To Do

The North Quincy Red Raiders and the Quincy Presidents are both chugging along this season on the frozen surface.

North Quincy, which lost its first Patriot League game of the winter on Sunday to Hanover High School, 4-0, is currently sitting in second place in the league standings behind Pembroke High School. The Raiders (8-3-2 overall) have a 6-1-1 Patriot League record while Pembroke is on top with a 7-0-1 mark.

These two teams played to a 2-2 deadlock earlier this season. A highly anticipated rematch between the Red Raiders and the Titans will be held on Feb. 4 at the Quincy Youth Arena (7:10 p.m.), and if things fell into place later this week, it could be a game for sole possession of first place in the league.

Before now and then, North Quincy was scheduled to host Middleboro HS (Jan. 28) and will play Whitman-Hanson HS at the QYA on Friday (7:50 p.m.).

Against Hanover, North Quincy was shutout 4-0.

The win gives Hanover a 6-7-1 record. With their first league loss, North Quincy now has an uphill battle to the league championship, but another trip to the Division II South Sectional post-season seems to be in the cards.

North's charge to a league title and another playoff berth has been helped by the play of seniors Brandon Gilmore, Joe Vialpando, Paul Reardon, Matt Rodriguez, Scott Richardson, Kevin Chenette, Brian McLean, Bobby Fontana and Evan Verhault. Junior goaltender Matt Brundige has held opponents to just over two goals per game.

For the Presidents (3-6-1 overall, 2-5-0 in Patriot League), time is running out on a repeat appearance in the Division II South Sectionals. Quincy lost a heartbreaker to Pembroke HS last Saturday, 3-2. The team evened the score at 2-2 late in the third period, but the Titans potted the game-winner with just 40 seconds remaining in the game.

With games remaining against Whitman-Hanson

(Jan. 28), Martha's Vineyard (Friday, 3 p.m. QYA), Middleboro (Jan. 31), Scituate (Feb. 4), North Quincy (Feb. 7), Silver Lake (Feb. 14) and Winchester (Feb. 16), the Presidents need to get back to the .500 mark to earn their spot in the post-season.

Quincy will look to its more experienced skaters to get them there. Seniors Jeff Giordani (a past ACL all-star in goal), Scott Vallatini (captain), Mark Gilbody (captain), Shawn Dowling, Pat Young and Zach McCaul (captain) have been there before and should provide the leadership needed to win some critical games down the stretch, while juniors Kevin Keith and Jim Finn should provide some underclassmen support.

If you are a fan of high school hockey then mark down Feb. 7 on the calendar. The Red Raiders and the Presidents are scheduled to meet for the third time this winter at 7:50 p.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena. Quincy won the first game, 4-3, and North Quincy won the middle game, 4-0.

Squirt 'A' Team Wins Waterville Valley Tourney

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt "A" team recently traveled to, played in and won the Waterville Valley Deep Freeze tournament on Jan. 18-20.

The Bobby Harvey Family sponsored the team. Harvey, a 28-year old Quincy Point native, was tragically killed back in August when a portion of the 150-ton legs of the Goliath crane at the Fore River Shipyard, which at the time was being dismantled, collapsed prematurely. Harvey grew up playing hockey at the Quincy Youth Arena and once scored the first goal for Quincy High School in a state championship game.

The team began their championship weekend with a pizza party sendoff hosted by the Harvey family. The team was given some Bobby Harvey sweatshirts and hats before heading off to Maine.

In their first game of the tournament, Quincy tied the Richfield, CT Lions, 2-2. On Saturday in the second game, Quincy again played to a tie. This time the team played to a 2-2 draw against Burlington, MA.

With a 0-0-2 record after two games played, Quincy needed to beat the team from Wellesey, MA in order to advance to the championship game. Quincy came out flying and crushed Wellesey, 8-0.

In the championship game on Monday, Quincy played Burlington for a second time. Quincy started the game off on fire by going up 3-0, but Burlington stormed back with three goals to tie the game at 3-3 in the second period. After the coaching staff called a timeout in order to settle down the team, Quincy responded with an offensive outburst.

Quincy scored four unanswered goals and ended up winning 7-3.

"The kids were very excited," said Quincy coach Mike Wood. "I am proud to coach a group of kids that worked so hard this past weekend. They are great kids and great families."

"These kids persevered without the help of two second year players which makes me even more proud of the work they did."

The championship roster included Thomas Pugsley, Max Durham, Katy Meehan, John Feeney, Adam McCormack, Kevin McDonald, Timmy Keohane, Liam McCarthy, Matt Fox, Matt McDonald, Owen Lynch, Sean Healy, Christian Connors, Austin Lee, Timmy Glynn and Jared Grier.

The coaching staff included Tim Higgins, Mike Wood and Tim Wood.

Presidents Need To Get Hot To Make Post-Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents have some work ahead of them if they want to be playing when the Division II South Sectional post-season starts up after the February school vacation week.

Following a 61-47 loss to Duxbury High School last Sunday, the Presidents are currently looking at a 4-7 record. With nine games remaining on the schedule, Quincy needs to win six-of-nine games to qualify.

Boys' Basketball

Not an impossible task, for sure, but to get there the team needs to start playing a complete game for all 32 minutes.

"Right now at 4-7 we need to win six of these nine remaining games," said head coach David Parry. "Our biggest problem right now is that we have no margin for error. We cannot afford to turn the ball over and not get shots on offense. With the young team we have, we cannot afford to make these types of mistakes."

"I am encouraged by our level of intensity, but we need to play all 32 minutes. We cannot have moments or stretches in a game where we let up."

"When we get up on teams we need to focus on maintaining that lead. Some of our inexperience allows teams to get back

Quincy Notches Second Victory, Defeats Middleboro

By SEAN BRENNAN

A busy week of basketball saw the Quincy Presidents finish 1-3, with the team's lone victory coming last Friday against Middleboro High School, 52-34. With a month of basketball yet to be played, the Presidents currently have a 2-11 record.

Quincy opened last week with a 67-47 loss to Hanover HS, followed with a 59-40 loss to Plymouth South HS in a non-league game, the win over Middleboro and ended the week with a 58-22 loss to Duxbury HS.

"We are looking for tangible evidence of improvement as the season moves along," said head coach Jeff Bretsch. "The girls are starting to find their roles and come together as a unit. If everyone plays well we can be much better this year and next. On defense we have been solid, but we are still struggling to get into a flow on offense."

"We are young but we are improving each game."

Against Duxbury, Quincy

played a well-executed defensive game, but could get nothing going when they had the ball on offense. The Presidents held the Dragons to season-low 19 first-half points, but managed to score only 7 points in the half.

"We played them very tough," added Bretsch. "Holding them to 19 first-half points was great, but they didn't allow us to get anything moving on offense. I was proud of how well Olivia Berry and Colleen Tobin played defense against Duxbury. No complaints on our defense."

Last Friday against Middleboro, Quincy started the game off fast on offense and held a commanding 36-19 advantage at break. Junior forward Leslie Campbell scored eight first quarter points and Tobin contributed 10 points in the second quarter.

games slowly we fell behind and don't have the firepower to catch up," added Bretsch. "We talked about getting off to a fast start in practice and that is what we did against Middleboro. After we took the lead, our defense forced turnovers and carried us the rest of the way."

Campbell (13 points) and Tobin (14 points) received help from freshman guard Juli Tomer, who scored nine points, including two three-pointers.

"Juli hit some big shots for us. She is seeing a lot of minutes this year," said Bretsch. "At the moment she is our defensive stopper and as she gets more comfortable on offense she should be a force."

Earlier last week Quincy dropped back-to-back games versus Plymouth South and Hanover. Plymouth South hit six first-half three-pointers looking to put the game out of reach early, but Quincy's Kori Sorensen connected on three straight three-pointers that kept the Presidents in the game in the first-half.

Campbell finished the game with a team-high 17 points.

In the Hanover game (a 67-47 loss), Tobin was the leading scorer with 16 points. Seven other players scored at least one point for Quincy.

"Although we won just one game it was a good week," added Bretsch. "We are ever-improving and these last few games should help us gain some valuable experience next year."

The team played Randolph HS Tuesday night and will host Scituate HS on Friday at 6:30 p.m.

North Quincy Knocks Off Silver Lake, Falls To W-H

THE RAIDERS' Siobhan Carnell, the leading scorer in the Patriot League, scored 28 points against W-H but it was not enough as NQ lost 59-55.

The North Quincy Red Raiders (10-4 overall, 7-3 in league play) continue to set the pace in the Patriot League despite an under .500 record last week. North Quincy knocked off Patriot League opponent Silver Lake (54-49) and lost to league foes Whitman-Hanson (59-55) and Hanover (72-70).

On Sunday, the Raiders lost a high-scoring game to Hanover, 72-70 at home. Senior guard Siobhan Carnell led all scorers with 30 points (and five steals), followed by senior forward Catherine O'Connell's 16 points and 12 rebounds.

Senior captain Kathleen Lynch played another solid game for North, scoring 11 points to go along with eight steals and four assists and senior forward Kristina Anderson provided some big rebounds and showed great hustle. Sophomore Montana McBirney added seven points and four rebounds for the Raiders.

Last Friday, North Quincy fell to Whitman-Hanson, 59-55. The two teams were familiar with each other as both teams played in the Atlantic Coast League the last few years. Once again Siobhan Carnell was the Raiders' top-performer scoring 28 points and contributing seven steals on defense. Catherine O'Connell added 10 points and 13 rebounds and fellow senior Jessie Howlett dropped eight points and seven rebounds.

Kathleen Lynch (five points, eight rebounds, three blocks) and Molly Clifford played excellent defense for the Raiders.

The week that was, was not a complete loss for North Quincy. The Raiders earned their tenth win of the season on Jan. 20 with a 54-49 victory over Silver Lake. Carnell, the Patriot League's leading scorer, finished with 10 points and seven steals. O'Connell scored 16 points and collected eight rebounds and junior Cara Murtagh contributed eight points and seven rebounds.

Next up for North Quincy is a Friday matchup with Pembroke High School (NQHS Gym, 6:30 p.m.), away contests against Hanover on Feb. 3 and Randolph on Feb. 6 and an away game on Feb. 7 against Quincy High School.

into games. We need to be less tight in those situations and good things should happen."

Quincy had all it could handle against Duxbury. The Dragons (14-0 overall) are the best team in the Patriot League and one of the better teams on the South Shore, and they flashed their mettle in the 61-47 win over the Presidents.

With super-senior Doug Scott leading the way with 19 points, Quincy and Duxbury were tied up at the end of one quarter of basketball. At the halftime break, Duxbury had pushed their lead to nine points, but Quincy cut that deficit down to five points at the end of the third.

The Dragons, behind 24 points from senior guard Mark Brust, expended that five-point advantage in the fourth and came away with the 14-point victory.

"Duxbury is a good team and we played with them ok for most of the game," added Parry. "But we had some periods where we just could do nothing right and we made some bad decisions at critical points and it cost us in the end."

The Presidents had been hoping that some of the momentum from last Friday's thrilling 71-70 overtime win against Middleboro HS would carry over into the Duxbury game. Against Middleboro, Scott was the star, though he did get help from fellow senior John Parry and sophomore Seth Pullum.

Scott finished with 35 points and 10 assists. His four most important points came in the overtime session. With his team trailing by three points and with just 20 seconds remaining on the game clock in the extra period, Scott buried a long-range three-pointer to tie the game at 70-70 and moments later he connected on one-of-two free throws to give Quincy the 71-70 victory.

"Doug was just being Doug," said Parry. "He's been invaluable form us this season and probably even more valuable as a leader. He's like having another coach out there. He's mature and has a great way with his teammates."

Parry (11 points, 10 rebounds) and Pullum (14 rebounds) also played well for the Presidents against Middleboro.

The nine games that remain on the docket are some tough matchups, including a rematch with North Quincy on Feb. 7. Quincy has, in order, games against Randolph (Jan. 27), Scituate (Jan. 30), Duxbury (Feb. 3), Silver Lake (Feb. 6), North Quincy (Feb. 7), Whitman-Hanson (Feb. 10) and Hingham (Feb. 12). Quincy will also be playing in the annual Vin Moscardelli Tournament Feb. 16-17.

"We will play who we have to play," said Parry. "Our schedule is tough and the road ahead should be challenging. We will take it one game at a time."

"If we can keep games close in the fourth quarter anything can happen, but, like I said before, with some of the youth on the team we need to eliminate mistakes and rely on our more experienced leaders to carry us through."

Notes: Doug Scott, who broke the QHS scoring record of 1,348 points against Hingham HS on Jan. 7, is, at press time, 23 points away from establishing a new city record. That record, currently held by Sarah Stanton (2004 NQHS) at 1,533 points, should be smashed sometime this week.

American Cancer Society Launches Charity Runner Program

Local Runners Encouraged To Help The Fight Against Cancer

The American Cancer Society has launched its Charity Runner program in Massachusetts providing local running enthusiasts the opportunity to make their miles more meaningful.

Official race partners of the Charity Runner program in the state include the upcoming Hyannis Marathon (Feb. 22), a Boston Marathon qualifier, and Boston's Run To Remember (May 24). Through the Charity Runner program, runners are able to dedicate their run in honor or in memory of a loved one with cancer, while raising funds for the fight against this devastating disease.

The American Cancer Society has a select number of entries for each race for those wishing to run as a Society Charity Runner. Previously qualified and registered runners for the Boston Marathon (April 20) may also choose to raise funds for the American Cancer Society through Charity Runner.

"Thousands of athletes across the country have experienced the journey of a lifetime by dedicating their participation in endurance events to the fight against cancer through the American Cancer Society Charity Runner program," said Holly Randall, Society Project Manager for Endurance Events.

"We are thrilled to bring this opportunity to both new and veteran runners in Massachusetts."

In addition to the partner races in Massachusetts, there are several Charity Runner events around New England including the Sugarloaf Maine Marathon, the KeyBank Vermont City Marathon, the Cox Sports Marathon/Half Marathon in Providence, and the Manchester City Marathon/Half Marathon in New Hampshire.

Fundraising minimum commitments vary by race. Since 1996, more than 4,000 athletes nationwide have helped raise $5.2 million through Charity Runner, enabling athletes of all levels to turn their passion for half-marathons, marathons, triathlons, or cycling races into a lifesaving effort to fight cancer.

The American Cancer Society dedicates funds raised to fuel the most promising research; to spread lifesaving cancer awareness messages; to advocate for screening opportunities for all people; and to ease the cancer burden for people facing the disease through practical day to day and emotional support.

In return for their fundraising efforts, American Cancer Society Charity Runners will receive many benefits, including:

- A personalized website to assist in fundraising efforts

- Complimentary local training
- Exclusive American Cancer Society racing shirt
- The opportunity to dedicate their participation in memory or in honor of a loved one touched by cancer.

For those unable to run, but still interested in getting involved with the efforts of the American Cancer Society, there are volunteer opportunities for each marathon or race.

For more information, visit www.charityrunner.org, or contact the American Cancer Society 24-hours a day, seven days a week by calling 1-800-ACS-2345.

'Daffodil Days' Orders Through March 2

For more than 35 years, the American Cancer Society has, through its Daffodil Days program, been making a difference in the fight against cancer and providing hope for those facing the disease.

Although Daffodil Days involves offering daffodils to donors every spring in appreciation for their contributions, it is about more than just giving beautiful flowers; it is an opportunity to share hope for a world free of cancer.

This year, Massachusetts marks the official launch of Daffodil Days with "50 Days of Daffodils" – a marketing effort to publicly announce Jan. 26 through March 2 as the official period for daffodil order-taking, awareness of daffodil products available this year, launch of the www.cancer.org/daffodils interactive website, volunteer recruitment and an opportunity to showcase how the Society is working locally to help cancer patients and their loved ones.

"We are excited by the hope and spirit that Daffodil Days brings to those who have supported the campaign year after year," says Tina Papadopoulos, director of Special Events for the American Cancer Society. "This year, we are working toward expanding that reach into each Massachusetts community, alerting them of the opportunities to get involved and how even a $10 dollar donation can make a tremendous difference for neighbors and friends faced with a cancer diagnosis this year," she added.

Daffodil Days offers a bouquet of products for the public.

- For a $10 gift, donors receive a bouquet of ten fresh daffodil blossoms.
- Three mini-daffodil bulbs in a soil filled pot are available for a $15 donation.
- A bouquet of 10 daffodils and a Boyd's collectable stuffed bear for a $25 donation.
- Gift of Hope: daffodils are delivered to a cancer patient undergoing treatment. $25

Flower and product orders can be placed from Jan. 26 through March 2 by calling the American Cancer Society at 1.800.ACS.2345 or making an online donation at www.cancer.org/daffodils. Delivery coincides with the start of spring, the week of March 16.

Dollars raised through Daffodil Days enable the Society to offer free programs and services that help people fight cancer with courage and optimism, while it provides day-to-day help, emotional support, and 24-hour information to help ease the cancer experience. Additionally, daffodil contributions provide the Society with much-needed dollars to fund groundbreaking cancer research, educate people about the importance of cancer prevention and early detection and advocate for meaningful public health policies.

Yoga

Lately I'm trying to practice relaxation, or chilling out, as my kids like to say. I have a lot of nervous energy. It's a fact. My grandma used to tell me so. Says I got it from my mom.

So I'm trying to tame my inner warrior, my inner fuss-budget, that voice that tells me I can't sit down until I get one more thing done, or wakes me in the middle of the night with a list of things I didn't know I needed to worry about. As in: "Hey, you, get up and wring your hands about something!" Naturally, I do as it says.

It's exhausting. And makes me feel a little ... what's the word ... edgy.

So I went on a search for a yoga video that promises inner tranquility, that promotes a sense of well-being with deep stretches and deep, relaxing breathing. Now this was no easy task, because there are about a hundred yoga videos, mostly by well-known exercise gurus who also promote knee-pounding, bun-lifting cardiovascular routines. I didn't know I'd have so many choices, which totally stressed me out.

But then I found a video with a picture on the box of a woman, and she's smiling, looks relaxed and is quite limber. So I plunked down $15.

First, however, you must buy the goodies that will help you be a superb yoga person. All serious yoga people will tell you so. So I examined mats, and again the selection can overwhelm a person like me. There were beginner mats, deluxe mats and some that look a lot like the mat I used to take naps on in kindergarten. There also are yoga clothes — some made of organic materials such as hemp. It's important to be fashionable, but environmentally friendly, as you twist yourself into a pretzel.

I selected a mat and decided my old gym clothes would have to do.

Finally, I was ready to learn how to relax.

I watched as the instructor demonstrated the bridge pose, where you lie on your back, roll your shoulders under you and bring your torso toward the ceiling. It hurt. My bridge was a lot like the one in London: It kept falling down. And the next day, I woke up with a crick in my neck.

Then I tried something called a downward dog pose. You bend forward and place your hands on the floor, stretching them out in front of you as much as possible, all the while trying to keep your balance and not scream because your hamstring muscles feel as if they're being ripped in half. If you are trying to picture this pose, think of the wooden yard ornaments of the plump old lady bending over in her garden. It's not a pretty sight.

My initial attempts at yoga were quite awkward. But the instructor assures me my body will get used to bending in ways that are just not natural. Good. I was beginning to worry about that. She smiles and talks in a calm voice as she stretches her right leg to the ceiling and says, "Remember to pay attention to your breathing."

I guess that means I must stop holding my breath.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

NAVIGATING THE ROOT CANAL

When the pulp tissue containing a tooth's nerve and blood vessels is damaged beyond repair, it is necessary to undergo root canal therapy. The first step in this treatment, called a pulpectomy, involves removal of the pulp from the chamber and canal(s). This is accomplished by drilling a small opening through the enamel and dentin, into which small endodontic files can be inserted to clean out the canal(s) that contain the nerve and blood vessels. The canal(s) are then cleaned, shaped, and smoothed. Finally, the canal(s) are filled with a rubbery filling material known as gutta-percha. Root canal therapy, which is conducted with local anesthetic, relieves the pain caused by damage to the inner tooth, it does not cause it. A tooth's nerve is not vitally important to a tooth's health and function after the tooth has emerged through the gums. Its only function is sensory — to provide the sensation of hot or cold. The presence or absence of a nerve will not affect the day-to-day functioning of the tooth. We provide the best oral care possible by evaluating your needs individually. We'll explain our findings and recommendations. Together we'll choose your best treatment plan. We invite you to call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Infections that make root canal therapy necessary are often caused by bacteria that enter the pulp chambers through tooth fractures or decay.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

"True sorrow makes a silence in the heart" and we think even the most obtuse among us know enough not to intrude on such feelings. At such times, however, there is work that must be done -- and we, at the Deware Funeral Home do it competently, quietly and without intrusion.

This is the essence of our approach to funeral service. We are successful, if months later, when grief has been partially submerged, our efforts are remembered gratefully as having softened somewhat the jagged edges of bereavement.

We realize that making funeral arrangements either in advance or when someone you love dies requires many, many decisions. We realize that there are many needs to be met, concerns to be faced and preferences to think about.

We believe that the key to a worry-free funeral arrangement, both before need or at need, is careful counseling with an experienced and trusted funeral director. At the Deware Funeral Home, we are here at any time to talk to you about the options. And remember the decisions will be yours. Satisfying your needs and desires is always our main consideration...

In the Estate of
MARY BROWN TARDIFF
AKA MARY B. TARDIFF
Late of QUINCY
In the County of NORFOLK
Date of Death
November 17, 2008

NOTICE OF PETITION FOR PROBATE OF WILL

To all persons interested in the above captioned estate a petition has been presented praying that a document purporting to be the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed, and that CAROL KUPPERSCHMIDT of NATICK in the County of MIDDLESEX or some other suitable person be appointed executor, named in the will to serve without surety.

IF YOU DESIRE TO OBJECT THERETO, YOU OR YOUR ATTORNEY MUST FILE A WRITTEN APPEARANCE IN SAID COURT AT CANTON ON OR BEFORE TEN O'CLOCK IN THE FORENOON (10:00AM) ON FEBRUARY 25, 2009.

In addition, you must file a written affidavit of objections to the petition, stating specific facts and grounds upon which the objection is based, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

WITNESS, HON. ROBERT LANGLOIS, ESQUIRE, First Justice of said Court at CANTON this day, January 12, 2009.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Taking some time out of your usually busy social life could be just what you need to help you focus on putting those finishing touches on your plans for a possible career change.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A misunderstanding about a colleague's suggestions could create a delay in moving on with your proposal. But by week's end, all the confusing points should finally be cleared up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel overwhelmed by all the tasks you suddenly have to take care of. But just say the magic word — help! — and you'll soon find others rushing to offer much-needed assistance.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Finishing a current project ahead of schedule leaves you free to deal with other upcoming situations, including a possible workplace change, as well as a demanding personal matter.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Turn that fine-tuned feline sensitivity radar up to high to help uncover any facts that could influence a decision you might be preparing to make. Devote the weekend to family activities.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A state of confusion is soon cleared up with explanations from the responsible parties. Don't waste time chastising anyone. Instead, move forward with your plans.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might feel obligated to help work out a dispute between family members. But this is one of those times when you should step aside and let them work out their problems on their own.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your ability to resolve an on-the-job problem without leaving too many ruffled feathers earns you kudos from co-workers. You also impress major decision-makers at your workplace.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Newly made and long-held friendships merge well, with possibly one exception. Take time to listen to the dissenter's explanations. You could learn something important.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be prepared to be flexible about your current travel plans. Although you don't have to take them, at least consider suggestions from the experts in the travel business.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A problem with a recent financial transaction could lead to more problems later on unless you resolve it immediately. Get all the proof you need to support your position.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Daydreaming makes it difficult to stay focused on what you need to do. But reality sets in by midweek, and you manage to get everything done in time for a relaxing weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your ability to reach out to those in need of spiritual comfort makes you a much-revered, much-loved person in your community.

Math-Science Academy First To Open New QHS Wing Ready For Students Feb. 23

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The countdown has begun.

In 18 days, Quincy High School's 1500 plus students will enter their new math and science wing for classes for the first time.

"On Feb. 23, Quincy High School staff and students will step into the future as they enter into the first phase of the new high school project," said Frank Santoro, Principal.

tour of the building.

Santoro predicted that the building layout will allow a new approach of integrated learning that will make Quincy High School, "the beacon" in educational practices that others will follow."

52 Inches So Far

Snowstorms Cost City $2.2M And More To Come

By TOM HENSHAW

If there is such a thing as global warming, it hasn't reached winter-weary Quincy yet --- and neither have the bills to pay for it.

As of Tuesday morning, on the authority of DPW Commissioner Larry Prendeville, the city had spent $2.2 million to remove some 52 inches of snow even as more was starting to fall and workers stood by to repel another wintry assault.

Since the token amount for snow removal in the municipal budget is only $300,000 that leaves the city at least $1.9 million in the hole with fully half the season left to go.

The difference will have to be made up by an appropriation in the Fiscal 2010 budget.

"We're expecting four to six inches in this storm," said Prendeville. "It'll be a prolonged storm so we'll use a lot of material. It's hitting during the day so we'll have to work swiftly on the main roads and the side roads and around the schools."

"Fortunately we have plenty of salt and sand."

Thus far this season, he said, the DPW has used 12,500 tons of salt at a cost of $925,500, and 4,500 tons of sand at $54,000. Outside plowing contractors have cost $881,000 and DPW workers have drawn $330,000 in overtime.

Prendeville held his the usual meeting with his aides to plan their attack, then they kept a wary eye on the weather forecasts.

"It looks like we'll be here through the evening," he said.

Raymondi Calls For Slowdown

Quincy College In Official Move For Independence

Quincy College is thriving, has a multi-million dollar capitol fund, and has long been eager to break free of its ties with the city.

College officials believe the time is now; in fact, some believe the time was yesterday.

In an effort to make a clean break, College President M. Sue Harris recently prepared a Home Rule Petition for state legislative approval and submitted it to City Councilors for review prior to Monday's meeting.

Mayor Thomas Koch, officially, sponsored the Quincy College petition for independence when it was presented to City Council this week.

The college must win the approval of both the mayor and the City Council in order for the issue to be considered by the state legislature.

But the issue never got to the City Council floor.

Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymondi objected. His objection tables all action and discussion of the matter until another council meeting when the proposal must be resubmitted.

Raymondi believes the city should not act in haste, stating that such a break demands rigid scrutiny and the city's taxpayers should be compensated.

Residents invested considerable money through real estate taxes in Quincy College when it was struggling in its early years, according to Raymondi who served on the college's first Board of Overseers.

The college was founded in 1958 and subsidized by taxpayers until 1981 when it first became self-sufficient. While taxpayers have not paid any debts of the college in the intervening years, Raymondi believes the original investment cost

Household Recycling Up 15%

Household recycling increased 15 percent in just the first six months of the City's new cost-saving trash collection contract and stepped-up recycling program, Public Works officials said this week.

"This is a great start to the program, but I know we can continue to recycle more," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "This program is a win-win for Quincy: It saves money during tough economic times, and it is the right thing to do for the environment."

Residents recycling more means they are throwing away less garbage, and the data backs it up. The amount of municipal solid waste collected since the new contract started in July is down 1,000 tons compared to the same time period in the prior contract. The city pays nearly $87 to dispose of every ton of trash, so savings are now at $87,000 halfway through the fiscal year, Koch said.

Those savings are on top of the contract savings the city brokered when it joined with Braintree and Weymouth to regionalize trash collection in the three communities. The buying buyer of the tri-city group increased competition and led to a contract with Capitol Waste Services that will save $150,000 this year.

The new recycling program, called "Single Stream Recycling," allows for all recyclables to be placed in the same container without separation by the resident or at curbside by the collector/vendor.

This commingling allows for less costly collection process because all separation occurs at the materials recovery facility, said John Sullivan, the program director for the Department of Public Works.

Quincy is one of only a few Massachusetts towns still receiving revenue for its recyclables. Due to a decline in the demand for recycled materials most cities and towns are actually paying for their recyclables to be disposed. Quincy however, negotiated a guaranteed fixed price for its recyclables, Sullivan said.

The contract for collection services also allowed for added support with outreach and educational objectives.

Coughlin, Gutro Ordinance Would Ban Level 3 Sex Offenders

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy is becoming a 'safe haven' for sex offenders fleeing other jurisdictions, according to two city councillors who want to slam the door on Level 3 sex offenders moving to city neighborhoods.

Over 110 Level 2 and Level 3 sex offenders currently live in Quincy, according to Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin who, with Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, co-authored an ordinance aimed at restricting Level 3 sex offenders.

Coughlin said, "...we in Quincy with 94 Level 2 and 23 Level 3 (sex offenders) have the highest number of registered sex offenders within our geographic borders of any community south of Boston."

"Quincy should not, despite what some people would think, become a safe haven for any aberrant behavior or any conduct that denigrates the quality of life for its citizens."

"One is too many," said Gutro who, also, quoted statistics indicating that sex offenders are most likely to re-offend and said it is "imperative" that the council act quickly on the jointly sponsored ordinance.

Gutro noted that Weymouth has successfully enacted a similar residency ban and said, "The time has come to provide that level of protection."

Gutro also warned that the council should act quickly before more outcasts from other cities and towns move to Quincy. He noted that one of Weymouth's banished sex offenders said, "He will move to Quincy."

The proposed ordinance would ban Level 3 sex offenders from living in most city neighborhoods and would create safety zones to protect children and elderly residents and read as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any Adult Criminal Level 3 Sex offender to establish a residence or any other living accommodation within (1500) feet of the property on which a school, park, elderly housing facility, library or recreational facility open to the public is located."

Similar residency legislation has passed in 22 states and cleared judicial challenges, according to Coughlin

In addition, the ordinance would ban registered sex offenders from visiting or loitering near designated "Safety Zones," such as schools, libraries, daycare centers, parks and elderly housing.

Another provision would require permanent bulletin boards posting registered level 3 sex offenders at Quincy City Hall, Quincy Police Department, the Thomas Crane Library and the administrative areas of all public schools and daycare facilities.

The city's website would also display official postings with a link to the police department website.

Councillor John Keenan warned that the ordinance might be "difficult to enforce" as the proposal may leave some neighborhoods unprotected and open to an influx of offenders.

As examples, Keenan noted that several areas in Squantum and Houghs Neck would be "unprotected areas," as they do not meet the guidelines.

The proposed ordinance might result in "pushing the problem into another neighborhood.... This doesn't solve the problem," said Keenan, adding that councillors must be careful, "We are not pitting one neighborhood against another."

Following the discussion, councillors sent the ordinance to advertising and the Ordinance Committee for further study.

Persons who have owned homes or established leases prior to enactment of the ordinance would not be affected.

Koch: 'New Quincy High School On Time And Budget'

Mayor Thomas Koch says that the Science and Technology wing of the new Quincy High School will be "on time and on budget" when it holds its first classes on Feb. 23.

"There is still plenty of work to be done, but I am proud of the work by the entire team to cut costs and get this phase of the project finished without adding a penny to the bottom line," Koch said. "It is the same directive going forward for the rest of the project: On time and on budget."

In early 2008, Koch reached an agreement with the Massachusetts School Building Authority to eliminate a controversial portion of the project that slashed nearly $1 million from the cost of the $126 million project, which was facing cost overruns when the mayor took office.

The High School Building Committee, he noted, also cut $2.9 million in "value engineering" from the project to get it back on budget after a five-year period beginning in 2003 when the project's cost increased by more than $50 million.

Since then, project officials also fixed what Koch said was a potentially disastrous design flaw relating to underground utilities, mitigated an underground oil tank issue at the site, uncovered dozens of bills for architects that were paid late between 2005 and 2008. Those issues were all resolved without affecting the overall budget of the project.

A formal ribbon cutting for the new Science, Mathematic and Technology Academy will be held on Feb. 22 at 1 p.m. The rest of the school is scheduled to be opened to students in September 2010.

"The Superintendent, Principal, Building Committee and the School Committee have worked tirelessly on this project for many years, and it is great to see that work producing positive results," Koch said. "I also wish to thank that state School Building Authority for working so closely with the City over the last year, and I look forward to continuing that relationship as we move forward on other important projects for our schools."

Juvenile Harp Seal Visits Wollaston Beach

By SEAN BRENNAN

The aquatic visitor, which was spotted Friday on Wollaston Beach sunning itself on the ice down the road from the intersection of Quincy Shore Drive and Furnace Brook Parkway, was a juvenile harp seal, according to Tony LaCasse, spokesperson for the New England Aquarium.

Juvenile harp seals are between 80-90 pounds (adults can be as large as 400 pounds) and tend to migrate from North Atlantic maritime provinces in the winter months during the adult harp seal's breeding season to coastland waters from as far south as Cape Cod and as north as Salisbury, MA.

Juvenile harp seals may be cute and may look harmless, but according to LaCasse, humans need to respect their territory and if it seems like the seal may be in danger, call the NE Aquarium's tip-line at 617-973-5247.

"These types of seals come out of the water all the time," he said. "The juveniles come to these waters

Zoning Task Force To Hear Public Feb. 17

Mayor Thomas Koch's zoning task force, reviewing Quincy's development rules for the first time in many years, will hold a public hearing Tuesday, Feb. 17, at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

The task force will take testimony from residents on their concerns regarding building issues around the city. They are expected to make their report on zoning changes and making the rules more understandable in the spring.

"The task force has worked incredibly hard for months," said Koch, "and it is time to listen to the public's thoughts on building rules., what kind of development belongs in what kind of places and what kind of rules should apply.

"We set out a goal of targeting development in our business areas and protecting neighborhoods from over-development and I think the task force is well on its way. I look forward to their recommendation and presenting the changes to the City Council."

The task force is made up of lawyers, engineers, architects and residents of Quincy with a range of knowledge to dissect the voluminous city code that guides building projects.

The group also has enlisted the services of Mark Bobrowski, a Suffolk University professor with the reputation of being the pre-eminent legal authority on zoning issues in Massachusetts.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 4, 1789, 69 members of Congress cast their ballots to elect George Washington the first president of the United States. After months of appearing to sidestep, and even outright rejecting, the idea of assuming the presidency, Washington reluctantly accepted Congress' decision.

• On Feb. 7, 1812, the most violent of a series of earthquakes near Missouri causes a so-called fluvial tsunami in the Mississippi River, actually making the river run backward for several hours. One of the tremors in the series caused church bells to ring in Boston, more than a thousand miles away.

• On Feb. 6, 1820, the first organized immigration of freed slaves to Africa from the United States departs New York harbor on a journey to Sierra Leone in West Africa. The expedition was partially funded by the U.S. Congress, which had appropriated $100,000 to be used in returning displaced Africans to Africa.

• On Feb. 2, 1887, Groundhog Day, featuring a rodent meteorologist, is celebrated for the first time in Punxutawney, Pa. According to tradition, if a groundhog comes out of its hole on this day and sees its shadow, there will be six more weeks of winter weather; no shadow means an early spring.

• On Feb. 8, 1924, the first execution by lethal gas in American history is carried out in Carson City, Nev. The executed man was Tong Lee, a member of a Chinese gang who was convicted of murdering a rival gang member.

• On Feb. 5, 1937, President Franklin Roosevelt announces a controversial plan to expand the Supreme Court to as many as 15 judges. Critics immediately charged that Roosevelt was trying to "pack" the court and thus neutralize Supreme Court justices hostile to his New Deal.

• On Feb. 3, 1959, rising American rock stars Buddy Holly, Ritchie Valens and J.P. "The Big Bopper" Richardson are killed when their chartered Beechcraft Bonanza airplane crashes in Iowa a few minutes after takeoff from Mason City on a flight bound for Minnesota.

The Blizzard Of '78

(Following is a reprint of the Feb. 16, 1978 Sunbeams column on how Quincy coped with the Blizzard of '78 31 years ago this week. Out of which came 27 inches of snow and a spirit of togetherness.)

It was a storm you would like to forget but will vividly remember for as long as you live.

Awesome. Devastating. Furious. Horrendous. Mean. Terrible. You may have even a stronger one-word description.

But as bad as it was with the suffering and the losses it brought in lives and damages-and the inconveniences, it had one nice side effect; it brought out the best in most people.

People opened their hearts and extended helping hands to those in need. Not just neighbor helping neighbor, but stranger helping stranger.

A feeling of togetherness and unity descended upon the area in a way we hadn't seen since World War II. People were united again by catastrophe. They shared a common cause: survival. And they were more than willing to make personal sacrifices to help one another get through the ordeal. Most important: they cared for one another.

Houghts Neck and Germantown were the hardest hit in Quincy. Quantum got pretty well battered, too.

Compared to neighbors in Hull and Scituate, however, Quincy overall was lucky, as far as damage and other losses were concerned.

But Quincy got its fair share of the record near 27 inches of snow. The city was virtually paralyzed during most of the week. Business came to a costly standstill.

Overall, we think the city of Quincy deserves a "well done." New Mayor Arthur Tobin certainly has gotten his baptism under fire. He had been in office just 34 days when he got hit with the two worst snowstorms in our history.

We got a chance to personally observe him during this second storm-the all-time champ in fury and meanness-and saw a man calm and in complete control of the situation. He never reached for the panic button.

And so it was, all down the line.

Public Works Commissioner James (Pete) Ricciuti proved an able general as his army of weary workers fought around the clock to win the Big Battle of the Snow.

There were many others who did an outstanding job during the long hard week: Police, firefighters, Civil Defense units, nurses and doctors and hospital employees, snowmobilers, school personnel, and many volunteers in varying shapes and sizes who all pitched in to help Quincy residents in need.

There were many unsung heroes - and many of them will never be known except to those directly affected.

Of course, it wasn't all 100 percent peaches, cream and let's-all-sing-together. A lot of people came down with cabin fever in their homes. And even in snowfighting command centers where workers were cooped up for days under very trying circumstances, tempers flared now and then.

And there were gripes. About, for example, some people who managed to slip their cars by officials during the travel ban to stock up on food while most people had to trudge to stores on foot and lug small amounts of groceries home in their arms or on sleds.

Some didn't like the way their streets were plowed. Someone complained about snow being pushed against his fence, and another into his driveway. And there was the story about the guy who harassed one of the plow operators to the point where the latter stopped his truck, got out and flattened him.

And there was another one about the weirdo who telephoned a resident to report that his wife, who was in the hospital, had died. Police brought the grief-stricken man to the hospital; the story goes, where he found his wife very much alive.

That cruel prank, meanwhile, delayed police from taking needed medicine to another resident with high blood pressure.

Most of those and other similar incidents will be forgotten by the time the first robin gets up enough courage to put in an appearance here.

But there is one character we hope will not be forgotten: the looter.

Fortunately, for Quincy, there were only isolated cases of looting although some homes are still empty and could yet be plundered.

The looter, in our book is a creep-a wart on humanity. He takes advantage of a tragic situation to steal from homes evacuated because of floods or lack of heat. Or steals from stores where windows have been blown in.

We hope anyone arrested for looting and convicted after a fair hearing gets what he should: severe punishment.

We hope judges here in Quincy and elsewhere feel the same way about that. The looter deserves no sympathy.

He is as bad as the thief who steals from the blind; the bully who picks on the invalid and the rapist whose victim is innocent.

Overall, Quincy came through it well. And most of us may even be better off in the long run for the experience. It sure humbled us.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1934 postcard showing the old granite railroad bridge over Furnace Brook Parkway in West Quincy. Locals knew it as Echo Bridge because of its resonating qualities. The bridge was torn down to build the Southeast Expressway along the right-of-way of what was the Granite branch of the Old Colony Railroad. The branch line ran from the Atlantic Bridge on Hancock Street in North Quincy across the Montclair marshes serving stations in Montclair, East Milton and West Quincy. It rejoined the main line just south of today's Quincy Adams station. The Granite Line was built on part of America's first railroad right-of-way, which is where it got its name. It ran for almost 70 years from 1871 to 1940. The Montclair station was near Vershire Street in the Hillside section, the East Milton station was near today's Sheldon Building on Adams Street and the West Quincy station was at Biondi's service station on Willard Street. Council Votes 70-Hour Work Week For Firefighters

By FRANK McCAULEY

The City Council joined 11 other Massachusetts cities by accepting a 70-hour week law for firefighters by a unanimous vote.

First change in the working hours of the local firefighters in more than 20 years, the law reduced the workweek of the men from an 84-hour week. Mayor Thomas S. Burgin estimated that acceptance of the act would mean the addition of between 15 and 18 men and an additional cost of $31,000 in annual fire department salaries.

VETO MESSAGE FROM BURGIN

With the suggestion that the City Council attend to its business and let City Solicitor John D. Smith attend to his, Mayor Burgin informed the City Council that he had vetoed a resolution requesting City Auditor Leo Mullin to "obtain a legal opinion relative to judgment in favor of the Brookes-Skinner Company."

Commenting on the $5,792.37 judgment awarded to Brookes-Skinner for work done on the unfinished addition to the city hospital, which Burgin authorized under an emergency order, he said:

"May I suggest to the City Council that the city's legal affairs are the responsibility of the city solicitor and may I further suggest that if the City Council would attend to the legislative affairs of the city and permit the solicitor to attend to the city's legal affairs, considerable time would be saved."

Quincy Firefighters Association Most Grateful To Many

On behalf of the Quincy Firefighters Association, I would like to thank the citizens and businesses in the City of Quincy for opening your homes and businesses during the funeral of the tragic death of Boston Fire Lieutenant Kevin Kelley.

It is in difficult times like this that we see how thoughtful the people in Quincy really are. The businesses and homes, along with St. Ann's School, that opened their doors to the thousands of firefighters from all over the world that attended the funeral so they could get inside for a hot coffee and refreshments during the wait in the frigid temperatures, will never be forgotten.

We would also like to thank Mayor Koch and his administration for the help to insure that the ceremony would go without a hitch, and the Public Works Department for the excellent job they did ensuring the area was clear for the procession.

Also a special thanks to our brothers and sisters in Public Safety and the Quincy Police Department. Thank you Chief Paul Keenan, the Superior Officers, and the Quincy Police Patrol Officers for all that you did. Words cannot say how much we appreciate what was done for our Brotherhood that day. The officers that volunteered their time and all the others that donned their uniform that day to ensure all went well. Any out-of-city firefighter that may have missed their ride back to Boston; the Quincy Police were there to ensure someone would get them back safely. They went above and beyond the call of duty to make this sad day a little better for all involved.

Thank you again.

Commends Sun For Its Evenhanded News Coverage

There's been no shortage of media covering the current economic crisis. Unfortunately, even the local press can become more concerned with spinning stories to fit publishers' political aims than with educating the public in fairness and truth.

For this reason, I commend The Quincy Sun for its evenhanded reporting of the efforts of our city councillors and the mayor's office during 2008.

I applaud The Sun's coverage that reported the hard work and fiscal restraint our councillors displayed but rarely got credit for. All too often, I read little but criticism of them for their recent passage of a property tax increase.

The Mayor's office has not been spared acrimony either. I have read many protests of the tax increase. In some cases, they appeared to be retaliation over unrelated issues such as Mr. Koch's non-support of gay marriage or a track at Pageant Field.

Then there are the complaints against the Mayor's redecoration of the mayoral office. Whether by residents or local media, the perpetrated image is that the Mayor has gone Leona Helmsley on us. The truth is that Mayor Koch's supported opulence cost us taxpayers about one-hundredth of one percent of the City budget. Much ado about nothing, but it makes for great political mud slinging.

No mayor can adversely affect the lives of his constituents while in office just months. Yet, among the various cities I've lived in, Tom Menino may be the only mayor I've ever seen so flippantly criticized or maligned in his first year.

I'm thankful for The Sun's positive reports on the accomplishments of the Koch administration, especially in cost savings programs achieved or sought. They more accurately por-

Program At Quincy Medical Center Aids Child Witnesses Of Domestic Violence

Sheriff's Office Brightens Holidays For 15 Local Children

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office made a special holiday delivery to Quincy Medical Center to fill the wish lists of 15 children in the Finding Hope for Children (FHC) program based at the hospital.

Finding Hope for Children, which offers counseling and support services for children who have witnessed domestic violence, formed last year as the result of a coalition of state and local officials and key service providers, including Quincy Medical Center and the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

FHC is cooperatively funded by the City of Quincy, QMC, and through grants from organizations such as the Blue Hills Health Care Alliance.

"In talking with Susan Gill-Hickey of the Finding Hope for Children program, we realized that there were 15 kids who were not receiving services from any other agency, and we decided they could use a little extra holiday cheer," said Stacey Sylvester, Victim Services Advocate.

She and Sheriff Michael Bellotti personally delivered the gifts to QMC where they will be distributed to children in the program.

"One of my main goals as Sheriff is to emphasize the rights of victims in our community," says Bellotti, who created the first-ever Victim Services Unit at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office. "If we see a need we will do what we can, working with agencies like Quincy Medical Center, to fill that need. In this case, we got to play Santa for some very deserving kids."

The mission of the Sheriff's Victim Services Unit is to provide information and support services to crime victims, their families and other concerned individuals. The unit works closely with the Finding Hope for Children program at Quincy Medical Center.

"The Finding Hope for Children Program is so grateful to the dedicated staff of the Norfolk County Sheriff's office for their overwhelming generosity in sponsoring our families this Christmas," said Gill-Hickey. "Each day, the FHC staff witness the amazing strength of the human spirit through its work with families struggling to break the cycle of violence. The commitment shown to these families by the Sheriff's Department will go a long way to aid in the healing process necessary for these families to win this all important struggle."

'Bats At The Library' Discussion Feb. 7

"Bats at the Library" will be on the agenda Saturday, Feb. 7, from 2 to 3:30 p.m. in the Community Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

No, it's not a real infestation of the flying mammals but the discussion of a book written and illustrated by local author Brian Lies as part of a campaign to promote family literacy.

In the book, a colony of friendly bats sneak into the library after hours and become so captivated by Storytime that they fail to notice the light of dawn bringing their adventure to a close.

The program, a RISE (Reading Is So Exciting)

Family Event, is co-sponsored by the Thomas Crane Public Library and South Shore Day Care Services.

Lies (rhymes with "cheese") recognized the importance of encouraging kids to enjoy reading and remembered the time when he started to lose interest in books.

"When I first learned to read, I was an avid reader," he said. "But around third grade, I slowed down. The library shelves seemed too intimidating, and it was hard to find book that I liked."

"Then my mother signed me up with a book club which sent me a new hardcover every month, and I looked forward to each new book. The reading habit kicked back in and has stuck with me ever since."

"I worry about many of the students I meet when I visit schools --- kids who say, 'Oh, I don't read books,' in an offhand way."

"Kids who see imagination as an unnecessary extra best left to the 'artsy' kids, rather than as a powerful skill as important in science, professional sports or any trade as it is in creative fields."

"Learning how to think clearly and creatively is probably more important than learning what to think."

Laforest Steps Down As HNCC Head To Run For City Council Seat

Margaret Laforest has resigned as president of the Houghs Neck Community Council, as required under its bylaws, to run for the Ward 1 seat on the City Council.

"I had a great time serving as president of the HNCC and will remain active with the organization," she said. "I would like to thank everyone for their support of the HNCC, our events and community programs."

"Best wishes to incoming President Brian Laroche and Vice President Jim McCarthy as they continue the HNCC's service to the community."

The Committee to Elect Margaret Laforest will host a campaign kick-off fundraiser Wednesday, Feb. 11, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Fox & Hound, 1233 Sea St., Merrymount. The suggested donation is $20.

Tickets and/or more information is available by calling Alison McCarthy at 617-773-5920.

Laforest said that running for the Council seat currently held by Leo Kelly is a natural extension of the work she has done on a volunteer basis for many years.

"As a fifth generation Quincy resident, I believe that my personal and professional experience uniquely qualify me to represent Ward 1 on the City Council," she said.

"I am a passionate person who looks for ways to help others and I am proud of my many years of professional services and extensive work as a volunteer for the Quincy community."

As president, Laforest resurrected "illumination," a contest to decorate houses for the Fourth of July, and chaired "Chowdafest," a waterside chowder contest held at the Maritime Center in September.

She also created the Mayor of Houghs Neck contest, an annual community fundraiser in which the winner is awarded the honorary title and a flounder trophy commemorating his accomplishment.

Through the years, Laforest also has held the titles of vice president, corresponding secretary, membership chairman and executive board member of the HNCC.

COA, Lions Seek Glasses

The Council on Aging is joining the Quincy Lions Club to collect glasses for the needy who need them but can't afford them.

If you have glasses you no longer need and would like to donate them to a worthy cause, call the COA at 617-376-1506 for further information.

Burst Water Main Ruins NQ Senior Stay Out Plans

A water main burst in the shop room of North Quincy High School Jan. 9, ruining all the school's Senior Stay Out After Prom decorations fashioned by volunteers over the past 12 years.

The Senior Stay Out Committee, headed by Kathy Moreschi and Gail Berry, issued an appeal to businesses, politicians, teachers and parents for help in replacing the lost items.

"The time, effort and cost to replace what was lost are well beyond the means of the Senior Stay Out Committee," they said.

"Tax-deductible donations of cash, gift cards or any type of product prizes for the kids would be greatly appreciated."

Checks made payable to NQHS Senior Stay Out should be sent to the NQHS Stay Out Committee, North Quincy High School, 316 Hancock St., North Quincy MA 02171.

The committee's tax-exempt number is 046-001-409.

"It would be a shame to have to cancel this event and leave close to 400 seniors and their dates with no place to go after the prom due to funding," said the committee.

"This is always a night that parents, teachers and law enforcement worry about with teenagers on the road after the prom.

"This after prom 'all night, substance and drug free' party gives the Class of 2009 a safe place to go, have fun, and win prizes all night with their friends."

If you wish to help out or make a donations or simply need more information, contact Kathy at 617-699-4606.

Ward 2 Democrats To Caucus Saturday At Commonwealth Restaurant

Registered Democrats in Ward 2 will be holding a caucus Saturday, Feb. 7 at the Commonwealth Restaurant 79 Parkway.

There will be a breakfast beginning at 9 a.m. followed by the caucus starting at 10 a.m.

The basis of the meeting is to elect delegates and alternates to the 2009 Massachusetts Democratic Convention. Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

The convention will be held on Saturday, June 6 at the Mass Mutual Center in Springfield. At that time, Democrats from across the state will gather to adopt a party platform.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Ward 2. Candidates for delegate and alternate must consent to nomination in writing and must be present at the caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret.

Those not elected as delegate and/or alternate, who meet the qualifications, may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority, and disabled. Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 56 Roland Street Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129 no later than 10 days after the caucus date.

For caucus information contact Chairman Brad Croall at 617-930-0106.

"For many people, the switch from dual stream to single stream was a simple concept but the greatest challenge was to inspire new participants to recycle," said Rosemary Nolan, coordinator for the tri-town alliance.

A "How-To" packet for single stream recycling was developed and mailed to every household in June. In addition, ads were placed in local newspapers and public service announcements were splashed across municipal cable channels. Quincy's volunteer Recycling Committee played a very large roll in developing programs and events to schools and civic organizations.

Council Accepts Final Payment On Carpet

City Council Monday voted unanimously to accept a check covering the final payment for the new carpet in Mayor Thomas Koch's office.

The check for $9,399.18 is drawn from the Thomas Koch Committee.

After the vote, Council President Jay Davis said he was glad the recent controversy regarding the mayor's $18,000 carpet was now closed.

"Hopefully, we can move on to bigger and better things," said Davis.

Residents and media criticized Koch for installing new and expensive carpeting and a flat-screen television in the mayor's office in late fall.

Koch ordered new carpeting installed through-out City Hall and an expensive pattern for the mayor's office, along with a $4700 42-inch flat screen television.

The mayor's redecorated office became an issue in December, just as residents were learning of an average tax bill increase of more than $500.

Once the City Council accepted the payment, Koch's campaign fund has paid fully for the carpet and will send the television to the Senior Center once it is opened.

21st Lunar New Year Festival Sunday At North Quincy H.S.

It's xin nian kuai le time again in Quincy's Chinese community.

That's Happy New Year to the rest of us as we enter the Year of the Ox in the Chinese Zodiac, an animal known to be dependable, modest, calm and possessed of an open and honest nature.

For the 21st year, the Quincy Lunar New Year Festival, now one of the largest such celebrations in the state, will be held Sunday, Feb. 8, from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. in North Quincy High School.

There will be a variety of free and festive programs, including the traditional lion dance, an array of Asian food, games and crafts for the kids and traditional and modern dance and music.

The ox, or sometimes known as the water buffalo, represents the second year of the Zodiac, after the rat and before the tiger, dragon, snake, horse, sheep, monkey, rooster, dog and bear.

In Chinese mythology, the Jade Emperor threw a birthday party for himself and told all the animals of the world that the first 12 to arrive at the party would be given their own Zodiac years.

But to reach the party, they would have to swim one of the fastest rivers in the land.

While the others hung back from the raging torrent, the rat leaped aboard the strongest of them all, the ox, and rode across, jumping off in first place while the ox finished second.

Traditionally, the holiday celebration opens with fireworks, signifying good riddance to the old year and a welcome to the new, but fireworks are now banned in China and most other venues.

The festivities end with the giving of the Red Packets, envelopes of money symbolizing luck and wealth and typically given to the younger generation by parents and grandparents.

Last year's Lunar Festival in Quincy drew an audience estimated at 6,000 and more than that are expected Sunday.

Talk Show History At Crane Library

A new program at the Thomas Crane Public Library promises to delve into the talk show programs and what goes on behind the scenes, and who some talk show hosts are so controversial.

The program is called "Comment & Controversy: Talking About the Talk Shows," and will be held Feb. 9 at 7 p.m. at the library on 40 Washington St.

Donna L. Halper, author of a new book about talk shows will discuss some of the best known talkers, such as Jerry Williams, David Brudnoy and Larry Glick.

Halper was the first woman announcer in Northeastern University where she attended, and broadcasted a nightly show on the campus radio station back in Oct. 1968.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

automatic light shut-off for rooms not in use.

Once all building and demolition phases are complete, the school will, also, boast a courtyard with benches, trees and grass, enhancing the campus effect of the project.

Santoro described such high-tech details as interactive whiteboards, a small greenhouse fueled by solar power, laptop computers accessible to all students, and Dolby sound systems.

"The whole building is wireless," said Santoro.

The students will "have a clicker system and the teacher will know (instantly) which students get the answers correct," Santoro said, describing the use of interactive whiteboards.

Teachers can write on the whiteboards from any spot in a classroom and students just click their answers.

Such state of the art equipment is important, but not as important as the "interdisciplinary approach to learning" or shared disciplines that the building layout will foster, said Santoro.

Santoro noted that, on all three floors, the mathematics classrooms are across the hallways from such student labs as office technology, electrical studies, physics, and chemistry. The biology classrooms are opposite the nursing program and all disciplines are integrated with like courses.

"Subjects are connected by an inter-disciplinary way of teaching," said Santoro who pointed out that even the teachers' staff rooms will be equipped for shared disciplines on each of the three floors.

That will allow teachers to prepare classes in concert with other teachers in related subjects.

For plumbing and electrical students, the skeletons of realistic mock rooms and houses are already constructed. Students will use these rooms for hands-on experience installing wiring and piping.

For culinary arts students, huge mixers and ovens, refrigerators and stoves fill the kitchens where students will prepare foods for the school's 85-seat restaurant and bakery shop.

Santoro said the restaurant will, also, have outdoor seating in the courtyard in good weather. "We're going to do some theater (in the restaurant), with singing waiters and waitresses."

That will allow the drama students additional outlets for their talents.

The new 128,000 square foot wing also features a 150-seat lecture hall which will complement a larger, 800-seat auditorium planned for Phase 3.

This wing completes the second phase of the city's $126 million high school project.

Initial planning for the new high school began nearly a dozen years ago under the Mayor James Sheets' administration and site plans and funding options were finalized under Mayor William Phelan.

The third and final phase begins in March when contractors demolish the original 40-year-old science and technology wing and construct a three-story 224,000 square foot gymnasium, auditorium and administration wing.

The 1924 yellow brick Quincy High School building will remain in place after construction is completed in 2010. At this time, there have been no public discussions regarding its reuse.

Coughlin Seeks Online City Finance Information

Ward Three Councilor Kevin F. Coughlin has renewed his requests from prior years that the City of Quincy provide convenient public access to its various financial documents by posting them on its website.

"Transparency and accountability are the most important principles in terms of creating and keeping a bond of trust between citizens and those they elect as the trustees and stewards of the city's financial well being," Coughlin said.

"It is, I believe, critically important that we provide as much easily discernible information as possible in the most accessible format. Copies of the current and prior Annual Budgets, Comprehensive Annual Financial Reports, Audits, Management Letters, Capital Improvement Plans all should be readily available along with executive summaries in plain language

"More and more residents want to understand in simple terms the full picture of the city's revenues and expenditures, short term and long term financial planning and how it comes together"

Coughlin has introduced a City Council resolution calling for this to take place on a new city website reportedly to be unveiled this spring.

"I think that citizens want to be engaged in the process especially when they watch the financial discussions that take place at Council meetings during the year and most especially when the proposed budget is being discussed and debated," Coughlin said.

"Having these documents at hand will allow that participation to occur. Municipal and state governments across the nation are taking great strides to involve their residents.

"Some," Coughlin continued, "like former Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack's office have launched websites specifically designed to explain the budget process and allow visitors to try their own hand at balancing the budget. Vilsack's interactive website allowed citizens access to the same information used by his office when developing the executive budget.

"Citizens read the governor's 'requests for results,' the 'results offers' submitted by state agencies, performance indicators, and even the 'cause-and-effect maps' used by the budgeting team to explain the causal links between services, environmental influences and the end results desired by citizens.

"Although we are not at that level of technical on-line sophistication I believe we can still empower citizen participation by giving them the information they need and deserve," Coughlin added.

United Methodist Fights Cancer With Daffodils

In the midst of the snow and the cold, the Quincy Community United Methodist Church is bringing an early touch of springtime ---daffodils.

Once again the congregation of the church at 40 Beale St., Wollaston, is participating in the American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days to fight the disease.

Over the next few weeks, they will be collecting money by purchasing daffodil bouquets and pots of daffodils, a drive coordinated by the Worship Committee, Jeannie O'Connor, chair.

"One of the most popular donations is the 'Gift of Hope,'" said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, the pastor.

"That's a bouquet of daffodils anonymously given to someone who has cancer. The bouquets are sent to area hospitals and tell somebody that somebody else really cares.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

'Foodplay' To Take Aim At Obesity At Bernazzani

Foodplay, an award-winning national touring nutrition theater show promoting health eating and exercise habits, is coming to Quincy.

The cast of colorful characters, fantastic feats of juggling and motivational messages, music, magic and fun will be at the Bernazzani School, 701 Furnace Brook Parkway, Monday, Feb. 9 at 1 p.m.

Foodplay uses the power of live theater to help children take charge of growing up by giving them the tools they need to fight the growing problem of childhood obesity.

During the performance, students will help Coach of the "US Junior Juggling Team" to teach Johnny (or Janey) Junkfood how to juggle the food he or she eats to wind up with a balanced diet.

Foodplay was founded 25 years ago by Barbara Torper, author of "Janey Junkfood's Fresh Adventure!" The Quincy visit is sponsored by Hannford Supermarkets.

"We feel to proud to give the gift of Foodplay and the terrific materials to hundreds of elementary schools throughout our five state area," said Molly Tarleton, community relations specialist at Hannaford.

"It's a great way to make a real difference in the lives of the families throughout our region."

Commitment To Patient Service Focus Of Milton Hospital's Annual Meeting

Over 100 members of the Milton Hospital Foundation attended its recent annual meeting for a yearly update on the hospital's growth, finances and plans.

The Foundation welcomed four new members, or "corporators", including Milton Hospital Chief of Gastroenterology George Barrett, M.D., Milton resident Mary Joyce, past Chair of Milton Selectmen Charles McCarthy and Randolph resident Valerie Sargent.

Four members of the Foundation were appointed to its Board, including long-time Development Fund Board members Carol Fallon and Helene Haddad, lifelong Milton resident Christopher Heavey and Mitchell Rabkin, M.D., past president of Beth Israel Hospital.

Milton Hospital's corporators help promote the mission of the hospital, especially in the areas of fundraising, community relations and volunteerism.

"The commitment of our corporators, board members, volunteers, physicians, and employees are the reason Milton Hospital has continued to grow," said Hospital President Joseph Morrissey, later recounting the stories of two employees recognized for their outstanding dedication to the hospital and its patients.

When an anxious patient forgot to bring a favorite doll to the hospital, peri-operative nurse Maureen Henebury, RN, eased his nerves by creating a makeshift companion using a few supplies and some tape, Morrissey said.

Housekeeper Gioberti Theodate was recognized for walking to work through a snowstorm, staying overnight and voluntarily working two shifts to cover for co-workers who could not make it to work due to the weather.

"We chose to work in health care because we want to care for people," Morrissey said.

Despite financial challenges facing many community hospitals, Chairman of the Board Richard Ward relayed the Board's optimism that a completed expansion project and continual advancement in quality of care have placed the hospital on the verge of financial stability.

Ward cited several groups whose work strengthens health care delivery, including the hospital's Patient Care Assessment Committee, which oversees quality improvement, and the Emergency Department Task Force, which has made significant strides in reducing wait times in the emergency department.

A hospital initiative called the Journey to Excellence has also brought about changes in nursing practices that have virtually eliminated the need for inpatients to use call buttons in some areas. "It's the attitude that we convey to patients at Milton Hospital that makes a difference," Mr. Ward said. "We deliver care with a personal touch."

Milton Hospital provides community-based health care to people of all ages in Milton, Quincy and other local communities.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Topics Of Discussion

I met up with a State Trooper from the State Fire Marshal's Office while our conversation gravitated toward some fire cause and origin issues. He has the opportunity to investigate many fires within many communities, while that experience affords first hand knowledge of common fire cause scenarios. Our discussion prompts me to share another look at some of those scenarios with you here.

We were discussing fire fatalities that came about from individuals sleeping with a space heater present and operating within a room. In one instance the space heater fell over, never shutting off as it was designed to do. It, like many other portable space heaters sold within Massachusetts, was advertised with a shutoff feature should the unit fall over. The insurance company, investigating the fire as well, eventually purchased a number of these same space heaters to determine the reliability of that "shut off" feature. They found that in every unit, they failed to operate as designed.

I have never written about this "fall over/shut off" feature where I don't believe that it should be relied upon. Placing a portable space heater on a stable base, 3 feet away from combustibles, and not left on while sleeping, nor left unattended within a room, should assure a reasonable level of safety.

They should not be taken for granted; sleeping with one operating within a room is taking it for granted and is unacceptable. As my discussion with the trooper confirms, that practice has led to a number of fire fatalities within this State and that's unacceptable as well.

We also discussed the frequency of electrical fires associated with aquariums. Our discussion focused on the failure of extension cords used for heaters, circulators and lighting.

In my opinion, power strips are inappropriate for this use while the State Fire Marshal suggests that they are more appropriately used with electronics. If an extension cord must be used for aquarium appliances, make certain that it is of appropriate size for the electrical load.

Lastly, we discussed a new favorite of mine, cloth dryers. We both agreed; simple lint screen cleaning with each use is imperative, but over time, is not enough. Particularly with long-term excessive use, the exhaust hose should be removed and checked periodically. As evidenced by my own dryer, lint can bypass the screen and accumulate within the exhaust hose. Consequently, I just removed and replaced my own, as the trooper did as well. Fire investigation experience, and news reports of recent incidents caused by lint accumulation will prompt such action.

You can direct deliberate attention to all three of these issues if they apply. Take moments; be proactive about your own welfare and that of your loved ones. If you use a space heater, do so responsibly, make certain extension cords are appropriate for their use, use those homeowner skills and replace a dryer exhaust vent hose if needed. Thank you for doing so.

Morrissey Bill Seeks Tax Relief For Vets

Sen. Michael Morrissey has filed legislation that would provide additional property tax relief for certain seniors, veterans and veterans organizations.

One bill would abate taxes for soldiers during their deployment.

Another would allow a tax exemption for certain estates of incorporated veterans organizations valued at less than $1 million.

"I feel that it is only fitting that we continue to provide any financial assistance available to our brave veterans and their organizations," said Morrissey.

Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law last year a bill to allow the town of Braintree to grant full tax abatements to soldiers during their terms of deployment.

The Quincy City Council this year passed a similar measure that has yet to be reviewed by the Legislature.

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

Morrissey also has filed a bill that would set a flat filing fee of $25 for persons over the age of 65 who have gross incomes of up to 200 per cent of the federal poverty level who appeal their assessment to the State Appellate Tax Board.

"The process of appealing a property tax assessment can be a costly endeavor and this legislation seeks to give some of our lower fixed income seniors the opportunity to seek an appeal at a reasonable fee for them," said Morrissey.

Currently, the fee for filing is based on the value of the property.

For updates or questions, call Morrissey's office at 617-722-1494.

Residents are encouraged to bring questions on the issues of the day to the mayor. The meeting is open to the public.

Juvenile Harp Seal Visits Wollaston Beach

because the competition for food is minimal in these waters this time of year. We have been seeing and hearing reports of harp seals in Quincy waters for years. The ice and beaches give them a chance to get out of the cold water and rest."

The NE Aquarium does have a set of guidelines that they ask people to respect in situations such as this one. They ask that people remain at least 150 feet away from the harp seal, as this species can be aggressive towards humans. They also request that if you see a harp seal and have a dog with you, that your dog remain leashed.

"It is great to watch these seals, but you should not get too close," LaCasse added. "People who are seen harassing them can be prosecuted under the Marine Mammals Protection Act. You actions may be well-intentioned but they can be aggressive, so stay a safe distance away."

LaCasse did state that if you notice any trauma to a harp seal's face, or mucus around the seal's eyes or nose, to call the NE Aquarium at 617-973-5247 with a specific description and location and they will send out a field volunteer to investigate, but do not attempt to help the seal yourself.

"There is adequate food (fish) for them here and the cold weather and coastal ice makes an attractive habitat, these are the reasons we have seen an increase in sightings since the mid-1990s," LaCasse said. "And they come out of the water all the time to rest. People need to respect their space and enjoy their presence from a safe distance."

Something Special For Your Valentine

Valentine's Day Romance Tips For All Relationships

(ARA) - Valentine's Day is the most romantic day of the year, but it can also be one of the most challenging. If you are a new couple, how do you express your feelings without going overboard? If you are an established couple with work and family responsibilities, where can you find the time to arrange a romantic evening?

The answers are actually very simple. Just ask Rochelle Lulow, creative director at American Greetings, who immersed herself in everything love to supervise the creation of the newest romantic cards from the greeting card company. As they conducted focus groups, poured over research and sat down to talk to consumers about their relationships. Lulow and her team gained insight not only into the perfect card, but also what makes for the perfect bond.

"Valentine's Day is all about your relationship," says Lulow. "And the very best way to celebrate is to just focus on what makes the both of you happy, and what makes your relationship so unique."

Lulow and her team offer some basic tips for celebrating your romance, no matter what stage you're at as a couple.

New Couple or Just Flirting

You may have just started dating or are still working up the nerve, but either way there is some chemistry, so embrace it. Go on a double date to lessen the pressure of a night alone, while not losing the intimacy by going with a large group.

Keep your gift light and simple, but thoughtful. Burn a CD for your sweetheart and pair it with a fun e-card or even a quick text message to let him or her know you're interested.

Growing Couple

You have moved beyond mutual attraction to something more. Slowly you are learning the subtleties that make each of you who you are. You love spending time together, but are still at the stage where you have to work around schedules.

To get in the romantic spirit, use the whole week leading up to Valentine's Day to arrange mini-dates. Monday, enjoy game night. Tuesday, watch a favorite show or movie together. Wednesday, skip the gym and get dessert. Thursday, make up for the mid-week treat by working out together.

er. On Friday, Valentine's Day eve, slip out of work a little early and go out for a light dinner and movie.

Show your sweetie how well you know him or her with a gift that reflects his or her interests. Get tickets to a game for a sports nut, a first edition of a favorite novel for a book lover, or a basket of kitchen gadgets for your favorite chef.

Established Couple

You have committed to one another and now you are both looking forward to your future. You are also juggling a lot of responsibilities, which can make planning difficult.

With Valentine's Day falling on a Saturday this year, take some time and go on a weekend trip. Visit a nearby city you have never seen and stay in a cozy bed and breakfast to enhance the romance.

Keep your gift simple by treating your significant other to a random day of kindness. Present breakfast in bed, flood the house with sticky notes featuring compliments and favorite memories, and round out the day by preparing a favorite meal.

Committed Couple

You two have been lucky enough to experience many of life's most important milestones together. Valentine's Day is now all about remembering the great memories you have already made, and looking forward to making many more.

Combine romance and nostalgia by re-enacting your very first date. As you reminisce, take some time to discuss doing a few of those things you have always promised yourselves, but never quite gotten around to.

Rosy Tips For Valentine's Day

(NAPS) - Roses reign supreme for Valentine's Day. A well-known statement of love, for many, sending roses is the perfect way to say "I love you."

To make this loving gift a long-lasting one, follow these tips from Julie Mulligan, lifestyle expert from 1-800-FLOWERS.COM.

• Always use clean vases or containers.

• Fill the container about 3/4 full with warm water and floral food.

• Removes leaves that will be under the water while in the vase, as they will rot.

• Give each stem a fresh cut on an angle while holding the stem under water to prevent air from getting in the stem.

• Place the vase in a cool spot, away from heat.

• Change the water and flower food every three to four days and recut the stems.

From roses to tulips to orchids to lilies, there are flowers to please all the important people in your life this Valentine's Day, says Mulligan.

Celebrate Valentine's Day With A Healthy Heart

(ARA) - February marks the calendar page for Valentine's Day and Heart Health Month, so there's never been a better reason to be good to your heart. A few simple steps today can keep it beating strong all year long so you can live life to the fullest.

Here are three tips that can help promote heart health:

1) A little red gift your heart will love.

Many of us know that omega-3 fatty acids are important for heart health and have decided to supplement our diets with fish oil in order to benefit from these omega-3s. But did you know there's another source for omega-3s that is smaller and easier to take than bulky fish oil softgels and also three times more powerful for supporting cardiovascular health? It's krill oil ... and it's a gift you should give your heart each day.

Krill oil is supplied from krill, tiny shrimp-like crustaceans that inhabit the cold ocean areas of the world. Like fish oil, krill oil contains essential omega-3 fatty acids. However, the omega-3s in krill oil are linked together in a different form -- a more soluble structure that is easily absorbed by our bodies. Just one krill oil softgel, about the size of a coffee bean, supports a key marker of cardiovascular health better than three large fish oil softgels, without the fishy smell or aftertaste.

MegaRed Omega-3 Krill Oil from Schiff is shown to be safe and effective in clinical trials. Krill oil promotes cardiovascular health and maintains cholesterol levels within the normal range. The antioxidant astaxanthin found in krill oil, which gives it its red color, neutralizes free radicals -- harmful metabolic by-products that damage cells and tissues throughout the body. Visit www.schiffmegared.com or call (800) 526-6251 to learn more.

Something Special For Your Valentine

Jewelry Gift Ideas For Valentine's Day

Every year, Valentine's Day is looked at as one of the biggest gift-giving holidays of the year. Additionally, many use the holiday to drop down on one knee and pop the big question.

The following jewelry ideas will help you pick out the hottest jewelry this Valentine's Day:

• Engagement ring: If you're looking to propose to your significant other this Valentine's Day, look beyond the four Cs and seriously consider the setting. With an engagement diamond purchase, a premium is paid for a quality diamond, and you won't want to diminish that investment with a metal that won't complement the beauty and longevity of the stone. Platinum will hold your diamond more securely, and since it's naturally a white metal, it will maximize the diamond's sparkle. Designs that range from modern styles by Martin Flyer to vintage-inspired looks from Taroni can accommodate all types of diamond cuts.

• Gifts for him: One of the most popular Valentine's Day gifts for men-stylish watches from companies like Frank Muller, Vacheron Constantin and Jacob & Co.-pair masculinity with durability in Platinum looks that are perfect for dressing up or down. If you're looking for a different approach. Platinum cuff links also make a good choice for that businessman with a sense of panache.

• Platinum pendants: From the runway to Hollywood's A-list, it's all about layering this season. Look to layering Platinum pendants in oval, heart and square shapes for a distinct flair this year.

2) A heart-healthy eating plan for you and your family.

Eating heart-healthy doesn't have to mean bland foods that don't satisfy. Try new recipes and think creatively with food. Here are some guidelines:

Meat: Choose lean meats to help cut down on saturated and trans fat. Poultry without the skin, and red meat and pork labeled 'loin' and 'round' usually have less fat. Grill, bake and broil instead of frying. Jazz up meat with different herbs and spices.

Dairy: Whole-fat dairy products are a thing of the past. Look for low-fat versions of milk, butter, yogurt and cheese that are often just as tasty. If you're finding that switching is hard, do it gradually. For example, mix whole milk with 1 percent until your taste buds adjust.

Snacks: Snacks aren't bad if you choose the right ones. Avoid options that contain trans fat. High-sodium and high-sugar snacks are not good choices either. Instead, try real fruit or cut-up vegetables.

3) Get moving for a happy heart.

Now that you're eating right and getting your omega-3s and antioxidants with the krill oil supplement you're taking, the final step is to incorporate physical activity into your daily life. If you're able to attend a gym, get a partner involved and encourage each other. If you don't visit a gym, try working out at home in front of the TV or go outside and do some yard work.

Help your whole family get heart healthy by planning a fun activity together each week. Go for a nature walk, take a bike ride, bring the dog to a park, take family dance lessons or try a new sport. New and interesting activities make a great gift for the family or your significant other.

February may be the shortest month of the year, but there's no good reason to short-change your heart. By following these three simple tips -- take omega-3 rich krill oil, follow a heart-healthy eating plan and get moving -- you'll celebrate Valentine's Day and Heart Health Month by making your heart strong and healthy for many years to come.

Ice and Snow Tips

Q. This is our first winter in the Northeast — my husband and I moved from a warmer state — and I must say the snow and ice are a real pain. Do you have any tips to deal with snow shoveling and icy walkways? — Doris in Connecticut

A. My first tip is, get to know your neighbors, because there's nothing better than having some help when clearing your sidewalk and walkway. A next-door neighbor with a snow blower is worth his weight in gold after a big storm. But here are some other hints to make shoveling a little bit easier:

— As soon as a snowstorm winds down, head outside and begin shoveling. The snow is not packed as heavily at this point, so you can move more of it off the walks with less effort.

— Never "load" the shovel. Scoop up snow until the shovel is about a third full and then lift the shovel to dump the snow to the side of the walk.

— Use your shovel to scoop the snow and push it to the side, rather than lift and toss. You won't get worn out as quickly.

— Never shovel snow from your walk into the street. In most municipalities it will earn you a citation; it creates a hazard and annoys the heck out of neighbors.

— If you need to move a lot of snow farther than the end of your shovel, fill a wheelbarrow rather than walking back and forth several times.

Dealing with icy walks is an even bigger problem, since it's typical for snow to melt slightly during the day and then freeze hard at night. Reduce your chance of slipping by:

— Spreading a mixture of salt and sand along the walks after shoveling. The sand provides traction; the salt keeps water from freezing right at the freezing point.

— Walking with knees slightly bent in case you hit a slippery patch — never lock out your knees.

Quick And Easy Spring Cleaning Tips

(ARA) - Annual spring cleaning doesn't have to be a yearly, back-breaking cleaning marathon. Regular maintenance is easy with a few simple steps and will keep the dirt from piling up so you can skip the once a year event that everyone dreads.

Hannah Keeley, lifestyle expert and host of the PBS program "Hannah, Help Me!", offers quick and easy spring cleaning tips for the whole family to follow.

Get a game plan

Divide your home into four zones — eating areas, living areas, sleeping areas, and bathrooms. Each week, focus on cleaning just one of the four zones. Spreading out the chores will mean a lighter effort throughout the year instead of a buildup of gunk waiting for a spring-time scrub-down. Be sure to make note of the zones on your calendar so you don't get swept up (no pun intended) and forget all about it.

Get organized

Cut the clutter. Stacks of papers, boxes and miscellaneous junk can be magnets for dust, dirt and more. Clutter takes up the majority of your housework, usually about 80 percent, so if you cut out the clutter, you'll significantly cut your cleaning time. Find storage containers to organize and hold your family's possessions. Even your kids can help out — attach picture labels to storage bins so the little ones can easily identify where their belongings should go.

Have fun

Turn every day cleaning chores into fun, family-friendly activities. Chase your kids around the room while vacuuming. Blast your family's favorite playlist and invite the kids to dance around the house with you while dusting. Or, when washing dishes, use the soapy water to blow some bubbles with the kids. With a little creativity, seemingly boring household chores become fun games faster than your family can say "Mary Poppins."

Make your house do the work

Does your home work for you or against you? If your air filtration system is truly efficient, there should be little dust to clean up. This is especially important in the spring when the world comes into bloom, which can lead to poor indoor air quality and aggravate allergies and asthma. American Standard Heating & Air Conditioning's AccuClean whole-home air filtration system eliminates up to 99.98 percent of allergens, mold spores and other microscopic things from your home's filtered air, allowing you to spend less time cleaning, all year long. New studies conducted by Environmental Health & Engineering and professors from the Harvard School of Public Health show that the installation of AccuClean reduces dust accumulation in the home by more than 50 percent — so you can dust less and still have a healthier, cleaner home environment.

Keeley says she has tried the whole spring cleaning thing and found one thing to be true — it gets messy all over again. The trick is not in cleaning your home, but in keeping your home clean. With regular maintenance and some smart steps, you'll find plenty of time to get out and enjoy spring, rather than focus on one massive home clean-up.

Neighborhood Housing Services First-Time Homebuyer Workshop Feb. 17, Feb. 21

Buying your first home? Not sure where to begin? What kind of mortgage is right for you? How much can you afford?

Get these answers and many others when you attend one of Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore's first-time homebuyer workshops.

Open to all, regardless of income, these seminars are educational and recommended for all potential first time homebuyers. Participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender to discuss many mortgage options.

Also covered at the workshop will be the legal aspects of buying a home, importance of home and lead inspections and other information. This workshop is a prerequisite for first time homebuyer mortgage and grant programs, and is open to everyone throughout the state of Massachusetts, regardless of income.

The next workshop, sponsored by Dedham Institution for Savings, is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 17 for 6-8 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 21 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The workshop will be held at Dedham Institution for Savings, 55 Elm Street, Dedham.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive your home buying certificate.

There is a $15 fee per person. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31 or register at www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Block Annoying Automated Sales Calls

We now have a way to opt out of yet another of life's annoyances: the pre-recorded telemarketing call. Those calls have been the source of more than one answering machine running out of recording time when the pre-recorded message went on too long or didn't disconnect at the end. Equally irritating has been picking up the phone only to find a pre-recorded sales pitch and no identifying number on the Caller ID.

New Federal Trade Commission regulations now make it possible to opt out of receiving those pre-recorded telemarketing calls. Not only will there be a way to make that change if the phone is answered in person, but any message that's left must also include opt-out information.

If you answer in person, you must be given a way to immediately opt out while the message is still playing. This will likely be accomplished by pressing a certain number on the phone or saying a certain word. At that point, your number will be added to the Do Not Call list and the call disconnected.

If you're not home and your answering machine takes the call, the message will include a number to call (toll free). That number will take you to an automated 24-hour machine, and your opting out will be immediate.

Not all types of calls fall under this new regulation, however. Surveys and political calls will still be allowed, as will health-care messages.

Imagine: no more pre-recorded solicitation and sales messages.

The catch is that the calls will still be permitted until September 2009 if there's an ongoing relationship between you and the caller. After that, the caller must have specific written permission from you.

This is where those privacy-notice fliers you get with correspondence from credit-card companies and others will come in handy. Read the fine print. They ask for your instructions on whether or not to give your information to third parties and affiliates they deal with. Fill out those forms denying permission and send them in as soon as you get them. It's certain that telemarketers will consider "ongoing business relationship" to be a fuzzy line if you, by not responding to privacy notices, seem to give permission for them to call.

David Uffington regrets that he cannot personally answer reader questions, but will incorporate them into his column whenever possible. Write to him in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475, or send e-mail to columnreply@gmail.com.

On Tuesday, Jan. 20, 2009, at approximately 2:50 p.m., Officers John Leuchte, Steve Cleary and Paul Matthews were dispatched to Main Street for a "gun" call. Information came from a caller who stated that there were four males in an apartment and they were "flashing" their guns around.

Upon arrival, a female identified herself as the caller. She stated that the four males had been in the hallway yelling at her while waving two handguns around. She stated that they went back up the steps and into an apartment. The officers created a plan to cover the exits of the apartment, with Officer Leuchte at the back door while Officers Matthews and Cleary went up to the front door.

After knocking, Officer Leuchte entered the apartment and observed four males sitting in the kitchen. There was a substance on the kitchen table believed to be marijuana. Officers Matthews and Cleary also came into the kitchen and saw in plain view, two plastic bags on the floor that contained smaller bags, containing crack cocaine and cocaine. Based on the supporting evidence — a known witness, the description of the males, the apartment the suspects entered and most importantly, a eyewitness account of two handguns being handled recklessly, the males were pat-frisked for weapons and then secured in the kitchen.

After determining there were no warrants for the four suspects, Officer Matthews asked if there were any firearms in the house and they stated no.

Suspect #1 appeared very nervous and kept saying, "I'm not from around here, I'm from Dorchester." When asked how long he had been in Quincy on this day, suspect #1 stated that he just came from the T station. He was wearing a Red hooded sweatshirt.

Officer Leuchte, knowing that a male fitting the description of suspect #1 was just involved in a Breaking and Entering on Copeland Street, sought more information.

LT. DAN MINTON

A Job Well Done

tion.

Dispatch stated that the Copeland Street suspect was a male in his early twenties wearing a red hooded sweatshirt. Officer Millane, who was investigating the break, notified Officer Leuchte that there was a victim witness to the break and he would bring him to his location to arrange a "show up" identification of suspect #1. While waiting for the witness to arrive, Officer Leuchte observed a black leather bag on the floor. The bag was open and in plain view was a black facemask.

The Officer moved the facemask and saw a black and silver BB handgun atop three more facemasks. When asked about the gun and the masks, those in the apartment denied knowing that it was there.

Sergeant Dan Flaherty and Detective Brian Coen arrived on scene and spoke with the landlord, who consented to a search of his apartment. Officer Millane arrived on scene with the witness and the suspect was brought downstairs to the front porch for a show up ID. The witness confirmed that the suspect was one of the males who broke into his house. The suspect was placed under arrest. The others in the apartment were brought out one at a time for a show up but were not involved with the B&E according to the witness.

When the other suspects were brought back upstairs, they were all placed into handcuffs along with the landlord on a charge of "Possession with Intent to Distribute Class B." The suspects were placed in separate cruisers and then Officers Leuchte and Cleary joined Detective Coen in searching the apartment.

Officer Leuchte located a small firearm in a cabinet under the sink, next to where one of the suspects had been sitting. Officer Leuchte removed the magazine from the Bryco model 380 handgun, which held 6 rounds of ammunition. Once back at QPD Headquarters, Teletype Operator Carol Flynn determined that none of the individuals placed under arrest were ever issued a LIC FID, therefore, they were unauthorized to be in possession of guns. The firearm, along with the marijuana, cocaine, four cell phones, $220 in cash, four ski masks and the BB gun were placed into evidence for court purposes.

Operator Flynn ran the gun's serial number and learned that it was stolen last October in Manchester, New Hampshire. There were (4) bags of cocaine and (9) bags of crack cocaine that were packaged in a manner that was intended for distribution. The phones of the suspects, along with money were seized as evidence too.

All suspects were charged with, "Illegal Possession of a Firearm, Illegal Possession of Ammunition, Receiving Stolen Property (FIREARM), two counts of Possession of Class B with Intent to Distribute (cocaine & crack cocaine), and Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Laws."

The suspect charged with breaking into the apartment on Copeland Street was a 25-year-old Dorchester resident. The other suspects were from Quincy.

Nice Work!

Lieutenant John Steele of BCI reports a rash of wallet thefts from purses located in carriages in food stores. It is a simple crime to commit and just as simple to prevent.

The victim leaves their purse sitting in the basket area of the shopping cart and bends down to search for a product. During this brief moment, the thief, who has been scouting out potential victims, waits for the ideal timing, then walks by, slipping his hand inside the purse and pulling out the wallet! Take only what you need when shopping: some cash, identification and a credit card, along with keys to your car. This can all fit inside a front pocket.

Needs To Win Five Of Last Seven GamesQuincy Defeats Randolph, Inches Closer To Sectionals

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Presidents have a huge stretch of league games coming up this week and next, and in order to earn a spot in the Division II South Sectionals, Quincy has to be close to perfect the rest of the way.

After last week's 1-1 record, the Presidents have to win five of their last seven games to qualify for the post-season. The team is currently 5-8 overall and 4-8 in league play.

Quincy's quest for a tournament berth got a big boost with an impressive 65-47 triumph over Randolph HS on Jan. 27, but a 94-72 loss to Scituate HS last Friday puts the team in a spot where perfection is needed.

"At 5-8 overall it will be an uphill battle the rest of the way to get into the post-season," said Quincy head coach David Parry. "We are playing together as a team right now and we have started to eliminate some of the mistakes we were making earlier in the season."

"But we have some tough league games remaining, including a rematch against Duxbury on Tuesday, a big home game this Friday against Silver Lake and another huge league game versus North Quincy on Saturday. We have our work cut out for us."

In the Scituate (12-2, 2) game, the Presidents' senior guard Doug Scott was the leading scorer. Scott finished with 27 points. His 27 points vaulted him into the city record books as he passed Sarah Stanton (NQHS '04) for the all-time city scoring record.

Stanton had held the record with 1,533 career points. That was until Scott passed her with his seventh point of the game. He currently has 1,555 career points and counting.

"Doug broke the city record against Scituate," added Parry. "He could have accomplished the mark in our game against Randolph, but we were up late and decided it was not the best time for him to do it."

"I have to thank Matt Poirer, the head coach for Scituate, and the school for how they treated Doug breaking the Quincy scoring mark. They graciously stopped the game and presented him with a game ball. That is what high school sports is all about and it was a great moment for Doug and our team."

Boys' Basketball

Unfortunately for Scott and Quincy, the Sailors completely owned the offensive and defensive glass and dominated their home court to earn the 22-point victory. Dean Kennedy (19 points), Andrew McCarthy (12 points, 13 rebounds) and Marquimm Taylor (15 points) were the leading scorers for Scituate.

The Presidents started the game off slowly and soon found themselves down by double digits. According to Parry, the Achilles heel was his team's lack of rebounding ability against a bigger team. Scituate, at one point in the first-half had a 39-9 rebounding edge.

"They dominated us on the boards early in the game and we had no answer for them on the glass. It is very difficult for us when teams get more than one chance to score and that was the case against Scituate in the first half."

Earlier in the week Quincy handled Randolph HS with relative ease; winning by an 18-point margin on the road.

Scott finished with 18 points and 15 assists and sophomore forwards Kevin McDonagh (12 points, 10 rebounds) and Seth Pullum (12 points, 11 rebounds) and junior Kusi Adusei (huge three-pointer) also played well in the victory.

Quincy jumped out to 20-5 lead after one quarter and expended that advantage to 28 points entering the final quarter. The biggest surprise to the team's quick start was that Scott did not score one point; he just decided to dish out assists instead.

"We started off fast, taking a 20-5 lead after one quarter," Parry said. "Doug didn't score a point in that quarter. He was finding open shooters and being unselfish."

"This was a game in which we played a full four quarters and it was by far our best game passing all season long. We put on an exhibition passing-wise. Big win."

Scott entered the game looking to rewrite the city record books, but this night was not the time to do it. Once he got to 18 points (six away from the record), Parry decided it was time to take him out and give somebody else some run.

"Randolph began subbing in players in the second half, so we did the same," he said. "It was a good chance to get some other players court time. He could have gotten it that night, no doubt, it just wasn't the right time."

The slate of games this week may well decide if Quincy will make the post-season tournament.

The Presidents were scheduled to play a game against Duxbury High School on Tuesday. The two teams met two weeks ago with the Dragons winning 61-47.

This weekend, Quincy has two huge Patriot League games on the docket. On Friday night Quincy will host Silver Lake HS (6:30 p.m.) in a Keenan Division matchup and on Saturday evening the team will play host to the North Quincy Red Raiders. Tip-off for the big city game is set for 6 p.m.

"This week is huge for us," Parry said. "Duxbury is a great team and very tough and Silver Lake is going to be hungry as they are in a similar position to us. They need to win games to make it so it should be a tough game and the NQ is always competitive."

The Presidents finish their schedule with games against Whitman-Hanson (Feb. 10) and Hingham (Feb. 12) before playing in the annual Vin Moscardelli Tournament (Feb. 16-17) over school vacation week.

Dumps Pembroke, DuxburyNorth Quincy Nearing Fisher Division Crown*Girls' Basketball

A Fisher Division championship is within reach for the North Quincy Red Raiders girls' basketball team.

Following last week, when the team finished 2-0, with wins over Pembroke and a double overtime thriller against Duxbury, the Red Raiders currently have a 12-4 season record and a 9-3 record in the Patriot League.

North Quincy played an all-important league game on Tuesday night (Feb. 3) versus Hanover High School, the first place team in the Fisher Division, and the winner of that game would be in the driver's seat for a division title with four games to play on the schedule. Hanover and NQ entered this game with identical records, but Hanover held the advantage because of a 72-70 victory back on Dec. 19.

"It is a game that we have been waiting to play since our loss back in December," said NQ head coach Michael Jorgenson. "It should be a very competitive league game."

The Raiders, last Friday, earned a win over an over-matched Pembroke team, 65-44. Senior center Catherine O'Connell recorded her third double-double in a row, scoring 12 points and grabbing 10 rebounds. She also finished the game with five blocked shots.

O'Connell received help from fellow seniors Siobhan Carnell, Kristina Anderson and Kathleen Lynch. Carnell scored 15 points and had four steals; Anderson added five points and collected nine rebounds and Lynch finished with eight points, seven assists and five steals.

"We established ourselves in this game," added Jorgenson. "You can see we are heading in a new direction as a team. We played a steady game and we played together. It was a good win. There was no letdown from the Duxbury game and the girls played their hearts out."

Earlier last week, North Quincy hosted Duxbury HS and came away with an impressive 89-85 double-overtime victory. The Raiders, at one point in the second-half trailed by 16 points, but behind the effort of three seniors and a sophomore, North rallied back to take the lead but Duxbury countered and rallied back to force overtime and double overtime.

Duxbury trailed 70-68 late in the fourth quarter but hit two free throws to force OT. In the first overtime, Duxbury trailed again by two points and still managed to extend the game to a second OT. But North would not be denied a huge Patriot League win.

"Our seniors carried us in this game," said Jorgenson. "We were focused the moment we stepped on the court and it showed as the game went along. One huge advantage for us was the conditioning of the team.

"We preach conditioning all year long and we work on core training so we don't wear down in games like this. It showed as the game went into OT and then double OT. It seemed like Duxbury, which had been shooting lights out, wore down and we didn't and that was the difference."

Leading the way for the Raiders was Siobhan Carnell. Carnell dropped 34 points on Duxbury to go along with 11 rebounds and six steals. Lynch was just as unstoppable. She finished with a triple-double; finishing the game with 24 points, 16 rebounds and 10 assists. The team's two senior captains scored 58 of the team's 89 points and combined, recorded 27 rebounds and 16 assists.

O'Connell continued her stellar play of late, finishing the game with 10 points and 10 rebounds and sophomore Montana McBirney added 12 points and 11 rebounds.

"Siobhan continues to play great, as does Catherine, but it was Lynch who I thought played her best game of the season," said Jorgenson. "Jessie Howlett and Kristina Anderson also played well and really out entire senior class stepped up big."

"It is good to see the team playing together and playing with a real focus. That will be huge as we move forward this week and into the post-season."

The Raiders played Hanover on Tuesday night and are scheduled to play on the road against Randolph on Friday and will play the Quincy Presidents on Saturday afternoon. The game against Quincy will tip-off at 4 p.m. in the QHS Gym.

Q-NQ Indoor Track Results

The Quincy-North Quincy combined girls' track team had several solid performances in last Thursday's meet against Middleboro High School at the Reggie Lewis Track Center, Boston.

The final result was not as kind to Quincy as the team lost the meet 60-40.

Winners for Q-NQ included a first place finishes by Erin Collins in the shot put, Jess Davis in the two-mile, Alyssa Mullen in the one-mile and Erica Brady in the 1,000.

Over the weekend at the MA Open Invitational, Brady finished fifth in the one-mile with a time of 5:29.4, Davis ran a 12:29.4 two-mile to qualify for States in that event and Mullen also ran the two-mile in 12:18.2; a time that qualified her for the States in the event.

Brady, Davis and Mullen all ran their personal bests for the 2008-09 winter indoor season.

Quincy-North Girls' Hockey Still In Postseason Hunt

By SEAN BRENNAN

A 5-2 loss to Boston Latin Academy last Saturday afternoon at the Quincy Youth Arena was frustrating, but not the be-all-end-all for the Quincy-North Quincy girls' hockey program this winter.

The team, at 5-7-0 overall, still has an outside shot at advancing to the Division II post-season. With five games remaining, Q-NQ needs to reach at least the .500 mark to qualify, but unless some of the unlucky puck bounces go their way over these final games, a post-season berth may have to wait until next year.

"It was a good game, but very frustrating," said head coach Kelli Doolin. "It was back and forth all game long and we got shots on net but just couldn't find that lucky bounce."

"Regardless of the final result the team continues to play better and better each time out on the ice. With five games left on the schedule and anything is possible."

Against Boston Latin, Quincy-North Quincy received goals from junior forward Colleen Newcomb and freshman Presley McLaughlin, and steady goaltending from Erin McGinnis, an eighth grader at Central Middle School.

"Presley and Colleen, our team's leading goal scorers, continue to get goals and score points," added Doolin. "Presley's father is actually the head coach at Boston Latin, so that was cool for her to score a goal, and Colleen has been one of our best players all year long."

"In net, we gave Erin some time and let Shannon (Coleman) rest. Erin is only an eighth grader and played really well for us. All of their goals came off rebounds and she held her own back there."

With five games left on the schedule, Doolin is looking to her upperclassmen to lead the way toward a post-season berth. It also wouldn't hurt to have some shots find the back of the goal.

"We are getting our scoring opportunities," said Doolin, "and we have been playing well in all three zones on the ice. We just need some of these shots to find the back of the net and we should be good moving forward."

"Having said that, the seniors and juniors need to keep up the leadership they have shown all season on the ice and help the freshman maintain the progress they have made this year."

Quincy-North Quincy played Wednesday night at Canton High School and the team has a rematch this Sunday against Boston Latin Academy at Northeastern University's Matthews Arena in Boston. Faceoff for this game is 3:30 p.m.

Kayleen Lenihan, Colin Evans Advance To 'Hoop Shoot' State Finals

Quincy residents Kayleen Lenihan and Colin Evans once again showed that they are among the best free throw shooters on the South Shore.

Both Lenihan and Evans will compete for the state championship of the Elks National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Shooting contest after taking first place in the Circle District portion of the national event at Marshfield High School late last month.

The two had advanced to the Circle District by winning the Quincy City Championship back in December, in a local competition sponsored by the Quincy Lodge of Elks #943 and supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department.

In the Circle District event at Marshfield HS, Lenihan, a fifth grade student at Sacred Heart School, made 21-of-25 free throws to advance to the Feb. 7 state finals in Maynard, MA. Lenihan will be competing in the girls' 10-11 age group.

Evans, a sixth grader at Central Middle School, connected on 23-of-25 free throws to advance to the state finals. He will compete in the boys' 12-13 age group.

The National "Hoop Shoot" starts with a local competition and participants advance to the district, then state and the national finals. Over three million boys and girls age 8-13 take part nationwide.

Exalted Ruler Jim Folk, of the Quincy Lodge, accompanied Evans and Lenihan to the Circle District in Marshfield.

KAYLEEN LENIHAN and Colin Evans took first place in the Circle District portion of the Elks "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw competition in Marshfield late last month. Both Lenihan and Evans will compete in the state finals on Feb. 7 in Maynard.

Trigger Asthma

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have never been diagnosed with asthma, but when I drink cold beverages or eat ice cream and when I work out in cold weather, I start wheezing and get extreme chest pain. Is this asthma? What can I do? —R.K.

ANSWER: You can't give a better description of asthma.

Asthma is a relatively sudden constriction of the lungs' bronchi, the airways. The constriction is reversible, but the amount of time it takes to reverse varies from person to person and from situation to situation. Airway narrowing makes it tough for air to get into and out of the lungs. In addition, during an attack the airways are inflamed and they secrete thick mucus. Both add to the difficulty for air to move through them.

Wheezing is a classic asthma sign. The wheezing noise indicates air is meeting with resistance in its passage through the breathing tubes. Coughing is another asthma sign, as is bringing up thick, sticky sputum. During an attack, asthmatics often have chest tightness and pain. A person need not have all these signs and symptoms to have asthma. Wheezing and chest pain are enough.

Exercising in cold, dry air is an asthma trigger for many. The loss of heat and moisture from the breathing tubes brings on an attack. I haven't heard that drinking cold beverages or eating ice cream can precipitate an attack, but I can see how they might.

What can you do? Get to the family doctor. The doctor can confirm the asthma suspicion by testing your lungs' function. Medicines can prevent attacks as well as put an end to them.

As for the cold drinks and ice cream, don't you think it would be a good idea to avoid them?

Readers who would like more information on asthma can order the booklet on that topic by writing to Dr. Donohue — No. 602W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Will pomegranate juice or pomegranate juice mixed with blueberry juice lower cholesterol? I am a heart patient. —R.F.

ANSWER: Pomegranates and their juice have risen to the level of nutritional stardom. They contain substances that stop the oxidation of LDL cholesterol, the kind of cholesterol that clings to artery walls and leads to their obstruction. Oxidation is like rusting. Oxidized LDL cholesterol breaks apart and leads to clogged arteries. Pomegranates stop this process.

Blueberries are another nutritional star. They prevent oxidation too.

I don't know that mixing them doubles their effect, but I suppose it might.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Milton Hospital Heart, Vascular Physicians Join Forces With Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center

Six leading Milton Hospital physicians have affiliated with an innovative institute at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center that delivers documented, superior outcomes and better service to cardiovascular patients.

Cardiologists Jon W. Cronin, MD, Philip J. Doherty, MD, Wing Kin Fung, MD, Mark T. Hodgman, MD, and Scott B. Lutch, MD, and vascular surgeon Gregory J. Kechejian, MD, have joined a network of community-based cardiologists connected with the CardioVascular Institute (CVI) at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

The practice is located on the Milton Hospital campus, where the physicians are all members of the medical staff. They welcome new patients.

"We will continue to provide heart and vascular patients with a wide range of diagnostic services and care here in Milton," said Dr. Cronin.

"When their conditions require complex care, such as cardiac catheterization, coronary bypass or certain types of vascular surgery, they now will have easy access the CVI -- the best advanced cardiovascular center in the Boston area."

Beth Israel Deaconess created the CVI in 2007 by combining its cardiology, vascular surgery and cardiac surgery divisions into a single organization.

"The CVI is an unusual, highly integrated 'hospital-within-a-hospital' that has achieved outstanding outcomes in both medicine and surgery," according to Dr. Doherty.

Dr. Kechejian added, "Heart and vascular health issues are frequently interrelated, so it's beneficial for providers to be, too."

The doctors' offices at 100 Highland Ave., Milton, are among 16 locations in Eastern and Central Massachusetts where Harvard Medical Faculty Physicians from Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center provide a convenient, local connection to the Institute.

The Institute, formed in 2007 from three existing divisions at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, has been recognized for its outstanding clinical outcomes. Thomson Health Care (formerly Solucient) named Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center one of the nation's 100 top hospitals for cardiovascular care in 2005, 2006 and 2007. U.S. News & World Report named BIDMC among the nation's top 50 hospitals for heart and heart surgery in 2006 and 2007.

The Society of Thoracic Surgeons recently awarded the cardiac surgery program at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center its comprehensive three-star rating for the most recent reporting period July 1, 2006 to June 30, 2007. The three-star composite rating denotes the highest category of quality. Approximately 12 percent of all hospitals belonging to the STS achieve this highest tier rating.

Specifically, the Society reported an operative (30 days post-surgery) mortality rate for patients undergoing Coronary Artery Bypass Grafting surgery at BIDMC of 0.6 percent, compared to 2.0 percent at hospitals nationwide. For Aortic Valve Replacement surgery, the operative mortality rate was 0.0 percent, compared to 3.0 percent for hospitals nationwide. These numbers are risk-adjusted.

"These outcomes reflect our commitment to providing the best care possible," said Stanley M. Lewis, MD, interim chief executive officer at the Institute. "This commitment extends throughout our organization, in Boston and in the affiliated practices."

Sick-day Guidelines For Parents

(ARA) - Are you not always sure if your child's cough and sniffles warrant keeping him home from school? You're not alone.

In fact, a new study shows that in the past year three out of four parents faced at least one situation in which they were not entirely sure whether or not to keep their child home from school when he or she had a cold.

The National Association of School Nurses (NASN) and Triaminic developed "Sick Day Guidelines" to help parents with the key signs that they should consider keeping their children home from school, including:

- * A fever of 100.4 degrees or higher
- * Vomiting
- * Symptoms that prevent him or her from participating in school, such as excessive tiredness or lack of appetite; productive coughing or sneezing; headache, body aches or earache and a sore throat

Parents should keep their child home until his or her fever has been gone for 24 hours without medication. Colds can be contagious for at least 48 hours. Returning to school too soon may slow the recovery process and expose others unnecessarily to illness.

The Sick Day Guidelines, which also provide tips for helping to prevent colds and relieve cough and cold symptoms, are available to approximately 14,000 NASN members who reach 16 million children and their families across the country.

Parents may also be unsure about how best to relieve their child's cough and cold symptoms following recent news about changes to children's over-the-counter cough and cold product labeling and the new recommendation to not use these products in children under the age of 4 in the United States.

To view the complete Sick Day Guidelines or learn more about the campaign and helpful reminders on using children's cough and cold medicines appropriately, visit www.nasn.org or www.triaminic.com.

Simple Ways Seniors Can Stay Active And Healthy

(ARA) - You've worked hard your entire life to earn your retirement, and now you should enjoy it. But you won't be able to actively socialize with friends, family and neighbors, enjoy spending time on your hobbies or taking trips to see the grandchildren if you don't maintain good health and a good quality of life.

The average life expectancy is now 78 years, plenty of time to enjoy your golden years. You don't need to see a doctor every day to stay healthy; with the guidance of your physician, there are many ways you can take care of yourself at home. Here are a few ideas you can try yourself:

* Monitor the information your doctor wants to know. For example, an estimated one-half of senior citizens suffer from hypertension. The Lumiscope Blood Pressure Arm Monitor found at Montgomery Ward (www.Wards.com) allows you to track your blood pressure at home. Daily monitoring can help you and your doctor bring your blood pressure levels down to 120 or lower, which is recommended to avoid risks of stroke or heart attacks.

* Involve your friends, family and neighbors in a weekly yard game of bocce ball, croquet, horseshoes or badminton, to name a few. Not only are yard games good physical exercise, but the competition keeps your mind sharp and social interaction balances out a well-rounded lifestyle.

* Get your hands dirty and plant a garden. Whether you fill indoor pots with beautiful, leafy house plants or plant your entire outdoor landscape in a field of colorful blooms, working with plants is fun and contributes to a sense of well-being. Plus, the planting process involves a little muscle, helping you to keep your body in good condition.

* Relive some of your childhood fun. Try a daily workout with the Cory Everson Trampoline (www.Wards.com). The trampoline provides a good cardio and muscular workout complete with a stability bar to assist your balance. And you can exercise at your level, without overexerting your muscles. Combine your workout with your favorite tunes and revert to your bouncy youth.

* Join a book club and invite the members to your house. Whether you're into mysteries, historical fiction, biographies or romance novels, stretch your imagination, share your thoughts and engage your fellow book lovers in a good discussion.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DIABETES RAISES GUM DISEASE RISK

Parents of diabetic children should be aware that their children may display signs of gum disease as early as age six. This note of caution comes from dental researchers, who were surprised to learn that periodontal disease in diabetic children starts much earlier than once thought. It also worsens in adolescence. When researchers examined the gums of young diabetic children, they found significantly more plaque (the bacteria-laden film that covers teeth and gets under gums) than was observed among non-diabetics. This finding underlines the importance of having young children, especially diabetic children, undergo regular dental examinations. The earlier a problem is found, the better the chance that the dentist can control it.

Children and adults who have diabetes are more likely to have gum disease than people who do not have diabetes. Rely on us to answer all your questions about dental treatments and procedures. Let us help you keep your teeth healthy. We appreciate the opportunity to provide you with state-of-the-art dental care. Our staff is made up of well-trained professionals who work together as a team to provide you with the highest quality treatment in a warm, caring setting. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Primary ("baby") teeth play an important role in ensuring the health and placement of the permanent teeth that replace them. Baby teeth should not be viewed as expendable.

Screening Of Signs Feb. 13 At Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy, will present a free screening of the suspense thriller Signs Friday, Feb. 13 at 6:30 p.m. in the church's fellowship hall.

All are welcome to attend.

Written and directed by M. Night Shyamalan (The Sixth Sense), Signs features Mel Gibson as a farmer and pastor who loses his faith in God following the death of his wife in a freak accident. When a series of giant crop circles appears in his cornfield, the pastor and his family are forced to question their beliefs and disbelief.

Signs is being shown as part of Houghs Neck Congregational Church's "Faith in Film" Fridays, a series of free monthly screenings of popular films that explore issues of faith. The screenings are held on the second Friday of each month downstairs in the church's fellowship hall.

Admission is free. Films begin at 6:30 p.m. A snack bar offering soups, sandwiches and drinks opens at 6 p.m.

For directions or more information, call 617-479-8778.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Many wise and wonderful sayings have been passed down through the years on the true meaning of friendship...

It has been said that life without friendship is like the sky without the sun...

Friendship is like a treasury, you cannot take from it more than you put into it... True friendship like a diamond radiates steadily from its transparent heart... A friend is one who comes in when the whole world has gone out... Anyone can give advice, but a real friend lends a hand... Make friendship a habit and you will always have friends... Friendship is a responsibility, not an opportunity... Friendship is love with understanding... The bank of friendship cannot exist with deposits...

Yes, the best way to have friends is to be one. "If you see a friend slipping away from you," wrote David Grayson, "stop whatever you are doing and bring him back, for friendship is one thing you cannot afford to be without..."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Seeing the silly side of some really ridiculous situations helps give the Lamb a new perspective on how to handle them. Some important contacts can be made this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) To complete your outstanding tasks by mid-week. This leaves you free to take advantage of new possibilities — both professional and personal — opening up by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) With both your creative side and your energy levels rising this week, you should be able to tackle that too-long-neglected project again. A family member might have important news.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An explanation you requested seems to be more confusing than enlightening. You should insist on clarifications now, rather than deal with problems that might arise later.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your energy levels might be ebbing a bit. But that's no excuse for taking catnaps when you could be working on those unfinished tasks. There'll be time to curl up and relax by week's end.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to get those ideas out of your head and into a readable format if you hope to have them turned into something doable. A good friend is ready with worthwhile advice.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Careful — you might be stepping into dangerous territory if you decide to "exaggerate" the facts too much. Remember: The truth speaks for itself and needs no embellishment.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although your workplace successes have earned you many admirers, there are some colleagues who are not among them. Be careful how you proceed with your new project.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might have to go into great detail to explain why you're currently reluctant to make changes to an already prepared plan. Be sure you have all the facts to back yourself up.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Travel plans might still be uncertain. But instead of getting upset about the delay, open yourself up to other possibilities, and begin checking out some alternative destinations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Changing conditions might require you to alter some of your plans. While you might be agreeable to this, be prepared with explanations for those who do not want changes made.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Although you might have to deal with some detractors who aren't too kind in their critiques, you gain points when you're willing to stand up and defend your work.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for creating a warm and loving environment between yourself and others.

automatic light shut-off for rooms not in use.

Once all building and demolition phases are complete, the school will, also, boast a courtyard with benches, trees and grass, enhancing the campus effect of the project.

Santoro described such high-tech details as interactive whiteboards, a small greenhouse fueled by solar power, laptop computers accessible to all students, and Dolby sound systems.

"The whole building is wireless," said Santoro.

The students will "have a clicker system and the teacher will know (instantly) which students get the answers correct," Santoro said, describing the use of interactive whiteboards.

Teachers can write on the whiteboards from any spot in a classroom and students just click their answers.

Such state of the art equipment is important, but not as important as the "interdisciplinary approach to learning" or shared disciplines that the building layout will foster, said Santoro.

Santoro noted that, on all three floors, the mathematics classrooms are across the hallways from such student labs as office technology, electrical studies, physics, and chemistry. The biology classrooms are opposite the nursing program and all disciplines are integrated with like courses.

"Subjects are connected by an inter-disciplinary way of teaching," said Santoro who pointed out that even the teachers' staff rooms will be equipped for shared disciplines on each of the three floors.

That will allow teachers to prepare classes in concert with other teachers in related subjects.

For plumbing and electrical students, the skeletons of realistic mock rooms and houses are already constructed. Students will use these rooms for hands-on experience installing wiring and piping.

For culinary arts students, huge mixers and ovens, refrigerators and stoves fill the kitchens where students will prepare foods for the school's 85-seat restaurant and bakery shop.

Santoro said the restaurant will, also, have outdoor seating in the courtyard in good weather, "We're going to do some theater (in the restaurant), with singing waiters and waitresses."

That will allow the drama students additional outlets for their talents.

The new 128,000 square foot wing also features a 150-seat lecture hall which will complement a larger, 800-seat auditorium planned for Phase 3.

This wing completes the second phase of the city's $126 million high school project.

Initial planning for the new high school began nearly a dozen years ago under the Mayor James Sheets' administration and site plans and funding options were finalized under Mayor William Phelan.

The third and final phase begins in March when contractors demolish the original 40-year-old science and technology wing and construct a three-story 224,000 square foot gymnasium, auditorium and administration wing.

The 1924 yellow brick Quincy High School building will remain in place after construction is completed in 2010. At this time, there have been no public discussions regarding its reuse.

THE CULINARY ARTS CENTER at the new Science and Technology wing of Quincy High School features state of the art cooking and baking equipment.

QUINCY SUN PUBLISHER Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., died suddenly Saturday, Feb. 7 at Quincy Medical Center with family at his side. Mr. Bosworth founded the newspaper as historic Quincy's hometown weekly newspaper Sept. 26, 1968.

For more than four decades he guided the newspaper's staff in publishing the weekly paper. This photo was taken in 1995 at the paste-up table in the production room of The Quincy Sun's office at 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

A Tremendous Loss For His Family, Newspaper Staff And City

Funeral Mass Today For Quincy Sun Founder

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A funeral Mass for Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., 84, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, founder and publisher of The Quincy Sun newspaper, a beloved longtime community leader and proud World War II U.S. Navy veteran, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in Saint John the Baptist Church, School Street, Quincy Center.

Mr. Bosworth died suddenly Saturday, Feb. 7 at the Quincy Medical Center with family at his side.

He had worked a full-day at the newspaper last Friday.

He was born in Boston, raised in the Quincy Point section of Quincy and was educated in Quincy public schools. He graduated from Quincy High School, Class of 1942 and later attended Boston University Evening Division.

Mr. Bosworth lived in Braintree for 57 years, previously in Quincy.

ONE OF the highlights of Mr. Henry Bosworth Jr.'s journalism career was his "Inside South Shore" column in October, 1957 which featured Francis X., the lonely "Little Boy Blue" who had muscular dystrophy. Mr. Bosworth's column led to an outpouring of birthday gifts for Francis X. and a closed-circuit TV program put on by comedian Jerry Lewis. The program became the forerunner of the Jerry Lewis MDA Labor Day Telethon. Shown here are nurse Mrs. Shaw Reynolds who helps Francis cut his 9th birthday cake, Dr. Kurt Jelliner and Henry Bosworth.

He was a U.S. Navy veteran of World War II serving from 1942 to 1946. Most of his service was aboard the destroyer, USS Cogswell, which was commissioned in Boston in 1943. After commissioning, the Cogswell underwent shake down training off Bermuda and then she steamed through the Panama Canal and joined the Pacific Fleet where she was to participate in many of the major naval campaigns in the Asiatic Pacific Theater for the remainder of World War II.

The Cogswell was the first warship into Tokyo Bay and was present at the signing of the Japanese surrender. Mr. Bosworth received the Asiatic Pacific Ribbon with 10 stars and the Philippine Liberation Ribbon with 2 stars.

Mr. Bosworth's journalism career — which spanned more than seven decades — began his senior year at Quincy High School. He became the high school cor-

Tributes From Those Whose Lives He Touched Henry Bosworth Loved Quincy

By TOM HENSHAW
Henry Bosworth loved Quincy.

That simple fact is reflected in the many tributes that rolled in from people whose lives he touched during more than 60 years of reporting the news, the last 40 as publisher of The Quincy Sun.

His death stunned many by the suddenness of it all — hard at work Friday, gone on Saturday.

"Henry exemplified the Greatest Generation," said Mayor Tom Koch, summing up a lifetime that spanned 84 years.

"He served his country in the Navy and, when he came home, he served his family and his community for the rest of his life. The Quincy

City Council To Honor Mr. Bosworth Feb. 17

City Councillors plan to dedicate the Tuesday, Feb. 17 meeting to Henry Bosworth in honor of his longtime service to Quincy as founder and publisher of The Quincy Sun.

"Quincy has obviously suffered a great loss," City Council President Jay Davis said Monday, adding, "Henry loved his newspaper and he was a tremendous asset to Quincy."

"May the warm thoughts and prayers of a grateful city ease the loss being felt by the Bosworth family during these challenging times."

At Monday's Public Works Committee meeting, the chairman, City Councillor Joseph Finn saluted Henry Bosworth's contributions to the city and, along with fellow councillors, offered condolences to the Bosworth family.

Finn said both Quincy and Henry Bosworth's family have endured a great loss with his death, but he knows The Quincy Sun will continue to follow the great newspaper tradition established by its founder.

respondent for The Patriot Ledger and wrote schoolboy sports. He became assistant sports editor after graduating from QHS.

After serving his country in World War II, he returned to the Ledger. He was transferred to the news department and covered police, fire, court, hospital, and wrote features and a column called "Worth Mentioning."

Highlights during his career at the Ledger included heading up the coverage of the Domenic Bonomi murder trial that won the Ledger a Pulitzer Prize nomination.

Mr. Bosworth also covered many top news stories including General MacArthur's visit to Quincy and Harry Truman's whistle-stop campaign. He traveled with Adlai Stevenson aboard his Presidential campaign train.

While at the Ledger, he was the Quincy-South Shore correspondent for the Associated Press.

In 1956, he joined the Boston Traveler and covered the Brink's Robbery trial in 1956 and John F. Kennedy's presidential election in 1960.

He wrote the column "Inside South Shore." One of those columns featured Francis X., the lonely "Little Boy Blue" at the Lakeville Sanitarium with muscular dystrophy who wanted "four or six" birthday cards for his ninth birthday in October, 1957. He had few visitors but Mr. Bosworth's column attracted the attention of countless readers.

Instead of four or six cards, Francis received over a half million pieces of mail, over $12,000 in coins and dollar bills and three rooms full of toys and presents. The latter were shared with the other young patients and the money went into a trust fund for Francis.

Comedian Jerry Lewis saw the story and put on a closed circuit TV program from Hollywood to the Lakeville Hospital just for Francis on his birthday. The other young patients watched with him.

Major stars of the day, including Eddie Cantor, Dinah Shore, George Gobel, Eddie Fisher, Hugh O'Brien, the Mouseketeers and others appeared for free, each entertaining and playing to Francis with personal birthday messages.

No one realized it at the time, but this closed-circuit show for Francis turned out to be the forerunner of the Labor Day Muscular Dystrophy Telethon which has raised millions of dollars for MDA research.

Francis was remembered each year on this birthday and Christmas by many people who continued to send cards until his death at age 18.

Mr. Bosworth left the Boston Traveler in September, 1968 to start The Quincy Sun as the city's hometown weekly newspaper.

"Reaction to that first issue was encouraging," Mr. Bosworth noted in The Quincy Sun's special supplement last year celebrating the paper's 40th anniversary. "But there were skeptics who read the 'Sunrise' editorial and predicted 'Sunset' would follow within six months."

"And, there were times we thought they would prove right."

"Fortunately there were those - readers, news sources and advertisers - who believed in a community newspaper and also felt that having two newspapers in town was better than just one."

He fondly remembered the advertisers who helped the paper take root in the community during those early days.

"Advertisers like Remo and Pete DeNicola at South Shore Television, George Reardon at President Chevrolet, Bob Fitzgerald and Bob Costello at South Shore Buick and Leo Darr at Quincy Motor kept us afloat during those crucial early months."

Mr. Bosworth never forgot those who have helped the paper flourish.

With each anniversary of the paper, Mr. Bosworth would write in that week's issue expressing gratitude to "all of you - our readers, advertisers, news sources and carriers - who are as much a part of The Quincy Sun as the staff."

The newspaper's first office was located on the second floor in the old Quincy Conservatory building at 7 Foster Street. The business moved a year later to another second floor office above the Kincaide furniture store in the Mutual Building on Hancock Street, later destroyed by fire.

The newspaper's office settled into the street floor at its present location at 1372 Hancock Street in February, 1975, the former Quincy Savings Bank building.

Mr. Bosworth's mission for the newspaper at its inception remains its focus today: to chronicle the city's history and news fairly and accurately. Over the years, the paper became a family business involving several of Mr. Bosworth's children.

From $3 Million Deficit To Small Surplus

Water, Sewer Fund Back In The Black

by LAURA GRIFFIN

The water and sewer enterprise fund has moved from red to black, from a $3 million plus deficit to a small surplus in the past eight months, according to Michael Coffey, Business Manager for the Department of Public Works.

Coffey Monday outlined a major overhaul underway in the city's water and sewer operations that has trimmed costs and increased revenues in a department that was drowning in debt last year.

"This is a good news story," Coffey told the Public Works Committee as he described improved meter reading, ontime billing, improvements in seasonal client billing, and speedier collections on the city's 93,800 sewer and water bills.

Coffey forecast a "small surplus" for the water and sewer funds, but, also, warned that the regional water and sewer agency, the MWRA (Massachusetts Water Resources Authority) is very likely to impose a large rate increase in July.

On the plus side, the city's sewer and water department has already obtained $72,000 in grants and awards and may be eligible for $30 million in federal stimulus grants.

One $50,000 grant was used to develop a citywide leak detection program that pinpointed leaks responsible for 10% of unbilled water charged to the city.

"They seem to be occurring more often now," Coffey said of the leaks and noted that the city has aging pipes and underground infrastructure.

Coffey, also, said his department has tested some of the new Honeywell meters and found accuracy issues and defective registers and sent a random sampling to Honeywell.

It's important to get the test results "before we close the contract with Honeywell," Coffey said.

As for scofflaws, Coffey downplayed the numbers of offenders stealing water during questioning by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond.

Raymond wants scofflaws and water pirates referred to the legal system for charges of larceny but Coffey described water pirates as hard to catch and prosecute or even bill properly for lost payments.

Coffey said several issues have been referred to the legal department following efforts by the DPW staff to determine the proper charge for overdue claims.

In addition, Coffey said that there are no major scofflaws, such as golf courses, large apartment buildings or car washes on the department's radar at this time. Such pirates shut off or divert meters, or don't have meters.

Coffey did identify some minor debtors, such as the state's Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) at Wollaston Beach, MassHighway, several small marinas, MBTA commuter boat docks and USS Salem. Many of these operated with either dysfunctional or no water meters.

As an example, the DCR did not install water meters for the water used at its new showers and footbaths along Wollaston Beach.

The DCR owes that money and will pay the bill once the city has determined the debt, according to Coffey.

All-Day Kindergarten Registration March 3

The Quincy Public Schools will continue to offer free full-day kindergarten classes during the 2009-10 school year with registration on Tuesday, March 3, between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Youngsters who will be 5 or older on or before Aug. 31 should register at their home schools, which can be located by checking the website www.quincypublicschools.com.

www.quincypublicschools.com.

Parents seeking open enrollment need to first register at their home school that day. Children need not come to registration.

The following documents must be produced in order to register a student:

- The child's birth certificate with a raised seal.
- Proof that the child resides in the home school district --- tax bill, utility bill, copy of lease, any two of them.

- A photo ID of the adult seeking to enroll the student.

- A copy of a recent (within one year) physical examination by a physician.
- Written records of immunization.

Questions about the kindergarten program should be directed to the principal of the child's home school.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 14, 278 A.D., Valentine, a holy priest in Rome, is executed for continuing to perform marriages for young lovers in secret after Emperor Claudius the Cruel banned all marriages and engagements. Legend has it that while in jail, Valentine left a farewell note for the jailer's daughter and signed it "From Your Valentine."

• On Feb. 15, 1903, toy-store owner and inventor Morris Michtom places two stuffed bears in his shop window, advertising them as "Teddy" bears. Michtom had earlier received permission from President Theodore Roosevelt to use his nickname. Stuffed bears soon became a national childhood institution.

• On Feb. 11, 1916, Emma Goldman, a crusader for women's rights and social justice, is arrested in New York City for lecturing and distributing materials about birth control. Goldman, nicknamed "Red Emma," was later convicted and spent time in jail.

• On Feb. 12, 1924, American composer George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" is performed for the first time as part of a concert in New York City. Gershwin's other works include "An American in Paris," written in 1928 and used as a ballet for Gene Kelly in the 1951 movie of the same name.

• On Feb. 13, 1958, the first Ford Thunderbird with four seats is introduced. The four-passenger "square bird" converted the top-of-the-line Ford from a sports car to a luxury car. Thirty-eight thousand cars were initially sold, making the T-Bird one of only two American cars to increase sales between 1957 and 1958.

• On Feb. 9, 1971, pitcher Leroy "Satchel" Paige becomes the first Negro League veteran to be nominated for the Baseball Hall of Fame. He earned his nickname as a boy when he earned money carrying passengers' bags at train stations.

• On Feb. 10, 1996, after three hours, world chess champion Gary Kasparov loses the first game of a six-game match against Deep Blue, an IBM computer capable of evaluating 200 million moves per second. Kasparov was ultimately victorious, however, as he bested Deep Blue in the match with three wins and two ties and took home the $400,000 prize.

Fond Memories Of Quincy Point

Editor's Note: Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., founder and publisher of The Quincy Sun, died suddenly Saturday, Feb. 7. He had written this Sunbeams column on one of his favorite subjects – growing up in his beloved Quincy Point – last week for this week's issue.

I was in my old neighborhood in Quincy Point the other day and was quickly surrounded by fond memories of growing up there.

I know that each of you has those kinds of memories of your own.

But as I reminisced, I realized how unique the Point was.

It was an everything-you-wanted community, self-sustaining. You didn't have to go anywhere for anything. It was all right there.

You really didn't need a car if you live in the Point. You could just walk where you wanted to go.

If you wanted to go to Quincy Square, just hop on a streetcar for a dime or 15 cents.

Imagine, if you will:

Three elementary schools, the Pollard, Washington, Webster and Point Junior High School. (I can still hear Principal Henry Prairio urging us "to always give it that extra ounce") of effort.)

The Pollard and Washington were virtually in the same neighborhood. Kids could walk there and to Webster and the Point.

And at all four schools, dedicated teachers waited to help and encourage you. I remember teachers at the Pollard bringing in something extra in their lunches for kids who didn't have enough to eat.

The Point was ecumenical before most of us know what the word meant. With St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Quincy Point Congregational just up the street from one another and Beth Israel Synagogue a short distance away. Members of all three became friends.

That was when Point Congregational was located at Washington and South Streets before Rev. Bedros Baharian loaded it on trailer and moved it intact to its present location at Washington Street and Southern Artery. Quite a feat at the time.

Residents felt safe with the Fire Department's Engine 3 right there in the neighborhood fire station. And with a patrolman walking his beat. Residents didn't have to lock the door every time they stepped out of the house.

Need groceries? How about the A & P and the First National Store, the forerunners of today's supermarkets across Washington Street from one another at Chubbuck Street.

Prescriptions? Stone's drugstore on one corner and for home maintenance Primer's hardware store on the other. There were two other drugstores nearby.

Feel like a good book or doing some research? A handy branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library next to St. Joseph's.

Clothing? A women's store (Zack's) and a men's store (Stone's). Also a Chinese laundry. Three barbershops (15-25 cents).

For entertainment, the Lincoln Theater was the Point's social center, where a family could see a movie together without parents having to worry what might pop on the screen that kids shouldn't see. (A dime, 15, 25 cents.)

And where women loved to collect their din-

THE POLLARD ELEMENTARY School – known for its dedicated teachers – always brought back fond memories.

THE LINCOLN THEATER was Quincy Point's social center and a favorite entertainment venue for local families.

nerware sets, a cup, saucer, plate, bowl once a week until it was completed. And looked forward to the crystal set coming up.

And on Money Nights with a lucky admission ticket you could win up to $10, a pretty nice prize back then. Or risk the old Quincy Point razz all the way back to your seat if you had first crack at the $10 and picked the $1.

At the Saturday matinee kids got a serial, a western, comedy, and a B movie and could win a baseball bat and ball or a glove.

If you wanted to bowl a string, the alleys were right downstairs.

In the summer there was Avalon Beach with its rafts and clean water waiting for you.

The Fore River shipyard, the economic backbone of the Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth area.

And if your father worked there you got a chance to see some of the great Navy warships launched, the thrill of seeing them slide down ways and hit the water. Some of the kids grew up to serve on some of them during World War II.

And most importantly the Point was Quincy's great "melting pot" with bounding diversity. Where many families of different nationalities and religions settled: Italian, Jewish, Irish, Scottish, Syrian, Lebanese, Arab, etc.

You respected one another and had no trouble getting along.

Not much money around back then with FDR trying to pull us out of the Great Depression. But strong, lasting friendships, and togetherness helped make things better.

If you happened to have a problem with someone, it had nothing to do with his ethnic background. It was with that particular individual.

I feel fortunate to have my roots in Quincy Point. It was a wonderful experience growing up there.

I guess there's a lot to that old saying:

"You can take the boy out of Quincy Point but you can't take Quincy Point out of the boy."

I know there is still a lot of the Point in me.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1952 real photo postcard showing one of the last New Haven Railroad passenger trains pulled by an ALCO diesel locomotive. Headed to Boston the train is arriving at the Victorian styled Wollaston depot. Originally called the Wollaston Heights depot, it was built in 1870 by the Old Colony railroad, which began running trains through Quincy in 1945. For over 100 years steam engines powered the trains along here. After World War II, commuters started using automobiles and train ridership began to dwindle. The New Haven then switched to the type of locomotives shown here, but it was only for a few years and they then converted the line to Budd Rail

Diesel Cars. The shiny new stainless-steel self-propelled Budd cars seemed to breath new life into the Old Colony and ridership picked up. But the inevitable happened when the New Haven discontinued its Old Colony passenger service in June 1959. Today, the MBTA provides rail service to Wollaston with its rapid transit Red Line that opened in 1971. The new Old Colony commuter trains also travel through here but they don't stop at Wollaston. READERS FORUM

Thank You From Quincy Animal Shelter

This past holiday season was made much sweeter by the donations that were made by the generous readers of The Quincy Sun to the Quincy Animal Shelter.

Late last year an article was printed by The Sun detailing our desperate need for funding to enable us to continue providing the care we give to the homeless dogs and cats that come through our door on their way to their forever home.

The response to our need was overwhelming. Not only did we receive monetary donations we also received food, litter, treats, linens, etc. In one instance we received donations raised by the Quincy High School students delivered to us in a small pick up truck.

The year 2008 saw the Shelter struggle to keep up with costly medical bills and increased supply costs much like the households all over the country. We do not receive any funding from the City of Quincy to the surprise of many people so all of our expenses are paid strictly by donations, fundraising and gifts. Our expenses run over 100K annually so our fundraising task was lightened as a result of the donations we received. The holidays are always a time for remembering others through acts of kindness and giving and last year was no exception.

On behalf of the volunteers and for those without voices, thank you all for your thoughtfulness and the kindness shown towards the Quincy Animal Shelter.

A 'Thank You' For Your Help

For the Christmas party at the Moorings we would like to thank Senator Michael Morrissey for his attendance and his generous donation of a gift basket.

Also, Rep. Bruce Ayers, who joined us for dinner and Councillor Brian McNamee who was a great help in calling the raffle. Last but not least out special friend Rob Sokoloff from the River Bay Club who so kindly loaned us extra chairs and brought a great treat for all the tables.

Everyone had a great time.

Relies On The Sun For Local News

Thank God for the Quincy Sun. If I had to rely on the regional rag for local news I'm afraid I would have an inaccurate and slanted view of things in my hometown.

Laura Griffin's article on the independent audit performed by Powers and Sullivan however, displays the journalistic qualities of a true professional.

Unlike the monotonous scribble published from la-la Land, Laura Griffin's work is emblematic of a true newspaper of record. Clean, clear and unbiased, Ms. Griffin's work portrays the simple facts and leaves interpretation to the reader.

Municipal Parking Area A Downtown Welcome

By FRANK McCAULEY

Quincy's Municipal Parking area has been completed and in use for only a few short months now but it's success has been so apparent that already a movement has been started to develop a somewhat similar parking lot on the east side of Hancock Street.

This Week
1950
59 Years Ago

Former Mayor Charles A. Ross advocated such a development when he dedicated the present parking lot. Last week Councillor Amelio Della Chiesa announced he is introducing in the council a public hearing order for a parking area east of Hancock St. between Revere Rd., Cottage Ave and Cottage St.

The present parking area forms only about one-half of the goal advocated by Quincy Merchants and the Quincy Patriot Ledger.

The parking area was built in the early 1950's and became known as the Hancock Parking Area.

QUINCY MEN LEAVE FOR WASHINGTON TO AID SHIPBUILDING

A delegation from the Quincy Committee for the Advancement of the American Merchant Marine left for Washington to urge passage of ship subsidy legislation at this session of Congress.

Leading the group was George Daley, Jr., chairman, and president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. Alexander Purdon, Chamber executive vice-president, along with officials of the shipyard's labor unions.

The delegation will ask for a long-range subsidy bill in hearings before the Sub-Committee on Merchant Marine and Maritime Matters.

Don's Cabbage Casserole

I got a telephone call one day from a faithful reader, Don McMullen who said he enjoys cooking and began to tell me about some recipes that are easy to prepare.

So I told him to mail them to me and then I would print the easy ones as those are the recipes my readers are accustomed to reading.

Here is a great casserole recipe.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

CABBAGE CASSEROLE

- 1 large head of cabbage (shredded)
- 2 pounds ground beef (turkey could be used)

1 large onion

1 cup uncooked rice

- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1 can tomato soup (diluted with 1 can water)
- 3 tablespoons oil for sautéing (either vegetable or olive)

In hot oil, sauté the onions, salt and pepper and cook until meat is no longer red. Add the uncooked rice and mix until well blended.

In a lightly greased casserole dish, spread the shredded cabbage in the bottom. Now spread the meat mixture over the cabbage.

Add the tomato soup mix over the top. Cover and bake in a 350 degree oven for 1 1/2 hours.

Broad Meadows PTO Comedy Show

Broad Meadows Middle School PTO will host a Comedy Show Friday, Feb. 27 from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy.

Dunham has headlined clubs all over the northeast for more than 20 years.

Hurley was first runner-up in the "Nick At Nite" search for America's Funniest Mom contest in 2005.

Lauletta's national television credits include HBO's U.S. Comedy Arts Festival's

Best of the Fest, NBC, Comedy Central and Comcast's Comedy Spotlight.

The event will also feature a Chinese buffet dinner from Imperial Terrace, cash bar, silent auction and prize drawings.

Auction and drawing donations are being accepted.

Tickets are $20 per person. Tables of 10 are available for $200.

For more information, call Broad Meadows at 617-984-9723.

Erica Berg Participates In Obama Inauguration

Army National Guard Sgt. Erica L. Berg participated in the 56th Presidential Inauguration Jan. 20 as part of the largest ever contingent of National Guard members to serve in Washington, D.C.

More than 7,000 Army and Air National Guard members from 31 states and territories provided the 2009 Presidential Inauguration and military working dogs, consequence management planning, and ceremonial, logistics, and medical support through the Armed Forces Inaugural Committee. National Guard members also assisted local authorities with crowd management, traffic control, and emergency services operations.

Berg, a petroleum supply specialist, is a member of the 228th Brigade Support Battalion, Lock Haven, Pa. She has more than three years in military service.

She is the daughter of Stacy L. Berg Preskenis of Anita Road, Brockton, and niece of Sharon L. Berg of Palmer St., Quincy.

The guardsmen graduated in 2006 from Quincy High School.

Completes Mitten Tree Project

The Atherton Hough School kindergarten classes of Nancy Brennan, Colleen Carlson, Danielle LaRose, and school secretary Jeanne DeBoer, recently completed their annual Community Service project called Mitten Tree.

The kindergarten classes coordinated the donation of 170 hats, mittens, gloves and scarves which the children hung on their tree, their Mitten Tree.

Each year these items are given to Isabel Ventre, coordinator of the Quincy Public School's Homeless Education, who makes sure that the children in Quincy receive the warm hats and mittens.

Quincy Symphony Orchestra Concert At NQHS Sunday

Guests soloists from the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with the Quincy Symphony Orchestra in concert on Sunday afternoon Feb. 15 at 2:30 p.m. at North Quincy High School.

The Brahms Double Concerto, featuring BSO first violinist Lucia Lin and BSO cellist Owen Young will be played under the baton of maestro Yoichi Udagawa.

The concert will be performed less than one mile outside of Boston, and will offer concert-goers an intimate and enjoyable symphonic experience with the convenience of free parking and less the burden of expensive ticket prices. The high, amphitheater-style Performing Arts Center in North Quincy, Massachusetts provides the full sound of the orchestra and each instrument to reach the audience's ears unabated.

The opening and concluding works performed by the QSO, are the Mozart Don Giovanni Overture and Stravinsky's Firebird Suite.

Tickets are $17 for adults, $12 for seniors and students, and $5 for children under 12 (which must be accompanied by a parent), and may be purchased at the door. In the event of inclement weather, the concert will be performed at the same location on the following Tuesday evening, Feb. 17, at 8 p.m.

The orchestra's subsequent concert will be on Sunday, April 5, where the winner of the Quincy Symphony's annual youth concerto competition, Kadar Qian, will play the Chopin Piano Concerto #2. The April concert will close with Beethoven's 7th Symphony.

Dr. John Cooney Elected President Of QMC Medical Staff

The medical staff of Quincy Medical Center (QMC) has elected John Cooney, MD, PhD of Medfield as its new president.

Other new officers elected are:

Thomas Fitzgerald, MD, of Braintree, vice president; and William Brandon, MD, MPH, of Dorchester, secretary.

tary/treasurer.

The new officers will serve a two-year term.

Cooney is the hospital's chief of Pathology. Fitzgerald is a surgeon with Quincy Surgical Associates, and Brandon is QMC's chief of Family Medicine and chief Medical Officer at Manet Community Health Center.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital, providing the highest quality, most personalized and comprehensive medical and surgical services to patients throughout the South Shore. A private, nonprofit hospital, QMC has served the needs of its diverse patient population since 1890.

Friends Of Wollaston Beach Annual Meeting/Awards Night Feb. 26

The Friends of Wollaston Beach will hold their annual meeting and awards night at the Beechwood Knoll School on Thursday, Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. The night will include highlights from 2008 events celebrating the first 100 years of Wollaston Beach, several annual awards including "Friend of the Year" and "Honorary Friend," a pictorial review of FWB events for 2007 and 2008, and a final 100 Year Celebration presentation by Quincy historian Tom Galvin.

The night will close with a preview of 2009 events marking the second 100 years of Wollaston Beach. Come see who will join Galvin, former Mayor Frank McCauley and Councillor Leo Kelly as an FWB Honorary Friend. Who will be the WB Friend of the Year?

The event is open to the public and new members are welcome. Doors to the Beechwood Knoll School gym will open at 6:45 p.m. and light refreshments will be served. Call 617-872-4213 for more information.

Water, Sewer Fund Back In The Black

In another example, Coffey and Brian Carlisle, Superintendent of the Sewer and Water Department, described efforts to check out a laundromat. On their visit, they were told to come back another day. They did and found a brand new water meter in pieces.

"One of the new meters fell apart. They don't just fall apart," said Carlisle while Coffey added that it "looked like there was tampering going on."

Coffey is supporting a proposed ordinance dealing specifically with unauthorized water use, meter tampering and meter disconnections.

In his presentation, Coffey reported the city has identified 15% of the MWRA differential or what could be called unidentified water charged to the city, but not allocated to any specific user or ratepayer. This is water that the MWRA bills for, but the city can not identify.

Some unidentified and unbilled water resulted from undetected, inflow and infiltration, water main leaks, breaks and billing issues as well as the previously unreported water use in the city's 75 buildings which are now reviewed each month.

Just six months ago, the water and sewer enterprise funds required a multi-million dollar bailout from the city's reserve funds after the state declared that a good chunk of its $8 million in indirect charges to other city departments were ineligible.

In addition, the water and sewer enterprise fund sunk into deficits that had to be funded by increased rates for water and sewer customers.

Collections were so low that City Council President Jay Davis suggested shutting the water off on laggard billpayers and Councillor John Keenan said of the two enterprise funds, "The only fact that's clear is that it's a mess."

Morrisette Post 80th Memorial Mass At St. Mary's Church Monday

The Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post will hold its 80th annual Memorial Mass Monday at 10 a.m. in St. Mary's Church, Crescent St., West Quincy.

Fr. Manna will celebrate the Mass.

Past Commander Henry Bradley will read the roll call of those members' deceased in the past year. Tom Stansbury is Chief Marshal.

Congregants will pray for all uniformed men and women who are deployed overseas, particularly those in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Honored guests will be the families of the deceased veterans. They will be given the list of names at the conclusion of the ceremony.

Historian Dan Egan urges all post members, veterans, and the public to attend this special ceremony in honor of deceased veterans.

Commander Fred White, who will read the "Prayer for Peace," and the Post, welcomes new veterans and their families to join the American Legion.

Slide Show At Blue Hill, Quarry Museum Feb. 16

David P. Hodgdon, founder and executive director of the Blue Hill Adventure & Quarry Museum, recently participated in the World Cup Combined Nordic events at Whistler Olympic Park in British Columbia, Canada.

Hodgdon was part of the 12-member team of international Nordic Ski patrol, and the only person from Massachusetts and just one of two from the United States to take part.

The World Cup '09 games are a precursor to the Vancouver Winter Olympics in 2010.

Hodgdon and the Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum, located in Presidents Place in Quincy Center, will host a talk and slide show presentation on Feb. 16 from 7 to 8 p.m. in the basement conference room.

Asks Inspector General For Opinion On Independence

Raymondi Seeks State's Help On College Issue

Quincy College's bid for independence may hit a state roadblock, according to Ward 2 Daniel Raymondi who this week asked Inspector General Gregory Sullivan for an opinion on the issue.

Raymondi notified Sullivan by faxed letter Tuesday of the college's request for independence from city ownership to a private institution operated by a new corporation.

"This transfer would take place without the benefit of a public bid process to determine the fair market value of the College and the fitness and appropriateness of the named party to receive the valuable public assets of Quincy College," wrote Raymondi.

In discussing the letter, Raymondi said that state law requires that a publicly owned asset be appraised and disposed of through a public bid process.

"You can't just gift away a public asset without a process to determine its value," said Raymondi, adding, "It's outrageous."

Raymondi said the city should not act hastily, particularly in these difficult economic times and, in his letter, said he wanted to protect the interests of taxpayers.

Quincy College's initial bid for independence was presented to City Council on Feb. 9.

DAN RAYMONDI

A report of that meeting follows:

Quincy College is thriving, has a multi-million dollar capitol fund, and has long been eager to break free of its ties with the city.

College officials believe the time is now; in fact, some believe the time was yesterday.

In an effort to make a clean break, College President M. Sue Harris recently prepared a Home Rule Petition for state legislative approval and submitted it to City Councilors for review prior to Monday's meeting.

Mayor Thomas Koch, officially, sponsored the Quincy College petition for independence when it was presented to City Council this week.

The college must win the approval of both the mayor and the City Council in order for the issue to be considered by the state legislature.

But the issue never got to the City Council floor.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi objected. His objection tables all action and discussion of the matter until another council meeting when the proposal must be resubmitted.

Raymondi believes the city should not act in haste, stating that such a break demands rigid scrutiny and the city's taxpayers should be compensated.

Residents invested considerable money through real estate taxes in Quincy College when it was struggling in its early years, according to Raymondi who served on the college's first Board of Overseers.

The college was founded in 1958 and subsidized by taxpayers until 1981 when it first became self-sufficient. While taxpayers have not paid any debts of the college in the intervening years, Raymondi believes the original investment cost taxpayers.

"The taxpayers are getting short-changed," said Raymondi after Monday's meeting. He, also, stated that the college's employees would remain public employees in the city's health care and pension plans despite any official break and

For Development Of Wholesale Club

B.J.'s Team, Mayor Seeking Common Ground

By LAURA GRIFFIN
City Solicitor James Timmins said Tuesday that Mayor Thomas Koch and the BJ's team are meeting this week in an effort to reach common ground on the development of a BJ's Wholesale Club at Crown Colony.

Discussions between the developers and the mayor began less than 24 hours after Timmins filed a civil suit in Dedham Superior Court challenging the BJ's legal claim of a "constructive grant."

"The lawsuit is the city's attempt to retain control over the development of The Patriot Ledger site," Timmins said. "We're not trying to prevent a BJ's. We're merely trying to control the impacts of the project."

QBJ Land Development, LLC, is the official title of the developer for the company. Their legal team notified the city on Jan. 20 that BJ's was claiming an automatic special permit to build its facility due to default on the part of the city council.

QBJ's lawyers, Lisa Goodheart and C. Dylan Sanders of Sugarman, Rogers, Barshak, & Cohen, claimed the City Council failed to schedule a public hearing in a timely manner and, therefore, the Special Permit was automatically granted.

Under such circumstances, the city would have no leverage on traffic issues, mitigation agreements, building size, or any issue related to neighborhood concerns so long as the building met legal codes.

"We are working with QBJ to resolve this case," Timmins said. "This keeps the city on equal footing with the developer which is where we want to be."

Back in August, the BJ's team announced plans for an 84,000 square foot outlet at 200 Crown Colony Drive, the site of the former Ledger printing plant. They had hoped to break ground in November.

However, the Planning

Board rejected their original plans by a 2-2 vote and the City Council, by a 6-3 vote on Jan. 20, refused to schedule a public hearing. Timmins informed them of the claim of a "constructive grant."

After a lengthy debate, the City Council reaffirmed their original veto of the public hearing with a tie of 4-4 on Feb. 2.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly had asked for the new vote, stating they should offer an olive branch to BJ's team. President Jay Davis, Ward 4, and Councillors Brian McNamee, Ward 6, and Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, supported Kelly's motion.

Councillors John Keenan, Joseph Finn, Michael McFarland and Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2 opposed the motion.

The swing vote, Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro couldn't vote because he was at President Obama's inauguration during the original debate

"He was honest, fair and always focused on the best interest of the city. His contributions cannot be overstated, especially the work he did quietly --- without headlines --- on behalf of those in our community in need of assistance for many, many years.

"Henry always remained true to the spirit of his 'community newspaper.' Who in our city does not have a memory of cutting out a photo clipping from The Sun as a youngster and hanging it on the family fridge?

"The industry has changed much since The Sun was first printed, but Henry never wavered, giving as much coverage to community events and good deeds than the latest wrangling in City Hall. We are a better city for it.

"Quincy has lost a giant and we will all miss him. But his legacy of good works and dedication to Quincy will always be remembered. We have been blessed to have had him for so long."

Congressman Bill Delahunt put aside his concerns for the precarious national economy to call him "always Mr. Quincy to me."

"Community is a term that is sometimes vague," he said, "but when you see it defined in a dictionary it has a picture of Henry along with it. To me he is what community is all about.

"He has left a real void when I think of leaders. He wasn't in elective office but he was a leader just the same. I will miss him. The city is diminished by his loss."

Tim Cahill, the Quincy boy who won statewide office as treasurer, called him "the conscience of Quincy. Always reminding us of its history and its importance in the world."

"I will miss Henry," he said. "It didn't matter who you were or what you did, Henry would always make space for you in his weekly.

"He had an unpretentious way about him. Whether he was interviewing presidents (Kennedy, Carter) or simply ordering coffee (black, two sugars) he treated everyone equally.

"The Sun will shine less brightly in Quincy now that Henry Bosworth is no longer here to write about it."

On the business side, Henry worked with Mark Bertman of Rogers Jewelry and the late Bob Colman of sporting goods fame to found the Quincy Business Association 35 years ago. He was one of its first directors.

"It's such a big loss," said Bertman. "I go back a long way with Henry, to so many things that were meaningful to the city.

"I don't think words can convey the incredible impact Henry had on so many lives. He was one of a kind. I don't think there is any equal to Henry Bosworth, in one word, stellar."

Five former mayors, often at odds with each other on the hustings, were united in their respect for the man who reported their campaigns, fair and balanced.

Walter Hannon --- "He was honest and always fair. He wrote a good story but he was fair. If he thought I was wrong he told me so. He ran a great newspaper. He was a very decent man. That's how I remember him."

Arthur Tobin --- "He was a wonderful, human being. I first met him when we came back from the service along with Jim McIntyre and John Gillis. My impression of him was that he was a young man in love with his city. It is a tremendous

FOOT NOTES

 Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
 Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

POSTSURGERY PRECAUTIONS

Taking precautions after foot surgery is critical to proper healing. First, find out if you should be walking and for how long. If indicated, wear a surgical shoe and use a cane, walker, or other means of assistance. For the first couple of days, apply ice to the area to reduce bruising and swelling. When seated, maintain the foot at an elevated position level to your chest. Avoid extended elevation, which can impede the blood flow to your foot. Bandages should be removed. When showering, wrap the foot in plastic and tape it to keep the bandages dry. If the foot, ankle, or calf area becomes numb or turns blue, or if you experience a fever, contact your doctor. We sincerely hope you are not suffering with painful, nagging foot problems because you think treatment might involve surgery. Many foot surgeries are now performed right in the podiatrist's office, and today's advanced, conservative techniques can save you discomfort, recovery time, and cost. If this sounds like something that might encourage you to seek professional care for your aching feet, please give us a call to see how our services can benefit you. We're located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. You can reach us at 781-986-3668 for an appointment. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. P.S. The vast majority of foot and ankle conditions do not require surgical intervention.

loss to the city. He was a tremendous newspaperman."

Frank McCauley --- "I was sorry to hear of the passing of Henry Bosworth. I first met Henry a half century ago during my first campaign for the City Council. He was a reporter for the Boston Traveler writing a column 'Inside South Shore.' He established The Sun 40 years ago. The paper filled the need for Quincy news."

Jim Sheets --- "As a journalist he was the finest. He was always fair, always considered people's feelings. He was a special human being. He had a profound impact on the city of Quincy."

Bill Phelan --- "When I think of The Quincy Sun from the time I was a little boy it just epitomizes the city of Quincy and it came from Henry Bosworth's sense of community."

"As an elected official, a young and sometimes aggressive newcomer, Henry treated me always with respect. He treated everyone with courtesy and respect. There was no malice in his paper."

"He'd come to City Hall and talk to everyone for news as he delivered papers. Everybody loved him. He will be missed. The city of Quincy has lost an institution. Fortunately, The Quincy Sun will continue with Bob and Donna."

Mike Morrissey, the Democratic senator from Quincy, and Bob Hedlund, the Republican senator from Weymouth, shared similar feelings for their longtime

"The Sun is the only paper in the city with local news and it is because of Henry Bosworth," said Morrissey. "It was true when he started out and it is true today."

"He has been helpful over the years to many organizations. The Muscular Dystrophy Association comes to mind. We froze our butts off for the Salvation Army when Henry called."

"He had great skills as a reporter. The only way to find out what was going on locally was to read The Sun."

"It's very sad," said Hedlund. "As one who was born, grew up and had a business in Quincy, it's hard to lose an institution with the civic spirit Henry brought to Quincy. His grandson, Fred Happel, was my first intern at the State House."

George Burke, the former city councillor, state rep. and district attorney, was the lawyer who handled incorporation papers for Henry.

"He was one of my best friends," he said. "I loved him dearly."

"He was a superb editor. He did a great job as a father, husband and editor. I was in the hospital when he died... My wife was in an adjoining room with pneumonia. God must have wanted me to be there."

Others added their words of tribute:

Mike Bellotti, sheriff of Norfolk County --- "Quincy has so many characteristics of a small town despite its size because that is how Henry saw us and wrote about us. He is the primary reason we are so tight knit and such a strong community. He is an integral part of who we are whose loss is greatest for this city. This humble family man will leave a void that we must endeavor to fill in his name and honor."

His father, Frank Bellotti, the former attorney general and lieutenant governor --- "I started with Henry. When I announced for lieutenant governor in 1962 I gave it to him first. He was an important part of the community. I remained close to him all those years."

Father William McCarthy, the former pastor of St. John's Church and founder of Father Bill's Place for the Homeless --- "What an asset! He is going to be missed by a lot of people. He was very dedicated to his job, an asset to the city. He was interested in Father Bill's from the beginning and he was right there to help us any time."

John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Mainspring --- "Henry was a standout individual who believed in his community and believed in our mission at Father Bill's and we were so lucky to have him."

Jack Conway, the real estate magnate, once a rival of Henry with the Boston Record American Sunday Advertiser --- "We used to cover the same assignments. He was a capable sports reporter. We honored Henry at the Conway Country Convention for running the best weekly newspaper in the area... so much news, great pictures and good comment, all well edited. He got a big kick out of the award because we had worked together."

Dr. Gary Gibbons, president and CEO of Quincy Medical Center --- "Henry was an amazing man, a World War II veteran, a great community advocate, a successful businessman and an all-around gentleman. He had a newsmen's instincts and pushed to get the right story but was always a good friend and supporter of Quincy Medical Center because he recognized its importance to our city. Henry will be missed."

Major Doug Jones, commander of the Salvation Army in Quincy --- "In the passing of Henry Bosworth the community has lost an incredible pillar. The Salvation Army has lost a great friend and tremendous supporter. I will miss his words of wisdom and guidance. We pray that God will bless and comfort his family at this time."

Peter O'Connell, developer --- "Henry's style of fair and friendly type of journalism will be missed. He has been a positive influence on good things here in Quincy. I will miss him personally and professionally."

Steve Tobin, state rep. from Quincy --- "First of all, I never met a man more concerned with his fellow human beings, especially those who are disadvantaged. Second of all, he had a lock on the community leader and citizen we all aspire to be. Lastly, personally I'm going to miss him very much. My heart goes out to his family and The Quincy Sun family."

Edward Keohane, president of the Quincy Partnership --- "Henry was passionate about Quincy and provided a fair voice to all of its citizens. In changing times for newspapers, The Quincy Sun was able to thrive because people crave local news. He reported and was very supportive in bringing attention to all of the Partnership's events. Quincy is a big city which retained a small town heart because of Henry."

Ron Mariano, state rep. from Quincy --- "I grew up with The Quincy Sun. I was in high school or junior high school when I first saw my name in print. It was in The Quincy Sun. Henry was always a gentleman. He treated everyone fairly. I really enjoyed him. It was a sad day."

Sharron Beals, former executive director of Beechwood on the Bay --- "As a professional, Henry lived and worked upholding the highest level of professional and personal principles. He leaves a journalism legacy that no one could criticize for those same strong personal and professional values left no room for bad judgement."

Mr. Koch and Mr. Bosworth served together as co-chairmen of the Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon Committee for many years and the Sun office was the local pledge center. The committee and pledge center raised more than $1 million for MDA.

Sun Founder Henry Bosworth: He Loved Quincy

Bruce Ayers, state rep. from Quincy --- "Henry was a quiet giant with a lot of friendly persuasion which he selflessly used to help, others. Through love and passion for the city, his stories in The Quincy Sun reflected the pride and history of the city of Quincy. Having worked with Henry over the years, I always admired his fairness and sound judgement. His passing is a tremendous loss for the city of Quincy. I will always remember him with fondness."

John Gillis, former city clerk and current Norfolk County commissioner --- "I've known Henry for some 70 years. He was a true Quincy Pointer even though he lived in Braintree. He was a remarkable individual. He started in journalism in junior high school as the star writer with the Pointer, the school newspaper. He was honest, reliable and always did his best for the city of Quincy. My prayers go out to his family."

Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000

Collaborative --- "There is not question what Henry has brought and done for the city. It can't be put into words he has meant to the community. I have always had a great deal of respect and admiration for him as a person and as a hard-working dedicated businessman in the city for so long."

Mark Carey, executive director of Discover Quincy --- "Henry was a treasure. He knew more about this city than anyone. We lost a wealth of information. I learned so much. My last meeting with Henry turned into an hour and a half and I learned so much."

Rev. John Swanson, pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Wollaston --- "He was 'Mr. Quincy,' more than Mr. Quincy, a personal friend, a mentor. It goes without saying he was always interested in the community, its present and its future. And the paper, an excellent, excellent paper. I really believe this is the best city in the country and he believed that, too, and put out an excellent paper. I was probably his worst paper boy on Saturdays and I didn't pay my bill on time and he'd tell me I'd land in jail."

David MacIntosh, son of former Plan E Mayor David "Tuck" McIntosh --- "He was a square shooter, always for the little guy, very compassionate, very ethical, self-effacing and generous. We go a long way back. He was sui generis (one of a kind)."

Dan Raymondi, city councillor from Ward 2 --- "Henry was the consummate professional journalist who cared deeply on getting the story but first getting it right with sensitivity. What came through was his love of the city, particularly Quincy Point where he grew up. I don't know anyone who had an unkind word for him. He will be sorely missed."

Jack Powers, former advertising director of The Sun from Houghs Neck --- "I worked for Henry for six or seven years in the late '70s. He was one of the few who understood all aspects of the newspaper business. With most it was news or business, never both."

"I remember when we moved from the office over Kincaides to the present storefront location standing with Henry across the street when they installed the big sign on the front of the building. He couldn't take his eyes off it. 'I made it,' he said. That was all. To some it would have been small. To Henry, it was big."

Jay Davis, president of the City Council --- "The city has obviously suffered a great loss. Henry loved his newspaper and he was a tremendous asset to Quincy. May the warm thoughts and prayers of a grateful city ease the loss being felt by the Bosworth family during these challenging times."

MaraLinn Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Association --- "For me, Henry gave true meaning to the word friendship. He was truly a 'gentle' man who I have been very fortunate to have called 'my friend.'"

Don Uvanitte, senior vice president of Eastern Insurance Group --- "The city of Quincy and the business community suffered a loss. He was such a supporter of Quincy and supporter of the business community. He was always the consummate professional, always fair. Most of all, I'll miss his friendship."

Dave McCarthy, vice chairman of the School Committee --- "I was stunned. He'll be sorely missed. He was an icon and a legend in the city of Quincy, a wonderful, wonderful guy who was the foundation of great journalism in the city, very open and very accommodating to all of us. Just a straight forward guy, his mission was accomplished in Quincy."

Trish Bossart, former Quincy Sun photographer, currently employed in the City Clerk's office --- "When I think of Henry, I think of a true gentleman with a kind and gentle nature. His fairness and distinctive insight is what made him a true Quincy legend and an unbeatable journalist. His fondness for the young and the young at heart was unparalleled. If it happened in Quincy, Henry was covering it. As a former member of his staff for 13 years, I am so proud to have been part of Henry's Quincy Sun staff."

Jim Timmins, city solicitor -- "Although the print media business has changed dramatically over the years resulting in the demise of many newspapers, The Quincy Sun continued to flourish by following the lead of its publisher, who was always honest, direct and unbiased. Henry was a gentleman and a class act and will be missed both as a newsman and a man by those of us who knew him."

Joe Catalano, former news and program director for WJDA and current host of AM Quincy on Quincy Access TV -- "The journalism profession has lost a dedicated member of the fourth estate. Henry epitomized the essence of the truth in reporting while at the same time remaining dedicated to the community and its people. He always had time to hear a story and always made you feel as if your story was the most important in his day. Henry perfected the art of reporting the news without becoming it. He will be missed."

Barry Welch, director of recreation -- "You always knew with Henry in charge that the reporting of youth athletics would always be positive. No one ever struck out, he usually made a great play in the outfield. He knew what was important and always found room for that. The community suffered an irreplaceable loss."

Bob Fitzgerald of South Shore Buick -- "He's irreplaceable, an integral part of the Quincy community. It's hard to imagine Quincy being the same without him. In fact, it won't be."

Leo Kelly, Ward 1 councillor -- "He was always my friend. He never hurt anybody and he never would. He was fair to everybody. He never wrote a story that would degrade anyone. He will be sorely missed. There will never be another."

Kim Trillecott, city purchasing department -- "It comes with great sadness -- the passing of one of the nicest men I have ever met. I feel it an honor to have got to know him over the past 14 years that I have worked for the city of Quincy."

Dr. Allan Yacubian, Quincy dentist and the original 'Yakoo' -- "He has been such an asset to the city of Quincy. That newspaper of his is a wonderful thing. He gave the news. He didn't taint it. He gave you what was going on. He was like a treasure that we had."

Russell Dupuis, long-time friend and World War II veteran -- "There'll never be another one like him, always ready to help and listen to everybody."

Frank Santoro, Quincy High School principal -- "I have had the pleasure of knowing Henry since my days on the School Committee. He has had nothing but the best for the school in mind."

QUINCY SUN PUBLISHER Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. and Sun Editor Robert Bosworth are presented a Community Partnership Award from Jackie Gardner of the Red Cross in 2004 for the newspaper's commitment and support to the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay.

Historic Survey, Planning Grant For Quincy Center

Consultants for the Quincy Center of Planning and Community Development have recently completed Phase II of a four phase Historic Survey and Planning Grant awarded to the City in May 2008 by the Massachusetts Historical Commission.

An intensive community-wide survey was undertaken in 1986, with subsequent updates at least up to 1992. However, this is the first update of the historic properties survey for the Quincy Center area since the 1986 communitywide survey, 23 years ago.

The firm of Gray & Pape, Inc., of Providence, Rhode Island, specialists in History and Historic Preservation, began the survey work in September 2008. Their report will consider cultural resources from the initial European presence up to about 1960 for about 80 buildings in the Quincy Center Zoning District.

A team, lead by Nick Avery, Senior Principal Investigator in Architecture and Landscape History for Gray & Pape, is conducting the survey according to the Massachusetts Historical Commission's analytical framework for cultural resources relating to the historical evolution of cities and towns within the Commonwealth.

The survey will identify buildings and structures that are architecturally and historically significant in the history and development of the Quincy Center Zoning Districts. The survey will include both representative and outstanding examples of the building forms, types, and styles present within the district. The final report should be completed by June 2009.

"We have enjoyed working with the City of Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development and the Massachusetts Historical Commission on this project. Quincy Center has a rich mixture of commercial and residential buildings representing its long history from its founding up until the present," said Nick Avery of Gray & Pape. "We have been fortunate to have the help of the staffs of the Quincy Planning Department, as well as the Historical Society and the Crane Library in finding old views of the Center, but we are sure that many of Quincy's residents have collections that are yet untapped. We would welcome any and all views of buildings and street scenes from within the City Center District."

The Survey Final Report will include: an abstract, methodology statement, street index, a discussion of the themes and contexts used to define National Register eligible districts and areas, as well as a GIS base map showing the location of all inventories resources.

The activity that is the subject of this press release has been financed in part with Federal funds from the National Park Service, U.S. Department of the Interior, through the Massachusetts Historical Commission, Secretary of the Commonwealth William Francis Galvin, Chairman. However, the contents and opinions do not necessarily reflect the views or policies of the Department of Interior, or the Massachusetts Historical Commission.

Raymondi Seeks State's Help On College Issue

spite any official break and that is a major concern.

Raymondi believes the college has a capital fund "in excess of $10 million" and said his primary concern is that the city benefits from its longtime investment in Quincy College.

Community colleges are booming now and Raymondi questions how to estimate the value of "Quincy" in the college's name, and the value of the institution.

"We are in the most serious economic crisis since the depression," said Raymondi, adding it is in the city's interest to properly evaluate the college before approving the severance.

Paul Phillips, head of the Quincy Education Association (QEA), held a different viewpoint from Raymondi.

"This is a win-win for all," Phillips said. The Quincy College faculty, as members of the QEA, is protected through Phillips' union which has negotiated their contracts to date.

Quincy College celebrated its 50th anniversary in 2008, marking it beginnings as a one-year institution called Quincy Junior College.

In recent years, the college's accrediting agency, the New England Association of Schools and Colleges, has recommended that the college sever its ties with the city.

The college's board of governors voted to break from the city in 2006.

Once the college establishes its independence, it will become a private college.

Funeral Mass Today For Sun Founder Henry Bosworth grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Today, three of his children are on the newspaper's staff: Donna J. Gray, the circulation manager and accounts receivable bookkeeper; Dorothy Newman, an assistant bookkeeper; and Robert H. Bosworth, who joined the paper in 1987 after graduating from the University of New Hampshire and became the Sun's editor in 1991.

"We know first-hand of the sacrifice our father made to establish this newspaper and keep it in circulation week after week," Robert Bosworth said. "Dad seldom took any time off and wouldn't think of retirement. For many years, Henry worked six days a week, including Saturdays. Every Tuesday — the day the Sun goes to press — he stayed until the issue was completed. The paper was his life — but his family still came first."

Robert Bosworth said his father's love for the City of Quincy "was unparalleled and was exceeded only by his love and devotion to his family. He was a loving husband and a devoted father, grandfather and great-grandfather as well as a wonderful son, brother and uncle. He considered The Quincy Sun his "sixth" child and he guided the paper the past four decades with tremendous respect as Quincy's hometown weekly newspaper."

Robert Bosworth said his father's passion was Quincy news. "Henry was fond of saying 'we are proud to carry the name Quincy in our banner. That's what we're all about: Quincy. The best city in the world.'"

"He took great pride and was so appreciative in knowing the Sun had so many dedicated and loyal supporters since that first issue rolled off the presses Sept. 26, 1968. And, despite the advent of the internet and websites as news sources, Henry was steadfast in his belief that Quincy deserves a weekly newspaper as a reliable and relevant source of local happenings, including politics, sports, social and entertainment articles, human interest news and features, most notably his familiar Sunbeams column that he cranked out week-after-week on his trusty manual Royal Typewriter."

"Quincy will never see another Henry Bosworth and his passing leaves a tremendous void not only for the city but much more so for his family who loved him so dearly."

Besides publishing The Quincy Sun, Mr. Bosworth was a pillar of the community. He was active in many local organizations and was an ardent supporter of countless civic causes.

He was a member of the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post of Quincy, the Quincy Sons of Italy, Quincy Lodge of Elks, Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame and the Veterans Stadium Committee which was instrumental in erecting lights at the city's stadium. For many years he served as co-chairman of The Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon. The telethon raised over $1 million for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Mr. Bosworth was recognized by numerous community groups, including the Quincy Historical Society, American Red Cross, Beechwood on the Bay, United Way, Veterans of Foreign Wars, South Shore YMCA, Quincy Lodge of Elks, Quincy Education Association and the Quincy School - Community Partnership. He was also honored as the recipient of the James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award, the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Citizen of the Year and by Maria Droste Services.

He was the recipient of the Salvation Army's first "Community Service Award."

Mr. Bosworth was a long-time member of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association's recipient of the association's Member of the Year Award.

He served on the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board. During the past few holiday seasons, Mr. Bosworth organized a Salvation Army kettle drive manned by community leaders to help raise funds for the needy.

Over the years, Mr. Bosworth also served on the Quincy Kids Voting Program Executive Committee, Quincy Historical Society Board of Trustees and South Shore YMCA Board of Directors. He was a past director of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and member of the New England Press Association.

In 1995, Mr. Bosworth received an honorary degree from Quincy College for his contributions to journalism.

He was also a longtime parishioner at St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy Center.

He was the beloved husband for 62 years of Dorothy M. (Robinson) Bosworth and the devoted father of Gail A. Happel and her husband Fred of Weymouth, Linda M. Harrison and her husband Ben of Randolph, Donna J. Gray and her husband David of Pembroke, Dorothy L. Newman of Quincy, and Robert H. Bosworth and his wife Amy of Halifax.

He was the loving grandfather of Fred Happel and his wife Julie of Weymouth, James Happel and his wife Wendy of Abington, Brian Harrison of Randolph, Amy Vickery and her husband Jason of Quincy, Michelle Wright and her husband Joseph of Pembroke, Kimberly Gray of Weymouth, Kellie Newman, Jay Bosworth Newman both of Quincy and Lindsay Bosworth of Duxbury.

He was the great grandfather of Michael Happel, Sean Happel and

Carlin Happel

Son of the late Henry W. Bosworth, Sr. and the late Ellen (Downes) Bosworth, he was the brother of Richard Bosworth and his wife Irene of Weymouth, the late Robert H. Bosworth and the late Vera Thomas.

He is also survived by many nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews.

Visiting hours were Wednesday from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment with military honors will be at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Something Special For Your Valentine

Valentine's Day Luxury For Less

(ARA) - Valentine's Day inspires some of the most expensive and luxurious gifts. But in an economic downturn, what do you do when you have champagne taste, but a beer budget?

Luxurious doesn't necessarily mean expensive and with some creativity you can give lavish gifts on a limited budget. Some of the most popular Valentine's Day gifts are jewelry, gourmet food and personal indulgences and all of them can fit into a small budget.

A Toast to Love:

Many couples pop the cork on a celebratory bottle of champagne, but a bottle of the real French spirit can run you a costly $40 to $120 or more. Instead, look for domestic sparkling whites or an Italian Prosecco, an inexpensive, crisp sparkling white wine.

Gourmet Chocolates:

A heart-shaped box filled with chocolate is almost cliché. When it comes to chocolate, it's quality, not quantity, that counts. A small box of gourmet chocolates in trendy flavors like curry, cardamom, black pepper, red wine and goat cheese will make much more of an impact than a big box of boring generic chocolates with mystery filling. If you'd like to try something different, try a small tin of caramels with sea salt.

Jewelry:

Diamonds may be a girl's best friend, but a piece of classic and stunning pearl jewelry for Valentine's Day is an affordable, unexpected and appreciated surprise. Freshwater pearl earrings or bracelets give a high-end look for a budget price and you can celebrate the colors of the holiday with a gorgeous pink or lavender cultured freshwater pearl necklace. PearlParadise.com offers freshwater pearl earrings starting at just $19.

Make a unique statement and show her she's the only one in your life with the symbolic and exotic Tahitian pearl pendant from PearlParadise.com.

Dinner for Two:

A romantic dinner for two at a restaurant can easily break the bank. But a candlelit gourmet dinner for two at home comes in at much less and also scores points for thoughtfulness. You can break out the cook book and make recipes from scratch or log on to any number of Web sites and have a three or four course feast delivered to your door.

The Gift of Time:

Time is the ultimate luxury and giving the gift of your undivided attention for an entire weekend, running a relaxing bubble bath or giving a foot massage is the best and most heartfelt gift of all.

Whatever you're shopping for this Valentine's Day, don't wait until the last minute. Shopping ahead can save big money. Look for sales at your favorite stores and surf around for great deals online. PearlParadise.com, for example, offers pearls up to 80 percent off retail price. Remember, putting some thought into your gift and thinking ahead truly shows you care.

Donna's Day Creative family fun

Valentine Wishes in a Box

Let surprise love notes spill out from a box this Valentine's Day to show your kids how much you care. Or get the whole family involved in the crafting and help your kids create this unique and easy-to-make valentine for someone special in their lives. All you need is a small, empty valentine candy box, paper, ribbon, scissors, markers, tape, glue and an extra dose of sweet thoughts to share.

Here's how:

Start with a small- or medium-size heart-shaped chocolate candy box. Paint or cover the box lid with construction paper and write, "I love you because..." on the top.

Cut out a heart shape from a piece of paper or index card so that the shape fits perfectly inside the box. Remove it from the box and use it as a pattern to make a heart-shaped paper garland.

Using the heart pattern, trace and cut out about 10 identical heart shapes from construction paper. On one side of each heart, write a different reason why you love the recipient of your valentine. For example: "You tell funny jokes," "Your smile makes everyone happy," "You give big hugs," "You are a great helper" or "You are kind."

Once you have written the words on each heart, turn them over and line them up in a horizontal row on a table. Lay a length of ribbon across the middle point of all of the hearts, leaving an extra inch of ribbon dangling over the left side and 5 inches over the right side. Glue the ribbon to the hearts to connect them. Let dry.

Tape the 1-inch ribbon end inside the base of the box. Accordion-fold the hearts and set them inside. The longer ribbon will be on top. Thread a bead onto the ribbon and knot, if you wish. Place the lid on the box. Tie a ribbon around it and give it to someone special on Valentine's Day. When the box is opened, the person can pull the ribbon to reveal all of the heartfelt expressions.

Valentine's Day Love Potions Are Romantic And Affordable

(ARA) - Whether you're in a brand new relationship or a marriage that has lasted for decades, you can use aromatherapy to enhance the romance. For Valentine's Day, save the expense of a dozen roses, and present your beloved with a selection of fragrant essential oils that can help create a passionate connection between you and your partner. It's a gift that can be used over and over, lasting long after any roses have withered away.

How do the aromas of essential oils impact romance? Through the olfactory lobe -- the part of the brain that processes scent, which is part of the limbic system that's associated with emotion and the formation of memory. Tom Havran, aromatherapy specialist at Aura Cacia, says essential oils can be used to facilitate a wide range of moods including romantic ones.

"There are a number of oils that lovers and aspiring lovers might find useful," says Havran. "Depending on the situation, you might want to create a relaxing atmosphere, a stimulating one or a sensual one. Essential oils are the perfect starting point."

Essential oils have the potential to elicit romance on four different levels. Some oils offer calming effects that reduce anxiety and self-consciousness, thereby opening the path to intimacy. Other oils are known for their stimulating and inspiring properties, and some can impact the hormonal system directly, increasing sexual desire. And there are oils that have been used throughout history as sexual attractants. It's said that Cleopatra, one of the most well-known seductresses in history, used a variety of scents and essential oils to create an atmosphere of passion for her relationship with Marc Antony.

Here is Havran's rundown of the most popular essential oils in each of these romantic categories:

- * Calming: geranium, clary sage, lavender, sweet marjoram.

- * Stimulating: cardamom, nutmeg.

- * Arousing: neroli, rose, ylang ylang.

Attracting: sandalwood, patchouli, jasmine, cedarwood.

Whichever essential oils you choose, they will work best if you create an environment where emotional and sensual closeness can thrive. If you have children, for example, make arrangements with friends or grandparents to take them for the evening, so that you'll have uninterrupted time to focus on one another. Draw a hot bath for your partner, adding a few drops of essential oil to the water and light some candles around the tub. Or create a romantic ambience in any room by diffusing the aromatic essential oils into the air with candle lamp diffusers or lamp rings.

Real Estate

Make Every Dollar Count When Selling Your Home

(ARA) - No matter how bad the real estate market seems to be these days, home sales do happen because people will always need a place to live. In fact, more than four million homes were sold in 2008. But with home values falling, today's sellers are finding out every dollar counts when it comes to keeping as much of their home's sales price as possible.

Many are deciding to sell their home themselves instead of hiring a real estate agent. Recent studies from Northwestern and Stanford Universities have found that "by owner" sellers are as effective as agents in maximizing a home's sales price. After commissions are factored, the studies reported, these sellers are able to retain more of their home's equity than those who sold with an agent.

Furthermore, Consumer Reports magazine found that "for sale by owner" (FSBO) sellers are more likely to get their asking price while agents deliver, on average, a sales price that is $5,000 less than the original asking price.

"In a market where prices are falling, people should really consider selling their home themselves," says Greg Healy of ForSaleByOwner.com -- the nation's leading for sale by owner Web site. "Selling a home through an agent means giving up 5 to 7 percent of the sales price in the form of real estate commission fees. Selling your home without an agent offers an immediate savings of at least that much."

Since it is a buyer's market where there are plenty of homes available, it's important to be aggressive and make your home stand out. Healy offers some tips to help you sell your home "by owner."

Price it Right

When you're not paying a sales commission, you can afford to price your home more aggressively. In this market, buyers are looking for the best deal possible so the more competitive you can be at pricing your home, the quicker it will sell. Homes that go on the market priced above similar homes tend to take longer to sell. So make sure you price your home right to move it fast.

Remember, the market dictates the price of your home, not what you think it should be worth. Use the Internet to research the sales amount of similar homes recently sold in your neighborhood. Get an online appraisal to give you a solid idea of where your home should be priced.

Make a Great First Impression

Today's buyers are attracted to open, clean, spacious and updated homes. Remove personalized items such as family photos and clear all clutter from countertops, closets, tables and floors. Simple improvements like fixing broken tiles, cleaning carpets and repainting walls in neutral colors can greatly enhance the appeal of your house. If you're having an open house, remove all evidence of pets (dog kennels, cat boxes, hamster cages) and make sure the house smells great by baking a batch of cookies or lighting a scented candle. If ever there was a time for a thorough top to bottom cleaning, this is it!

Get Help and Market the Home

Using a service like ForSaleByOwner.com helps you avoid paying commission to an agent while still getting support every step of the way. The site is one of the largest and fastest growing real estate websites with thousands of buyers visiting it each day. Using ForSaleByOwner.com also allows you to advertise your property on Realtor.com, the country's most popular real estate website with more than 5 million monthly visitors.

It is also wise to hire an experienced real estate attorney to help you evaluate complicated offers, act as an escrow agent, review contracts and handle your home's closing process. Unless you're significantly experienced in the home selling process, having a real estate lawyer on your side ensures that someone is looking out for your best interests. A lawyer will only cost a few hundred dollars and, as Healy advises, is money well spent.

Installing Closet Shelves

Q. I want to set up more shelves and hanging rods in my small bedroom closet so that I can store more stuff in it. I decided to get some of those white, metal-grid shelving kits that you just screw into the wall because they cost less and are supposedly easy to install. But I don't have a clue how to go about this. Any tips? — Frank in Chesapeake Bay

A. The first thing to do is measure your closet space so that you know exactly how much shelving you can put into it. Take a tape measure and get the height, width and the depth of the closet. You'll need this in order to make the correct kit purchase.

Next, decide what configuration you'd like in the closet: how many shelves, how much hanging space and so on.

Third, compare shelving kits at a home-improvement or hardware store to the kits available at most department stores. You may find more choice at a home improvement store, plus the ability to expand or change your configuration by purchasing individual components.

Finally, follow the directions closely when doing the installation. Make sure you have all the appropriate tools before starting work, and remember the axiom "measure twice, cut once." Figure out that final configuration before starting the shelving installation. You're working with drywall and studs, so you don't want to have to pull things out of that wall once they're placed.

Make Living Naturally Second Nature At Home

(ARA) - Many families are interested in adopting a more natural lifestyle, especially when they're met by life-changing moments, such as welcoming a new baby, adopting a pet, or buying a new home. According to a recent survey, however, while 78 percent of parents want their families to do more to live naturally, almost as many (63 percent) think that making changes would be difficult.

"Families don't have to overhaul their entire lifestyles to go natural," said Jen Singer, lifestyle expert, author and founder of Mommasaid.net, an online resource for moms. "Instead, you can take small steps that are easy, convenient and affordable. Even small changes can have a big impact on our homes and the world we live in."

Singer offers the following five tips to help families live more naturally.

* Leave it at the door. Make it a household rule to kick off shoes when entering the home. Preventing outdoor pollutants and loose surface dirt from coming inside can save water and energy because it means less mopping and vacuuming.

* Conquer cleaning naturally and effectively. Try cleaning your home with natural cleaners, such as the new Nature's Source line from SC Johnson. The products are powerful cleaners made with 99-plus percent natural and naturally-derived ingredients. What's more, the products are affordable and available in many grocery and mass merchandise stores.

* Pull the plug. Unplug electronics that aren't in use. If the phone charger is sticking out of the electrical outlet without a phone on the other end, it's still using energy. Encourage other family members to unplug their phone chargers, laptops and handheld game chargers when they're not in use.

* Carry a full load. Maximize the efficiency of appliances and conserve water and electricity by operating the washer, dryer and dishwasher with full loads. In some areas, electric companies may offer less expensive nighttime rates, so it's possible to save money by running electrical appliances at night.

* Hang it to dry. In the long run, a dryer does more damage breaking down clothing fibers than the washer. Hanging clean laundry on a line will save energy and that favorite pair of jeans.

Using these savvy tips will make it easier to live a more natural lifestyle at home without paying a premium. For more tips to live naturally, visit www.NaturesSourceCleaners.com.

Spring Equipment Check-Up Guide

(ARA) - Spring is the start of the lawn care season, and with a little work early in the year your lawn and garden equipment will be ready to perform all season long. This guide will help you move into the yard without a hitch.

Safety First

- Remove the power cord, spark plug wire, or battery for cordless equipment prior to performing any service. Also gloves and eye protection are required to safely perform service.

- Next, check all of the unit's fasteners, replace any that are missing, and tighten loose fasteners to the manufacturer's recommended tightness. Loose and missing fasteners are a frequent cause of trips to the repair shop, and can be dangerous.

Sharp Cutters are Key

- Evaluate the condition of any blades, cutting attachments or blower impellers. If in poor condition, these items will impair performance and can cause injury.

- It's probably best to leave maintenance of these items to a professional unless you are a very skillful mechanic and instructions for removal, replacement and sharpening are readily available.

Electric Equipment

- Electric equipment's external cords and wires should be checked for fraying.

- Check all extension cords used to power these products. Any frayed cords and wires should be repaired immediately by a certified technician. Replace any bad extension cords. Don't risk using the unit or extension cord even once as dangerous shocks can result.

- Ensure that all switches are intact and activate freely. Fully charge the battery, if applicable.

Gas Powered Equipment

- Perform the simple maintenance procedures from the owner's manual.

- Check the oil before starting any small engine that doesn't use gas/oil fuel mix. Place the product on level ground to avoid false readings. If the oil is low, fill it to the recommended level with the specified oil. Also, while some oil consumption is normal for small engines, now is a good time to check for oil leaks that need to be addressed by a professional.

- Check the air filter; carefully clean dirt, oil, and debris off the filter cover and the surrounding area before removing the cover. Examine the filter, and if it is dirty, replace or clean it per manufacturer's instructions.

- More experienced DIYers might want to change the oil and filter and check the spark plug. Make sure that your fuel is fresh as stale fuel can damage your engine. Unless you used a fuel stabilizer like Sta-Bil from Gold Eagle Co., any fuel more than 90 days old needs to be properly disposed of.

Cables and Levers

- Check to make sure all of these cables and levers operate smoothly. If they don't, lubricate or replace them.

Start Up

- Connect the spark plug wire and fire up engine-powered equipment. Following the operator's manual instructions, fill up the fuel tank with fresh fuel, making sure there are no fuel leaks, and start the engine.

- If the engine doesn't start, it is often because unstabilized fuel was left in the unit during storage. This stale fuel doesn't like to burn, and leaves varnish in your carburetor's small passages and the fuel line. But all is not lost. If stale fuel and a dirty fuel system are the causes of hard starting, try a product like Start Your Engines! fuel system revitalizer. These starting fluids/system cleaners can refresh stale fuel and clean muck out of your fuel system just by pouring them into the unit's fuel tank. It's an easy and economical way to fix a gunked-up engine.

- If the engine still will not start after trying a fuel system revitalizer, it's best to get a professional to evaluate the problem.

For more information on Sta-Bil Fuel Stabilizer, Start Your Engines! fuel revitalizer, or other Gold Eagle Co. products, visit www.goldeagle.com

Paying Taxes During Hard Times

By now you should have received your W-2 or 1099 forms for your taxes. If you've run the numbers and suspect you're going to be short when it's time to pay, you're not alone. Lots of people are experiencing adverse financial situations right now, and the Internal Revenue Service knows this. It's devoted a whole section of its Web site to help you.

Gather your information now. The worst thing you can do is delay making a game plan.

Here are some things you need to know:

—If you lose your job and get severance pay, it's taxable, including any amounts for sick time or vacation pay.

—If you get unemployment compensation, it's taxable.

—Even if your employer went out of business, it must provide you a W-2 form by Jan. 31. Contact the IRS for help in getting a substitute W-2.

—For information on moving or cashing out an IRA, moving costs to take a new job, getting food stamps or selling assets, see IRS Publication 4128 (Tax Impact of Job Loss).

—Keep track of your mileage and expenses

(including having a resume written) while you hunt for a job. They might be deductible. See IRS Publication 529 if you have expenses related to your work or if you move more than 50 miles away to take a new job.

—Debt cancellation generally incurs a tax liability. For example, if you settle a credit-card debt for less than you owe, the forgiven amount becomes income that is taxable. However, this is not necessarily so with mortgage forgiveness, including foreclosure. The Mortgage Debt Relief Act of 2007 creates exceptions to the kind of debt cancellation that is taxable. See the details in Publication 4681.

—If you have an installment agreement for a prior tax year, and you can't meet your payments because you've lost a job, call the IRS. It's possible that the IRS will be able to reduce those payments. Be prepared to supply proof of your changed situation.

If you already suspect that you won't be able to pay all your taxes by April, there are options such as a short-term extension, offer in compromise and installment agreements. Don't be too hasty in setting up an arrangement, however. Your situation could change by April.

On Sunday, Jan. 25, 2009, at approximately 12:57 p.m., Officers Joseph McGunigle and William Lanergan were dispatched to a family disturbance call in the Main Street area of Quincy Point.

Upon arrival, the officers were greeted at the door by a man who stated that he lived there, was the husband, that everything was alright and they were no longer needed. The officers said that they needed to see the other occupants in the apartment to make sure that everyone was safe.

Once let in, they observed the man's wife shaken and crying. Officer McGunigle led the wife into another room in order to interview her away from her husband, while Officer Lanergan interviewed the husband.

According to the victim, her husband went out in the morning but did not telling her where he was going. She attempted to reach him by telephone so that he would buy milk for their baby. When the husband returned home, he questioned his wife about where she was the day before, growing angry as he yelled that he called her numerous times but she did not pick up the phone.

When his wife tried to explain that she was down in the basement doing laundry, he said he did not believe her and grew angrier after each of her responses. She said that she missed other calls because she was in the shower, but her husband made it clear that he did not believe her.

At this point, the husband grabbed his wife by the back of her head and pulled her down by the hair to the floor. This occurred in the kitchen area and was witnessed by their 3 year old daughter, who had been in the living room watching T.V. The husband then choked his wife with his left hand as he kept pulling on her hair, screaming at her that he did not believe what she was saying.

A Job Well Done

The wife was able to briefly escape her husband's hold and ran to the kitchen wall phone and started to dial "911." As she dialed, she told him, "I'm calling the police." The husband rushed over and ended the call.

The wife then went into the living room area, where the child was, and picked up her cell phone. She again forewarned her husband, "I'm calling the police." Her husband retorted, "Don't call the police - I'll kill you." He then rushed over, took the cell phone from her and hung up the call. The husband then sat down with the daughter.

The victim went back into the kitchen, picked up the wall phone again, and this time she was able to get through to the Quincy Police before her husband came out to the kitchen. Officer McGunigle noted that the wife had visible red marks all around the front area of her neck. Their daughter appeared to be unharmed and calm, even though she witnessed this traumatic event.

The officers informed the husband that he was under arrest and requested that he come out to the hallway so they could handcuff him privately, away from his daughter's view. As the husband left the apartment, the daughter started crying.

As the officers were handcuffing the husband in the hallway, the wife opened the door and pleaded, "Please don't arrest him - Please don't arrest him," over and over. This only upset the daughter even more. After Officer Lanergan left with the husband, Officer McGunigle re-entered the apartment and provided the wife with an information card explaining her rights as well as services offered to victims and their families. She was upset that her call led to her husband being arrested.

The officer calmly explained that he is required by law to take action when he has reason to believe that domestic violence had occurred. He also informed her that he would be calling the Department of Children and Families so that they could investigate the welfare of the child.

A report was also submitted to assist in their investigation.

The wife was advised to seek a Restraining Order, but she said that she did not want one. She did, however, want to know when she could pick up her husband up at the station and how much bail would be!

Nice Work!

Loses To Hanover, Fisher Division Out Of Reach

North Quincy Defeats Quincy In Citywide Battle

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raiders (14-5 overall, 10-4 in Patriot League) outscored the Quincy Presidents 12-4 in the final eight minutes of play last Saturday afternoon and came away with a definitive 44-30 victory.

The win over Quincy closed the book on a week that saw North lose by double digits to Hanover High School (Feb. 3) in a game that decided the Patriot League's Fisher Division champion and a victory Friday night over Randolph.

"We changed our defense in the fourth quarter and gave them a new look and things started to click," said NQ head coach Michael Jorgenson. "Our shooting was off in the first half. We had easy shots but we just were not putting them in, but that changed in the second half."

"We were coming off a victory last night (Friday) where we scored 79 points and to turnaround today and get a win in this gym for the last time and start clicking the way we did was good to see."

Quincy (4-11 overall), which was coming off a tough 59-30 loss to Silver Lake Friday night, played North Quincy tight through two quarters, and trailed the Raiders 16-15 at the break. When Quincy forward Leslie Campbell buried a 15-foot jumper to open the second half, the Presidents took their first lead of the game. It would be her team's last lead the rest of the way.

Buckets by NQ's Cara Murtagh and Siobhan Car-

Girls' Basketball

nell (15 2nd half points) pushed the lead to 21-17 and after Catherine O'Connell made one-of-two freebies, North upped the score to 26-19. But the Presidents would not go down without a fight.

Playing in one of the last girls' basketball game at the QHS Gym (the new gym will open in two years), Quincy and North traded baskets late in the quarter. The Presidents super sophomore Kori Sorensen hit a three-pointer; NQ's Kathleen Lynch connected on a short jumper; O'Connell scored for North; the Raiders Kristina Anderson made a layup and Sorensen finished the scoring run with a buzzer beating two-pointer. At the end of three quarters the score was, 32-26, North Quincy.

In the fourth quarter, the Raiders locked down on defense, allowing only four points while scoring 12. Campbell scored first to close the gap to 32-28, but the Raiders scored the next ten points to put the game away. Carnell scored seven points in this run and sophomore Montana McBirney (two points) and senior Jessie Howlett (point) also contributed in the final quarter.

"We just came off a tough loss against Hanover and it was good to come back and play well and get the win," said Carnell after the game. "We have just been playing as a team and have picked it up on defense recently. The seniors decided to pick it up this season and we have been successful. But to do good in the postseason we need to box out and play defense. The offense is there."

Fellow seniors Kathleen Lynch and Catherine O'Connell expressed similar sentiments.

"I think this win just shows that we can bounce back from any type of loss," said Lynch. "Hanover was a big loss, but this win over a good Quincy team just shows me that we can come back and should do well the rest of the way."

Said O'Connell: "This team just does what it has to in order to win. If we continue to play solid defense, we should be ready for the postseason."

With just two regular season games remaining (Rockland and Middleboro) and a Fisher Division title out of reach, the Raiders have to remain focused because a first-round home playoff game may be on the line.

"It had been a rough week with that loss to Hanover, but we have two games left," said Jorgenson. "Rockland is playing well and are near the top of the Fisher Division and then we play Middleboro and then we wait, and wait and wait for the seeds to come out."

"We need to win these last two to get a good seeding and the way it stands right now we should have a home game. But as you know, things change. We need to keep playing hard the rest of the way."

Quincy ends the season with a home game today against Hingham. Tip-off is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. The teams combined for only 15

No Post-Season For Quincy, North Quincy

Red Raiders Gain Revenge, Dominate Presidents

By SEAN BRENNAN

In a game that seemed to lack the excitement and flair of previous Quincy-North Quincy showdowns, the Red Raiders steamrolled an undermanned Presidents' squad, 77-41, at a less-than-capacity Quincy High School gym last Saturday evening.

The win gave North Quincy (4-12 overall, 2-12 in Patriot League's Fisher Division) its fourth victory of the season and only its second league win, while the loss dropped Quincy's record to 5-11 overall and 4-10 in the Patriot League's Keenan Division.

With the team's loss to North Quincy and a 59-51 defeat at the hands of Silver Lake HS last Friday, the Presidents will be on the outside looking in when the Division II South Sectionals start up after the February school vacation break. The Red Raiders had been eliminated from postseason contention weeks ago.

Quincy opened the game by taking an early 7-4 first quarter lead. Baskets by senior captain John Parry (three-pointer) and sophomore Robbie Bina gave the Presidents the early advantage, but the North responded with 7-0 scoring run, highlighted by four points from junior forward Jonathan Coates and three points from junior forward Mike Stanton.

Another Parry three-pointer with two minutes left in the first quarter gave Quincy its last lead of the game at 11-10. After that, the Red Raider rout was on. When Coates and Stanton buried jumpers late in the quarter, North took a 15-10 lead into the second period.

In the second quarter, North Quincy poured on more of the same. The Raiders outscored the Presidents 20-7. Again, it was Coates

Boys' Basketball

(six points) and Stanton (four points), along with senior Tim Stille (three-pointer) and junior Terrance Staley (three points) who did the damage. North used a suffocating defense and a height advantage on the boards to limited Quincy to one-shot-and-done on almost every offensive possession. At the half the lead had ballooned to 35-17 Red Raiders.

The break did nothing to slow North's momentum. A three-pointer by Coates with four minutes left in the third upped the score to 46-20 and after Stanton hit a mid-range jump shot with seconds left the score was 53-25 with eight minutes to play.

In the fourth, both teams emptied their benches, as the game became a showcase for a number of seniors playing in their last Quincy-North game. The Raiders' Andy Ng and Raymond Fang both entered the scorebook with points late in the game. Quincy's Bina buried a late three-pointer to complete the scoring. Final score: 77-41 North Quincy.

"Everything just came together for the team against Quincy," said NQ head coach Kevin Barrett. "Our success starts with our defense, which in turn makes for easy offense. If we play that type of aggressive defense, we will continue to win games.

"Our record is not what we would like it to be, but we knew this was going to be a transition year but we have progressed with game experience and we are going to be even better next season."

North Quincy is a young team and in this game the team showcased several young stars of the future.

"Jonathan Coates, who is only a junior, played great. He has only gotten better as the season has moved along. Mike Stanton, another junior, played a solid game and with the two of them coming back and with our younger players like Matt Costa and Terrance Staley the future is bright."

The Raiders' 4-12 record, according to Barrett, is not indicative of the way his team has performed this season.

"Many of our losses have been close games so we hope that game experience will have an affect on these types of games next season. They way we played against a good Quincy team is more of what we expect in the future."

For Quincy and head coach David Parry, the outcome of the game was a disappointment.

"Kevin (Barrett) had his team ready and up for this game," said Parry. "They outplayed us in every facet of the game and you have to give North Quincy all the credit. We had nothing to build on as the game went along and the snowball turned into an avalanche.

"I think our inexperience caught up to us. But one positive was that the kids were upset about the outcome and maybe that is something we can build on. I felt bad for our seniors and it was pretty emotional in the locker room after the game ended. But the seniors have done a great job all year showing leadership to our younger players. They showed great maturity after a tough loss."

Notes: Quincy is scheduled to play Hingham HS at home today (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. North Quincy will close out its season with a home game today (Thursday) against Middleboro HS. Tip-off is set for 6:30 p.m.

3 Games Left, 4 Points Needed
Girls' Hockey Finish Week 0-2

By SEAN BRENNAN

The clock is ticking down on the Quincy-North Quincy girls' ice hockey team's chances of reaching the Division II post-season.

The team dropped a 2-1 decision to Canton HS last Wednesday and a 4-3 game to Boston Latin on Sunday, and now needs to earn four out of six points (two wins) in their final three games to advance.

"It was a good week even though we lost both games," said Q-NQ head coach Kelli Doolin. "The game against Canton was a well-played game, but we just couldn't score that tying goal. It was frustrating but the girls played really well."

Freshman sensation Presley McLaughlin continued her torrid scoring pace, scoring her team's lone goal of the game.

"Presley continues to impress as a freshman," added Doolin. "She is one of a number of underclassmen who have made significant strides this year and she will be a big part of our improvement in the years to come."

Against Boston Latin at Northeastern University's

Matthews Arena, Q-NQ allowed Boston Latin to score the game-winning goal with just under one minute left in the third period. A tough way to lose, but the game was not a total loss.

"It was a great game and very competitive," Doolin said. "It was heartbreaking to lose the game in the final minutes. They are a very good team and we had our hands full with them, but we played very well and regardless of the outcome, it was a solid game all around."

Season Over For QHS' Doug Scott

By SEAN BRENNAN

Quincy's senior guard, Doug Scott, the city's all-time basketball scoring record holder, will not play anymore games this season for Quincy High School. His high school career officially ended late last week because of a MIAA eligibility problem, this according to QHS head coach David Parry.

"I cannot go into detail because of student confidentiality agreements, but it was a MIAA eligibility issue. He can no longer participate on the court but he still is very much a part of this team. He is, and always will be, part of the Quincy High School basketball family.

"Doug has done so much for this program over the last few years; helping Quincy reach the postseason three straight years and being the ultimate teammate. We will do whatever we can to help him in the future. I will never abandon Doug or any of my players."

Scott, who broke the QHS scoring record on Jan. 7, shattered the city record on Jan. 30 in a Patriot League game against Scituate HS. He finished his high school career with 1,555 points.

Quincy, which has dropped three straight games, missed Scott's scoring prowess over the weekend in games versus Silver Lake and North Quincy, but the team is moving forward and looking to end the year on a positive note.

"The last three years the team was predicated on Doug's offensive skills," added Parry. "Without him we will look to add a little bit more to our offensive game plan. We are young, but these last few games should give us time to get these players invaluable playing time."

Feel-Good Foods To Battle The Winter Blues

(ARA) - It's that time of year again when temperatures hit single digits, clothing gets heavier and it can be difficult to resist the urge to curl up all day under a warm and comfy blanket with an engaging book.

When the sun starts setting earlier, many people also look forward to enjoying traditional delicious winter comfort foods that evoke warmth and nostalgia. Nothing is cozier and more heart-warming than a flavorful meal of chicken pot pie, a savory casserole, a steamy stir-fry or a piping hot bowl of soup to melt a cold winter day away.

You don't have to lock yourself away in the kitchen all day either to prepare your family's favorite dishes. Look no further than your own kitchen cupboard for simple solutions to creating hearty and economical meals that will beat the winter blues. Here are a few easy tips to warm your soul and get you through the chilly season:

Yesterday's Leftovers Made a Little Richer

Often, you open the fridge and face a daunting stack of containers full of leftovers. But last week's meals can be perfect for turning into a simple chicken pot pie, a hearty stew or a quick casserole. Suddenly, those leftovers are transformed into five more appetizing week-night dinners.

An easy tip for making leftovers more rich and flavorful when combined in one dish is to add a ready-made broth or stock to guarantee moisture that may have been lost. For example, College Inn chicken broth enhances the flavor of leftover poultry in recipes. Some great dishes include One-Pot Noodles with Chicken and Broccoli, Santa Fe Chipotle Beef Stew and Tortilla Soup, all of which can be found at www.collegeinn.com/ev-erydayexcitement.

Simple Snacks and Mood Foods

You can also beat the doldrums with mood-enhancing snack choices. People typically reach for a bar of chocolate or caffeinated beverage for a quick energy boost, but both can cause short-term increases in energy followed by crashes. Try to avoid caffeine and alcohol in high doses as both contribute to irritability and depression.

Instead, try simple mood-boosting snacks like trail mix or a fruit cup which are healthier for you than sugary snacks and easy to take on-the-go. If you are absolutely in need of a chocolate or sugar fix and don't want to overindulge, drizzle a small amount of fat-free chocolate syrup over a whole wheat English muffin for a smarter mid-afternoon snack. Or pack your favorite instant hot cocoa packets in your lunch bag.

Drinks to Warm You on the Inside

It has been proven that hot drinks can actually make you feel less irritable during the winter season. A recent study at Yale University shows that holding a warm drink 'warms' your personality. A simple solution to reduce cold weather irritability is to sip hot cocoa, savor a cup of flavorful broth, or relish a warm apple cider to brighten a bad mood. You'll instantly feel a little better during a cold hectic day.

Maintaining a warm, healthy body with the right foods and beverages will no doubt help you to keep a glowing personality this winter season.

Supergerms
Demand Respect,
But Not Fear

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have heard a lot about MRSA. Can you give me some more information about it? What can we do to prevent getting it? I am a student at San Jacinto High School in California. —J.R.

ANSWER: "MRSA" is short for "methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus," a common bacterium found all over the place and a common inhabitant of the skin. "MRSA" is pronounced "mersa," as though it were a word.

In the early days of penicillin, it could kill many germs, including the staph germ. That germ is a wily creature. It soon learned how to dodge the killing power of penicillin. Clever scientists came up with a new model of penicillin called methicillin. It was effective against those resistant staph germs. This happy situation came to an end when staph learned how to evade methicillin. These are the MRSA bacteria.

We do have antibiotics that can deal with MRSA bacteria. However, the lesson is that antibiotics must be restricted only to infections by bacteria that respond to them. Using antibiotics indiscriminately paves the way for the development of resistance.

MRSA can cause all kinds of infections, but the most common are skin and soft-tissue infections. Soft tissues are the tissues just below the skin, the subcutaneous tissues. Outbreaks of MRSA infections are common in high-school football players and wrestlers because of the skin-to-skin contact that occurs in those sports. Anyone, athlete or not, can come down with this infection.

Frequent hand-washing is the best defense against MRSA. All skin wounds should be covered with a bandage of sterile, dry gauze and inspected daily to see if they are becoming infected. Athletes should launder their playing clothes after each use and should not store dirty clothes in a locker. They should shower immediately after a practice. No one should share towels, brushes or combs.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Hot Health Careers in High Demand Now

(ARA) - Medical research, technological advancements and a population that is living longer are all reasons that the health care field continues to grow. Although the industry is demanding more workers, there isn't enough space in training programs to accommodate the numbers of students who are interested.

Here are some new health care degrees that are projected to be in high demand in 2009 and beyond:

Associate Degree in Applied Science: Electroneurodiagnostic Technology (ENDT)

There is a high demand for people who can help doctors diagnose brain and nervous system disorders. In fact, the U.S. Department of Labor projects a 26 percent increase in jobs in this field by 2014. Electroneurodiagnostic technology is a good option for students looking for a unique and fast-growing health care segment.

Certificate in Health Services Management (HSM)

A health services management certificate could help you develop a foundational background in finance, marketing and health services that will help move your career forward in this growing field. You'll learn a variety of management skills that are in high demand in the health care industry that will help you stand out from other candidates for leadership positions.

Associate Degree in Health Information Technology (HIT)

An associate degree in health information technology could be your doorway to a career as a clinical coder, data analyst, patient information coordinator or health record technician.

"The future of health information holds many opportunities," says Dasantila Sherif, associate professor and HIT program chair at DeVry University -- Fort Washington. "Health information technology impacts every component of the health care system in the U.S. HIT graduates give their contribution in working with physicians, patients, payers, government agencies and other health care organizations. They focus on information management, privacy and security, public health education and research, electronic health records and more."

Bachelor's Degree in Biomedical Engineering Technology (BMET)

Biomedical engineering is a career field that will increase at about 26 percent per year through 2012 according to the U.S. Department of Labor. Biomedical engineering technology degree holders work with physicians, therapists and other technicians in the design, construction, implementation and maintenance of sophisticated health care equipment and lifesaving devices.

Staying Motivated to Exercise

I've experienced a lapse in keeping my New Year's resolution. I started a walking program three mornings a week. I was excited to begin. It was held in a heated indoor arena with a flat track. Two people from the Healthy Heart Program would be there giving advice and taking blood pressure, as well as leading the gentle exercise classes. It seemed perfect. And the first few classes were fun. I felt better after each class, energized and ready to face the rest of the day.

Alas, I neglected to consider the human element — me. It appears that I need more encouragement than just the opportunity to put a check next to my name on the attendance list for every day I show up.

Setting goals didn't help. Promising myself rewards for attending didn't help either.

On the Internet I found companies that will send telephone reminders, some of which you can record yourself. The services, however, are expensive.

Then there are computer software programs that will pop reminders up on the monitor.

There's always the alarm clock, set to go off at the right time.

In my case, the solution was a lot easier than signing up for a call-reminder service. Instead, I swapped phone numbers with one other person in the class. It was her idea because she also found herself lacking the right motivation to get to class. On even days of the month, I call her in the morning to ask if she's going to class. On odd days she calls me. Having to answer to someone else seems to be working. I've gone to enough classes in a row now that I don't think I'll start skipping them.

It might be low-tech, but it's working.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TAKING A BETTER IMPRESSION

Some patients find the procedure of taking a traditional dental impression to be uncomfortable. It involves inserting a metal tray with plastic-like material into their mouths, which is used to make a negative impression of teeth, jaws, and gums. Once the impression hardens, it is filled with plaster of Paris or artificial stone to produce an exact model of the structures in the patient's mouth. More recently, advanced technology has provided a way for impressions to be created quickly and more comfortably. A chairside oral scanner (C.O.S.) utilizes a wand that is placed strategically in the patient's mouth, where it collects data that leads to the creation of a precise 3-D image, which is used to create models for restorations. The interactive experience enhances the high-tech image of the practice and allows clinicians to offer patients a more convenient and comfortable procedure than that of traditional impressions. Is it time for a professional dental check-up? We want you to receive the highest quality of complete, affordable dental care. Because looking good and feeling good are important to us, it is wise to maintain a healthy and attractive smile throughout life. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our aim is to provide individual attention and care to every patient so that we can learn about their special needs. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. A chairside oral scanner creates an impression instantaneously by creating an image on a touch screen.

Pretzel Sunday Feb. 22 At United Methodist Church

Sunday, Feb. 22 is the last Sunday before Lent begins – and it's also Pretzel Sunday at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

During the 10:30 a.m. worship service, Sunday school students will bring baskets of pretzels into the Sanctuary and pass them out to everyone.

"We celebrated Pretzel Sunday for the first time three years ago," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of Quincy Community. "I learned about it when a parishioner in one of my former churches found an article about Pretzel Sunday in a magazine and showed it to me."

"I had never heard of Pretzel Sunday before, but it sounded like fun. So, that year the Sunday School students passed out pretzels and everyone enjoyed it – and I've been doing it ever since."

Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said she is unsure of the origins of the custom, but guessed it may have its roots in legend.

"According to folklore, a German monk invented the pretzel as a reward for his students. When they knew their catechism, he gave them a pretzel. The shape is supposed to represent a person's hands crossed over her or his chest in prayer. A pretzel has three holes and yet it's still one pretzel – similar to the shamrock's symbolism of the Trinity. However, as to how pretzels became associated with the last Sunday before Lent, I have no idea."

First Church Of Squantum

First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd., Squantum, will hold a worship service Sunday at 10 a.m.

Sunday School will also begin at 10 a.m.

COA Seeks Bath Seats

The Council on Aging is in urgent need for bath seats for senior citizens.

Coffee and refreshments will follow the worship service in the parlor.

For more information, visit the church website at www.firstchurchsquantum.com.

If you have one to donate, call the COA at 617-376-1245.

RELIGION

Quincy Point Congregational

Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Quincy, will celebrate a 10 a.m. worship service Sunday.

The Rev. Ann Suzedell will preach a sermon entitled "Touched by Jesus."

Jack Sweeney is deacon of the day.

All are welcome. Coffee and light refreshments will follow the service in fellowship hall.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Historians rate Abraham Lincoln one of the greatest American presidents.

Lincoln was not an appeaser nor one who yielded to the expediency at the hour. He was a man of strong morals and spiritual insight... a man of character and high principles.

Ironically, Lincoln, who often spoke so eloquently of peace, was fated to know nothing but war in the four years and one month of his Presidency. He bore the griefs of a nation at war on his shoulders. His faith and courage kept us an undivided nation.

Yes, Lincoln was more than a great American. He was a great humanitarian. He was a man of great ability, with immense spiritual insight. He had an unusual understanding of the dignity of the common man...

We, as a nation, are indeed fortunate to have had Lincoln as our President during a very difficult time in our nation's history.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Doing something nice for others is typical of the generous Arian. But be prepared for some jealous types who might try to question one of your more recent acts of kindness.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to take on new responsibilities. But before you do, you might want to check out exactly what would be required of you so that you don't face any "surprises" later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It might be best to put off an important decision until a fluctuating situation becomes more stable. Recently received news could help resolve a long-standing family matter.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) If you still have a problem getting that information gap closed, you might consider asking a higher authority to resolve the matter, leaving you free to move on to another project.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A family matter needs to be dealt with at the start of the week. Once it's resolved, the Big Cat can devote more attention to that new opportunity that seems to hold so much potential.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Pay attention to those nagging doubts. They could be warning you not to make any major decisions until you've checked them out — especially where money matters might be involved.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business venture might need more of your attention than you are able to provide. Consider asking a trusted friend or family member to help you work through this time crunch.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A more positive aspect helps you get a clearer focus on how to handle your time so that you can deal with several responsibilities that are just now showing up on your schedule.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A very close friend (you know who that is!) has advice that could help you work through a confusing situation. So put your pride aside and ask for it. You'll be glad you did.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace situation could turn a bit tense. The best way to handle it is to confront it and deal with it openly. Doing so can help reveal the underlying reasons for the problem.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A colleague's remarks appear to be especially cutting. But don't waste your time or your energy trying to deal with the situation. You have more important things to do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Support for your work comes as a surprise from someone you thought was critical or, at least, indifferent. Your spouse or partner has big plans for the weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your spiritual strength often acts as an inspiration to help others make decisions about their lives.

OBITUARIES

Arthur R. Cunningham, 69 Telephone Technician

A funeral Mass for Arthur R. Cunningham, 69, of Quincy, formerly of Weymouth, was celebrated Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Holy Trinity Parish at the Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, 227 Sea St., Weymouth.

Mr. Cunningham died Feb. at home surrounded by his loving family.

Born in the Brighton section of Boston, he was raised and educated in Dorchester schools and graduated from Brown and Nichols Preparatory School in Cambridge, Class of 1958.

He had lived in Weymouth and Dorchester before moving to Quincy 25 years ago.

Mr. Cunningham worked as a technician in the telephone industry for 28 years and was employed by NYNEX. He retired in 1991 and was a member of IBEW Local 2222.

ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

He was also a member of the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

Mr. Cunningham took great pride in his family. His favorite past time was to be involved in his grandchildren's lives, on and off the playing fields.

He enjoyed traveling, watching college basketball and was a loyal Boston sports fan.

Beloved husband for 22 years of Donna M. (Paige) Cunningham, he was the devoted Dad of Donna Conroy and her late husband Peter of Charlotte, N.C., Diane Cunningham of Braintree and Gary Cunningham of Weymouth.

He was the loving grandfather of William Conroy and his wife Stacy, Brian Conroy, Andrew Conroy, Paul King, Angela Cunningham, Matthew Cunningham and Bianca Cunningham.

He was the dear brother of Beth Carey and her partner Kathleen Harber of Haverhill, Norma Carey and her husband William Manning of Braintree and the cherished uncle of many nieces and nephews.

He was also the son-in-law of Ann Gardikis of Quincy.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Norwell VNA Hospice, 91 Longwater Cir., Norwell, MA 02061.

Rita Colella, 97

A funeral Mass for Rita (Angelina) Colella, 97, a lifelong Quincy resident, was celebrated Wednesday in St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Colella died Feb. 7 at Norwell Knoll.

She was the loving wife of the late Anthony Colella.

Born in Quincy, she was the daughter of the late Domenic and Elvira Angelina, she was a devoted mother, grandmother and housewife.

She was a past member of the Hingham Stroke Club.

She is survived by three children, Dr. Ray Colella of Norwell, Dr. Paul Colella of Cincinnati, OH, and Marie

MacDonald of Englewood, FL; nine grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

She is also the sister of Jeanette DiSerio of Abington and the late Nicholas Angelina, Amelia Rodophole, Antoinette Trubiano, Viola and Isabel DiBona.

Interment was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Bolea-Buonfiglio Funeral Home, 116 Franklin St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Dr., P.O. Box 859060, Braintree, MA 02185.

Lydon Funeral Home Renews Affiliation With Lofty Oaks Association

The Lydon Funeral Home has renewed its affiliation with the Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased, and to renew the forest life of Massachusetts.

The memorial trees are planted in the Spring and Fall. This program is part of a large endeavor to restore the landscape with the eternal beauty of living trees.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged for by Michelle Lydon of the Lydon Funeral Home. When the tree has been planted, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

Final Land-Taking For Concourse

Demolition Bids Sought For Center Buildings

WRECKING BALLS are expected to demolish these buildings in Quincy Center to clear the path for Phase 2 of the Concourse. City officials will open bids for the demolition of 1586 Hancock St. (above) and 14 Revere Rd. (below) on March 6 at 1 p.m. The Revere Road demolition is being rebid. At one time, Bernie's Tux signs dominated the Hancock Street building. More recently, the buildings housed restaurants, a framing shop, hair and tanning salons.

Veterans Services Budget May Top $1 Million Mark

Veterans' needs and numbers are increasing. As a result, the budget for the city's Department of Veterans Services may top the $1 million mark for fiscal year 2009.

"It's the economy of the times," said Director Henry Bradley, noting that jobs are either not available or lost by younger veterans who apply for benefits and higher numbers of older veterans now require medicines and care.

Bradley and the department's Thomas Stansbury were expected to seek a budget increase of $120,000 at the City Council meeting scheduled Tuesday after deadline.

The 2009 budget allocation was $931,779. A $120,000 increase will bring the total to $1,051,779. Bradley noted that 75% of his department's budget is reimbursed by the state.

"Some of them are out of work," Bradley said of the younger veterans who served in Afghanistan and Iraq. At the same time, the aging veterans of World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam require added medical care and assistance, he said.

At this time, the department is serving 135 clients, according to statistics provided by Stansbury, Graves Registration officer. Of that number, 71 are veterans, 37 widows, and there are 18 families with 19 children.

In the past two years, the department's client list has increased by roughly 38% as the staff served 124 cli-

City officials moved full speed ahead this week on the Quincy Center Concourse as they advertised three buildings for demolition and finalized the last landtaking for the proposed cross-town artery.

Bids were advertised this week for the demolition of buildings at 1586 and 1596 Hancock St., and 14 Revere Rd.

At one time, Bernie's Tux signs dominated the Hancock Street building. More recently, the buildings housed a restaurant and Frantic Framers which has since relocated to Franklin Street.

The Revere Street building featured a hair salon and tanning salon.

The bids will be opened March 6 at City Hall and demolition could begin in late March.

The land-taking and demolitions are essential for Phase 2 of the Hancock Street Crossing section of the concourse project which will eventually include the razing of the Quincy Fair Mall building at 156 & 159 Hancock St.

When completed, the concourse will skirt Quincy Center and provide a four-lane east-west passage of less than one mile extending from Granite Street to Southern Artery.

Final Purchase

In a related action, City Council approved funding for the last of the nine acquisitions needed for Phase 2 on Feb. 2.

Thank You, Most Sincerely

On behalf of the family of Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., and the staff of The Quincy Sun newspaper, I would like to express our heartfelt appreciation for the overwhelming expressions of sympathies after the death of our father, and newspaper founder.

I would like to especially thank Richard T. Sweeney, Jr., his son, Francis M. Sweeney, and the staff at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals for their professionalism and comfort in helping my family during such a grief-stricken time.

I would like to thank the Quincy Police and Norfolk County Sheriff's Department for their coverage the night of Henry's wake and funeral to St. John's Church and the procession through Quincy Center, including a pause in front of The Quincy Sun and City Hall, to the interment at Blue Hill Cemetery.

I would like to thank everyone from all walks of life who attended the visitation and funeral. Your stories about Henry and his impact on your lives will always be remembered and cherished.

I would like to thank Fr. Richard Cannon, pastor of St. John's Church, for celebrating Henry's funeral Mass. Your comforting words will give his family strength through the days, weeks and years ahead.

Thank you to everyone who has publicly stated what a fine and decent man Henry was. We hope you will never forget him, as certainly we will always remember him.

Also, once again, to the staff at The Quincy Sun for all their support. Henry loved you all like his second family.

Thank you, most sincerely, once again.

Morrisette Legion Post Celebrates 80th Memorial Mass

The Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post 294 held its 80th annual Memorial Mass in St. Mary's Church to note the passing of members who have died during the previous year.

Henry "Hank" Bradley, past national vice commander of the Legion, read the names of the deceased while Post Historian Dan Egan held a lighted candle which was snuffed out at the end.

Past Commander Thomas Stansbury, assistant to Bradley as veterans affairs director, presided as chief marshal while the families of the deceased veterans were honored guests.

Ribbon-Cutting For New QHS Sunday

The first fruits of the long-awaited new Quincy High School will ripen Sunday (Feb. 22) when a ribbon will be cut officially opening the Science/Technology/Engineering/Math wing of the $126 million campus.

The ceremony will take place at 1 p.m. before an audience of invited guests at an open house.

The next day, Monday, Feb. 23, the first of the 1,500 plus students will start classes in the state of the art building that Principal Frank Santoro calls "the beacon in educational practices that others will follow."

A second building, the Humanity/Arts wing, is expected to be completed in time for a September, 2010, opening and after that the old Quincy High School on Coddington Street will be rehabilitated as Quincy High West.

The new 128,000 square foot wing features a 150-seat lecture hall, large screen projection in each classroom, a greenhouse, computerized blackboards, a new Three Seasons Restaurant and multiple computer labs.

It also contains large instructional spaces for a culinary arts center, a chemistry lab, an auto repair lab, a plumbing lab and more, with mathematics classrooms across the corridor to provide interdisciplinary instruction.

Plans for a new Quincy High School have been on the front burner for a dozen years, moving from place to place and from design to design ever since the need for one was first noted during the administration of Mayor James Sheets.

The plans were finalized under Mayor William Phelan, moved along under Mayor Thomas Koch and could be finished in a second Koch administration or the first term of a fourth mayor.

PRINCIPAL FRANK SANTORO beams with pride outside the first phase of the new Quincy High School that hosts its ribbon cutting Sunday.

All-Day Kindergarten Registration March 3

The Quincy Public Schools will continue to offer free full-day kindergarten classes during the 2009-10 school year with registration on Tuesday, March 3, between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Youngsters who will be 5 or older on or before Aug. 31 should register at their home schools, which can be located by checking the website www.quincypublicschools.com.

Parents seeking open enrollment need to first register at their home school that day. Children need not come to registration.

The following documents must be produced in order to register a student:

- The child's birth certificate with a raised seal
- Proof that the child resides in the home school district — tax bill, utility bill, copy of lease, any two of them

• A photo ID of the adult seeking to enroll the student

• A copy of a recent (within one year) physical examination by a physician

• Written records of immunization

Questions about the kindergarten program should be directed to the principal of the child's home school ents in 2008 and 97 clients in 2007.

"We have taken nine new applications in January," Stansbury said in his written report which, also, states, "I anticipate that the Veterans' Benefits account will be depleted by the end of April."

"With the current economic crisis, we are unable to foresee what needs veterans will have."

Prior to qualifying for veterans' services, all applicants must apply for all alternative benefits, such as Social Security, workman's compensation, Medicare and the state's Prescription Advantage program.

In addition, applicants capable of working must visit the Quincy Career Center at least three times a week and turn in "job search sheets."

The Veterans' Department, also, allocates $2000 each for burials and provides fuel assistance as needed. Under a state directive effective this year, the local department must provide $250 per month to clients eligible for heating assistance.

Veterans in need of housing must seek help from other agencies as Bradley said Veterans' Services does not cover housing needs.

In fiscal year 2007, the department's budget was $529,028 and last year's expenditures totaled over $800,000.

Mayor Thomas Koch recommended that City Council approve the transfer of $120,000 from the Free Cash account.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 19, 1847, the first rescuers reach surviving members of the Donner Party, a group of California-bound emigrants stranded by snow in the Sierra Nevada Mountains. Three more rescue parties arrived to help, but of the 89 original members of the group, only 45 reached California.

• On Feb. 16, 1923, in Thebes, Egypt, English archaeologist Howard Carter enters the sealed burial chamber of the ancient Egyptian ruler King Tutankhamen. King Tut lived around 1400 B.C. and died when he was still a teenager.

• On Feb. 18, 1930, the planet Pluto is discovered by the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz. In August 2006, however, the International Astronomical Union announced that Pluto would no longer be considered a planet as Pluto's oblong orbit overlaps that of Neptune.

• On Feb. 22, 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt orders Gen. Douglas MacArthur out of the Philippines, as the American defense of the islands collapses. MacArthur at first balked — he was fully prepared to fight alongside his men to the death if necessary — but finally obeyed the president's order in March.

• On Feb. 21, 1952, Elizabeth Taylor, 20, marries Michael Wilding. It was Taylor's second marriage: At age 18, she had married hotelier Nicky Hilton, less than two weeks before the debut of her 1950 movie "Father of the Bride." She would be married six more times, twice to Richard Burton.

• On Feb. 17, 1979, Garrison Keillor's popular radio variety show "Prairie Home Companion" is first broadcast nationally as part of National Public Radio's Folk Festival America. The show, which had been running locally on Minnesota Public Radio since 1974, is still on the air today.

• On Feb. 20, 1986, France and Britain announce that a tunnel under the English Channel between the two countries would soon become a reality. Trains, cars and buses would be able to speed through the tunnel in less than half an hour. Construction began in December 1987, and the "Chunnel" was finally completed in 1994.

Son Beams

By Robert Bosworth

Dear Dad

Dear Dad:

This is just a quick note to tell you once again how really proud we are of you -- both your family and The Quincy Sun staff.

I also want to let you in on a few business-related things that have been going through my mind since you suddenly left us that terrible Saturday. We all know you are in a much better place . . . and that you'll always be watching over us from Heaven.

There have been many signs of your presence already. Like last Wednesday -- the date of your wake. I was late coming to work when I got stuck in a traffic jam. The car directly in front of me had the license plate with these three letters: "HWB." And the car was a pretty shade of blue -- Quincy Sun blue -- your favorite. I know it was your way of telling me to "slow down, don't rush, you'll get there." And you were right like you always are. I arrived at work in plenty of time to start a long and tiring day.

Here are few more thoughts that I want to share with you:

Have you found the perfect martini yet? I'm sure you've already made friends with someone who makes them extra dry, straight up on the rocks with an olive, just the way you like them. I hope you are relaxing right now with one as you read my letter.

We're glad the weather turned out so nice during your visiting hours. There were hundreds of people who wanted to pay their respects at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals. The line was really long -- down the street a few blocks. I can hear you saying "that would make a good Page 1 photo."

Given the frigid and snowy winter we've had, I know you had something to do with the unseasonably mild weather that day to make all your family, friends, neighbors, current and former staff, past and present elected officials, community leaders, business associates and so many others comfortable waiting outside the funeral home.

You must be proud of the way The Sun staff came together and published the paper last week under very difficult circumstances. I know you thought so highly of the staff and had commented frequently that we have such wonderful and dedicated people working at the paper. I find it a bit ironic that you left us on Feb. 7, 2009 -- the 31st anniversary of the Blizzard of '78. You were so proud of how the paper got out that week just one day late after more than two feet of snow brought Quincy to a standstill. Well, although the circumstances were much different, the effort the staff extended last week was just as dedicated and inspiring. They found the strength to put out the paper and spend so much time at your wake, funeral Mass, burial and reception at your beloved Sons of Italy Hall which treated the family so kindly, too.

It was also heart-warming to see many former staff attend your wake and funeral. Some go back to the Sun's early days. They all had a story to tell and each one made it a point to say they learned so much from you. I couldn't agree more.

I hoped you were pleased that the funeral procession stopped in front of The Quincy Sun office and City Hall. That was Dick Sweeney's idea. It was so touching to see the City Hall gang that greeted you every Wednesday give a respectful wave from the front steps. Wednesdays won't be the same for them but I know they'll cherish your visits forever.

Okay, the next item is one that should be considered carefully.

We're really not sure what we're going to do with your office. It's still kind of a mess but recently you were tidying it up and now my office looks even messier (how's that for being a chip off the old block??) I know how you enjoyed telling first-time visitors when they sat with you in your office how you once lost a ham sandwich under a stack of papers on your desk. They all laughed incredulously. But you just smiled back and insisted it was true.

I have a couple of ideas for your office.

We thought we could seal off the front door with see-through plastic and convert it into a museum. Leave it just the way you had it.

Or, we could ask the National Park Service to designate your office as a national historic site. Perhaps the tourist trolleys that you enjoyed seeing circling the square every spring and summer could stop here on their way to the Adams Birthplaces, Old House and other local landmarks. Not sure we could charge admission for people to see where you masterfully edited copy, wrote Sunbeams and performed so many other tasks relating to publishing the paper. But maybe we could get a few bucks to help the bottom line.

Of course this brings to mind your black manual Royal Typewriter. Whatever we do with the office, it will remain on your small table next to your desk. And no one will be allowed to use it. That I promise.

As for your Sunbeams column, I'm going to do my best to follow in your footsteps and write a column for Page 4. Out of respect, the Sunbeams title has been retired. But I think you would like a similar title that pays homage to your legacy: Son Beams. I think it's fitting because of how proud I am of you -- and I will always beam with pride when I think of you.

I can't take credit for Son Beams: that idea came from your daughter-in-law, Amy. She was more like your fifth daughter. You always told me how lucky I was to find a "gal" like her. I know that even more today.

We're also thinking of running some of your favorite Sunbeams columns once in a while. A few people have already mentioned that and I agree it's a terrific idea. I also want you to know that I have saved the last column you typed from your typewriter. I'm going to frame each take and hang them above the typewriter in your office.

Dad, your presence will always be felt here. You touched all of us and no one will ever forget you. In so many ways, we know there's a little bit of Henry in all of us.

I know I am fortunate to have worked with you -- and learn from you -- these nearly 22 years. I can still remember the first week I started here. It was the Monday after I graduated from the University of New Hampshire in May of 1987. I was so excited to join your staff and do whatever I could for you. I wasn't happy with my starting pay -- but that's another story for another time.

I also thought I knew everything there is to know about journalism. Far from it.

You were the best teacher I ever had. But it wasn't just news writing and editing and publishing that I learned. You instilled in me what is important in life: family, community and treating everyone fairly and with respect.

Well, there's so much more I want to say but you know how hectic it gets publishing a weekly newspaper.

Like you always told your family, don't worry about me.

I want you to know that together, every one who loves you will get through this difficult time, move forward but never forget you.

We'll take it one day at a time, one week at a time.

Dad, you taught us well.

Love,

Your son, Bob

MAYFLOWER DINER - ON ROUTE 3, 473 SOUTHERN ARTERY, QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS

THIS IS a rare 1940's postcard view of the original Mayflower Diner that was on Southern Artery across from the Quincy police station. Peter Calimeris, who owned the diner, published the postcard and had a stack of them for customers at the checkout counter. This classic Pullman style diner was painted light pastel blue.

About 1950, Calimeris replaced it with a larger modern air-conditioned stainless steel diner that for many years remained a Quincy landmark and meeting place. Today, this site, sandwiched between a car wash and a meat market, is home to a McDonald's. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

A 'Thank You' From Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) is pleased to announce that the hospital has received an award of $2,000,000 from the state's Essential Community Provider Trust Fund. This award demonstrates how important QMC is to our community as a provider of the highest quality, compassionate and personalized care to all that come to us, regardless of their ability to pay, race or ethnicity.

We are extraordinarily grateful to State Rep. Ron Mariano, State Senator Michael Morrissey and Mayor Thomas Koch. They, along with Reps. Stephen Tobin and Bruce Ayers, and Congressman William Delahunt, made our case to Gov. Patrick and Secretary of Health and Human Services, Dr. Judy Ann Bigby.

This grant provides critical support for QMC, but by no means does it solve the hospital's financial problems. For the past few years, the hospital has worked diligently to keep our expenses down while providing the best care in the most efficient manner we can and to grow our patient volumes. Despite this, we still face very grave financial challenges and difficult decisions. If you have followed the news, you know we are not alone, hospitals across the state are feeling the impacts of these economic times and health-care as a whole is under tremendous strain.

I've said it before-failure is not an option and we have a lot of work ahead of us to achieve financial stability and ensure we are here for our community. I firmly believe if we work together with our community and its leaders, we can do that. QMC is committed to this community and we appreciate your support.

Plans For A Commission On Status Of Women

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor Walter J. Hannon announced plans to establish a Commission on the Status of Women. Hannon said the purpose of this commission would be to advise the administration and the City Council on how to best combat sex discrimination in any area affecting employment, schools, child care and other related areas.

The commission, consisting of women working toward these aims, is subject to City Council approval.

Hannon requested those women's organizations and any individuals of the city participate in the implementation of this commission by submitting to him the name and resume of Quincy women interested in serving on the commission.

25% OF DOG OWNERS THE PROBLEM, SAYS DOG OFFICER BERLUCCHI

In a report to the city's dog officer, Frank Berlucchi, says the 25% of dog owners who do not live up to their responsibilities make his job a difficult one.

In 1973, Berlucchi picked up over 970 dogs on the streets of Quincy. Only 150 were claimed by their owners and while a few found new homes, 738 dogs were disposed of. The Quincy dog pound also noted that Quincy has had a leash law since 1966. The law also states that all dogs must be licensed and inoculated.

QUINCY ISMS

The Quincy Sun's Sunbeams column reported that James P. Papile, a resident of Harkins St., Quincy Point, would be a candidate for state representative in the Quincy Point South Quincy district. The Sunbeams column also reported that Atty. Richard W. Barry, a former city councillor and asst. district attorney, would be Quincy coordinator for former Lt. Gov. Frank Bellotti's bid for Attorney General. (Editor's note: Frank Bellotti won the AG's position and went on to serve three four year terms in the office.) Joseph Gillea was chairman of the Montclair Men's Club's 24th annual Awards Night. The club honored NE Patriots' player Mack Herron and former WHDH sportscaster Leo Egan. Mayor Walter Hannon proclaimed Feb. 1974 as "Heart Fund Month" and urged all residents to support the 1974 campaign. Joann Walsh, age 12, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Walsh, Payne St., South Quincy, won the first prize of $25 for designing the best cover for the program booklet "Centennial Capers" presented by St. John's Church. The Quincy Council Knights of Columbus were planning an Irish Night for March 9 at the Fore River Clubhouse. Co-chairmen of the event were Grand Knight Nicholas Christiani, Malachy Greaver and Paul Grant. Warren Watson, director of the Thomas Crane Public Library, received the book "Two Forts to Destiny." The book, the story of the settlements of Plymouth in 1620 and Weymouth in 1622, were presented to Mr. Watson by George Thompson, president of the Weymouth Savings Bank. Kimberley's, 751 Quincy Shore Dr., at Wollaston Beach was advertising a dinner special of a "20 oz. Sirloin Steak Dinner for $7.95." The Quincy Schools menu for Monday, Feb. 25 included a baked pork link sausage, applesauce, gravy, mashed potatoes, string beans, dinner roll and milk. Almqvist Flowerland, Franklin St., South Quincy, was advertising a "Sunday Special, Colorful Wax Begonias for 59 cents." Kevin K. Egan, Quincy, was named to the Dean's List for the fall 1973 semester at the University of Maine at Orono. John Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Kennedy of North Quincy, enrolled as a freshman at Northeastern University. (Editor's note: John's father, Christopher Kennedy, served on the School Committee from 1975 to 1989.) Officer John Brassil, of North Quincy, graduated from the Massachusetts Correctional Officers Training Academy at the University of Massachusetts. Officer Brassil is employed by Suffolk County Sheriff's Department. Mrs. Lydia Sisson, Beach St., Wollaston, observed her 90th birthday at a family party at her home. Mrs. Sisson was born on Washington's Birthday in 1884. John A. Andrews, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Andrews, 63 Bay St., Squantum, and Donald Bernstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morton Bernstein, 28 Perry Rd., Wollaston, were named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Nassau College, Springsdale, ME. The acapella choir of Eastern Nazarene College appeared in concert at the United First Parish Church, Quincy Center. Greg Larkin, associate professor of Music, directed the 46-voice choir, which will be on tour during the spring semester.

Nancy Santry Photography Presentation At Crane Library Feb. 23

Have you ever thought about taking a Mediterranean cruise?

Get a taste of the experience at this photographic presentation by traveler and photographer Nancy Santry on Monday, Feb. 23 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

In 2006, Santry spent two weeks traveling by cruise ship from Lisbon to Corfu, with stops in Venice, Sicily, Athens and more along the way. Discover the advantages of a cruising vacation, especially in this part of the world where countries are close together.

Santry's photographs have won many art show honors and have been published in tourism brochures. She concentrates on photographing New England scenes but also loves traveling and photographing in Europe. She is a member of the Quincy Art Association, the Hull Artists Studio Connection and the South Shore Camera Club.

Film 'Amistad' Topic Of Spirituality Discussion Group Friday

The Spirituality Film Discussion Group will watch Steven Spielberg's "Amistad" Friday, Feb. 20 at 7 p.m. at United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

"For Black History Month, after this historic Presidential election, it seems even more apropos to revisit our own moment of history by watching this film and John Quincy Adams' (portrayed by Academy Award winner, Anthony Hopkins) efforts to free a group of enslaved Africans," said Marie Jackson-Miller.

"This was a struggle that went all the way to the Supreme Court of the United States at that time, a country on the brink of war."

The evening will begin at 6:30 p.m. with potluck refreshments.

For more information, contact Michelle Walsh at 617-767-7933.

Library Showing 'Mamma Mia' Feb. 26

The Thomas Crane Public Library is offering you a chance to travel to an idyllic Greek island at a free screening of the 2008 movie "Mamma Mia!" on Thursday, Feb. 26 at 7 p.m.

The movie, based on the hit Broadway musical with songs by ABBA, is directed by Phyllida Lloyd, starring Meryl Streep, Pierce Brosnan and Colin Firth and is rated PG-13.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

'Kung Fu Panda' Movie Of Month

"Kung Fu Panda" will be the free movie of the month at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, Saturday, Feb. 21, at 6 p.m.

Every month the church offers a movie that can be enjoyed by the entire family together while munching on fresh hot pop corn and candy and washing it down with cold tonic.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Musical Tribute To The Bee Gees, ABBA At Marriott Quincy Hotel

"A Musical Tribute to the Bee Gees and ABBA - Stayin' Alive with ABBAMANIA" will be presented by the Quincy School Community Partnership Friday, March 20 at 8 p.m. at the Boston Marriott Quincy Hotel, 1000 Marriott Dr., Quincy.

Doors open at 7 p.m. General seating tickets are $30 and premiere reserved seats at $50.

Tickets can be purchased at all Quincy Public Schools and by calling 617-984-8731.

Stayin' Alive is a unique creation of one of the top acts in music history. The production from Canada is a hit for audiences of all ages. The show features costume changes of the era and songs such as "Stayin' Alive," "To Love Somebody," "Massachusetts," "Words," "You Should Be Dancing," "Night Fever" and "Grease."

ABBAMANIA is a Canadian-produced rock musical which takes you back to the disco era of one of the best pop bands in history, ABBA. ABBAMANIA plays songs such as "Mamma Mia," "Dancing Queen," "Take A Chance" and "Knowing Me, Knowing You."

In addition to the show, there will be prizes for best 70's costume and dancers. There will also be a 50-50 and 70's memorabilia raffle.

The Boston Marriott Quincy is offering a special room rate of $125 which includes a breakfast buffet for two on Saturday morning. Those who attend the performance must mention the show to get this rate and reservations can be made by calling 800-228-9290.

There will be an all-you-can-eat prime rib special that evening for $14.95 (must show concert ticket) at Marriott's Hancock Restaurant.

The Quincy School Community Partnership works to bring the city's schools, businesses and community organizations together to enhance the educational lives and opportunities of Quincy Public School students.

The event supports the Teacher Mini-Grant Initiative.

BOSTON JAZZ VOICES will perform a free concert Sunday, Feb. 22 at 3:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Boston Jazz Voices To Perform At The Crane Library Sunday

The Boston Jazz Voices will perform a free concert Sunday, Feb. 22 at 3:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The group will perform jazz, swing, and popular songs, including favorites like "You Took Advantage of Me," "There Will Never Be Another You," "Blackbird" and "The Water is Wide."

Boston Jazz Voices is one of New England's premier jazz a cappella singing groups.

Founded almost 20 years ago as The New England Close Harmony Ensemble, Boston Jazz Voices is a mixed chorus of 18 singers, each highly experienced and specialized in close harmony a cappella jazz singing.

Unlike most a cappella groups, which are small (4-5 singers), Boston Jazz Voices uses its 18 voices and six- to eight-part close harmonies to produce a uniquely beautiful sound.

The Boston Jazz Voices repertoire includes numbers from the American Songbook as well as European, British and Latin American composers, in styles ranging from jazz to ballad, pop and swing. Boston Jazz Voices performs in jazz clubs, concert halls and private venues throughout New England and took its sound to Paris in the mid 1990's.

The ensemble has also performed live on 88.9 WERS Boston, a radio station well-known for its Saturday a cappella showcase.

The concert is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

tor Dennis Harrington who outlined the status of the project, the federal, state and city sources for funding, and a timetable of 2010 for completion.

The project is being financed through a federal grant of $6 million, a state development grant of $5 million, and the city's District Improvement Financing or DIF funds.

"There'll be no change to the roadway layout," Harrington said, noting that the concourse had won approval from all the required agencies, including Massachusetts Historic Commission.

The council approved the recommended $98,500 plus taxes for the taking of a 2450-foot strip of land at 150 Parkway and a temporary easement at the same location.

The building at the site, which currently houses a fitness salon, will not be affected. The entire 36,392 square foot lot is currently assessed at $818,500 and the building at nearly $2.3 million. The property owners are Parkway Enterprises Ltd. Partnership.

Rob Stevens of the Planning Dept. said the appraisal of the property was conducted by Tyburski Appraisal Corp. of Quincy.

Relocations

Harrington, also, updated councillors on the future of several businesses in buildings slated for demolition.

Harrington told councillors Feb. 2 that one popular restaurant at Quincy Fair Mall, "Little Q Hotpot" may have to put equipment in storage" and may not relocate in Quincy.

Another restaurant, The Taste of Taiwan has not announced plans as of this date. Both restaurants had executed 20-year leases with the Quincy Fair Mall.

Two other tenants have leased Quincy properties, according to Stevens.

The Sushi Time restaurant will move to School Street and the Massachusetts School of Barbering will operate from the Landmark Building, 1543 Hancock St.

Peter W. Sleeper Associates of Arlington handled the relocation of businesses displaced by the Concourse takings in the initial phase and is currently handling auctions of property in the Quincy Fair Mall.

One of the major tenants at the Quincy Fair Mall, the Registry of Motor Vehicles, relocated to Braintree in July.

On Feb. 25, Sleeper Associates will conduct an auction of equipment, such as seating and movie screens left by the Flagship Cinemas, early tenants of the building.

In the past, Sleeper Associates relocated 10 tenants on other properties on the Concourse route. Seven relocated within Quincy. The remaining three either closed or entered leases in other areas.

Several businesses and restaurants, such as Alba's, and Frantic Framers successfully relocated to sites in Quincy Center.

Final Plans

According to MassHighway plans, the total concourse project will consist of a .85 mile of 8/10's of a mile four-lane roadway with median and sidewalks, two new traffic signals, accommodations for bicyclists and improved street lighting and landscaping.

Phase 1 of the Concourse, 850 feet, is already completed and allows a cut-through from Granite Street over the Paul Harold Bridge to Burgin Parkway.

Phase 2 or the Hancock Crossing will traverse 2,000 feet from Burgin Parkway and end at McGrath Highway. Minor improvements are planned on Hancock, Elm and Mechanic Streets.

Phase 3 will include improvements on McGrath Highway and will be constructed at the same time as Phase 2.

According to official records, the city has purchased the following properties: 148 Parkway at $650,000; 1586 Hancock

St. at $1.275 million; 1601-1621 Hancock St. at $2.8 million, a portion of 1570 Hancock St. at $285,000; 1596-1602 Hancock St. at $850,000; and 14 Revere Rd. at $650,000.

The city's purchase of 11 Revere Rd. at $580,000 has not been recorded to date. In addition, the city allocated $2 million to Messina Properties for all rights to ten percent of the land at 1563 to 1597 Hancock St. and the demolition of the entire building known as Quincy Fair Mall.

Former Mayor William Phelan presided over the groundbreaking for the concourse in June, 2007 when the wrecking ball crushed the first building which housed the Tanline company on Parkway.

In May of 2008, Mayor Thomas Koch announced that he would support the project without seeking any changes. Koch had, originally, hoped to avoid complete demolition of Quincy Fair Mall.

QCAP Providing Free Tax Preparation Filing Services For Quincy Taxpayers

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) with a grant from the United Way of Massachusetts Bay and Merrimack Valley, in partnership with Wal-Mart Foundation and One Economy, will bring free tax preparation and e-filing services to taxpayers in the Quincy-area in two ways.

First, through QCAP's own Volunteer Tax Assistance Program (VITA), now in its fifth year. Secondly, by hosting the One Economy Mobile Tax Center in Quincy now through Feb. 21.

"QCAP is pleased to offer taxpayers these fast, free and easy ways to file their income tax returns," said QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo.

"With the Mobile Tax Sites, QCAP can reach even more taxpayers across Quincy and help them get the refund they earned. We see this as the perfect complement to our VITA program, which has offered one-on-one tax counseling to low-income taxpayers since 2005," Strollo said.

A Wal-Mart Foundation funded Mobile Tax Center van equipped with One Economy's online tax filing technology and QCAP's IRS-certified tax counselors, will be setting up in locations around Quincy. Eligible taxpayers – those earning less than $56,000 per year – can visit a mobile site during operating hours and file their taxes free of charge.

QCAP is supplying IRS-certified volunteer tax counselors to answer taxpayer questions and help them claim credits that can increase their household income.

Nationally, the IRS estimates that approximately 20 percent of eligible individuals and families are unaware that they qualify for the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), a refundable federal income tax credit for low to moderate income individuals and families.

The combined efforts of QCAP's VITA program, One Economy's online tools and the arrival of a Mobile Tax Center van in Quincy, will ensure that a greater number of taxpayers in Quincy are educated about the EITC and have access to free tax filing assistance.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Fire Prevention: Beware Of Hot Liquids

Here's a subject I know little about, while after reading a FIREFACTORS flyer from the State Fire Marshal, I believe the content is worth passing along to you. It has to do with hot liquids and the potential for scalding burns to children. Everything included here is pretty much taken verbatim from this flyer.

A wiggling baby can jiggle your arm and spill a hot beverage all over himself. Put that hot coffee down when you hold a baby.

Put drinks and soups toward the center of the table away from curious fingers. Babies like to grab things.

Consider replacing tablecloths with place mats to prevent your child from pulling everything on the table onto himself.

Hot beverages caused almost one-quarter of the burns to children less than 5 years of age. 76% of the people burned by hot beverages were under 5 years of age.

It takes only one second for water at 155 degrees F to cause a third degree burn.

Set your hot water heater to temperatures of 125 degrees or less. Massachusetts law states that the temperature must be between 110 degrees and 130 degrees.

Test the bath water before you put the baby in it. Always supervise young children in the bath. Babies and toddlers like playing with knobs and levers. They may turn on the hot water when you turn your back.

55% of tap water scald patients were under 5 years of age.

While cooking, turn pot handles inward. Do not let children play near the stove or barbecue. This protects children from cooking liquids, grease and hot metal.

Children under five were 5 1/2 times more likely to be burned by cooking activities.

32% of all cooking-related burns were suffered by children under 5 years of age.

I can add, that the surest way to treat thermal burns immediately is by applying copious amounts of cold water directly to the site of the burn. This should counter any further immediate damage from the effects of heat. However, it is not a substitute for medical care, if required. Seek medical attention should a severe burn result from an exposure.

Be safe!

Derby Day Feb. 28 For Cub Scout Pack 42

Cub Scout Pack 42 at St. Johns Church will hold its annual Pinewood Derby and Regatta Saturday, Feb. 28, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Ward 2 Community Center (known to old timers as the Fore River Clubhouse), 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

The Pinewood Derby is a fun time for the more than 80 active scouts in Pack 42 and their families. Due to the size of the pack, the kids are unable to invite the general public to watch them race their homemade cars on Derby Day.

2008 Walk Sets Record, Proceeds To Purchase Digital Mammography Equipment

Quincy Medical Center Thanks Walk Supporters

Quincy Medical Center recently held a thank you party to acknowledge the generous support of the 1,200 walkers, businesses, organizations, volunteers, and donors who raised a record $206,000 for the 11th Annual QMC Cancer Walk.

Proceeds from the Sept. 28 walk will be used to purchase digital mammography equipment.

"Thanks to your generous support and hard work, we are better able to fight cancer right here in our community by providing your neighbors with free cancer screenings, cancer education and the latest medical technology to detect cancer," said Gary

Gibbons, MD, QMC President & CEO.

"Thank you all for making our Walk a great success, and we look forward to seeing you again on Sept. 27 for the 12th Annual QMC Cancer Walk."

The QMC Cancer Walk organizers presented certificates to the following top fundraising teams:

Family Teams

1) Positive Thinkers $9,427.70 (Durkin/Canavan families)

2) Ed's Gang $3,115 (Rand family)

3) Sheila's Squad $3,115 (Hamilton family)

Company Teams

QCU Cancer Crusaders

$6,804.34 (Quincy Credit Union)

SSOC Superstars $2,920 (South Suburban Oncology)

Fallon Ambulance $2,842.87

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital, providing the highest quality, most personalized and comprehensive medical and surgical services to patients throughout the South Shore.

QMC is a clinical and academic affiliate of Boston University School of Medicine and Boston Medical Center, and is a leader in quality benchmarks both state and nationwide.

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER Chairman of the Board Bob Curry and QMC President & CEO Gary Gibbons, MD, flank the top fundraising family teams for 11th Annual QMC Cancer Walk: Teresa Rand of Ed's Gang; Angela and Deidre Durkin of Positive Thinkers; and Laura Hamilton of Sheila's Squad.

Agatha Christie Mystery On Future Bill At ENC

"Ten little soldier boys went out to dine;

"One choked his little self, then there was nine."

The familiar phrase will be heard again in Quincy when the Communication Arts Department of Eastern Nazarene College presents And Then There Were None, a stage adaptation of the classic Agatha Christie mystery Ten Little Indians.

Three performances of the play will be staged Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 26, 27 and 28, at 7:30 p.m. at the Cove Fine Arts Center on the ENC campus in Wollaston.

Tickets are $10 for general admission and $5 for students.

The plot revolves around 10 strangers who are lured to an island only to be murdered one by one against a background of hypocrisy, guilt and justice in an unjust world.

And Then There Were None has been performed around the world for 60 years and Ten Little Indians has sold more than 100 million copies, making it the best-selling crime novel ever.

Attorney Will Issue Opinion On Faxon Field Dispute In March

Boston attorney Stephen Finnegan said Tuesday that he will review all the issues in the controversy over the Faxon Field track project and submit his opinion to the School Committee in March.

Finnegan, counsel for the Massachusetts Association of School Committees, was asked to examine the legal aspects of the track controversy by the School Committee in mid-January.

School Committee Vice Chairman David McCarthy composed the Jan. 26 letter asking Finnegan to rule on the three issues described below:

1. Does Faxon Field fall under the jurisdiction of the Quincy School Committee?
2. Does Mayor Thomas Koch have the authority to locate the track on Faxon field without the approval of the Quincy School Committee?
3. Will the track project violate state wetlands provisions?

Finnegan's opinion will not be binding on either the School Committee or the administration, but a favorable opinion will strengthen the case for opponents of a Faxon Field track.

McCarthy said the city deeded Faxon Field to the school department in 1964 and, therefore, the School Committee makes the final decision on its use.

In fact, McCarthy said the School Committee already has acted. Members rejected the Faxon Field site by a 4-2-1 vote last summer.

"The vote's been taken," said McCarthy who believes that Pageant Field is an ideal site for the new track.

Vice chairman McCarthy and members Anne Mahoney, Ellen Dwyer and Kevin Mulvey opposed the Faxon Field track location while Koch and member Nick Puleo approved the site and Joanne Bragg abstained.

Since the vote, Mulvey has left the School Committee and his seat filled by Rep. Ron Mariano.

McCarthy said one of the four opponents would have to rescind his or her original vote and he doesn't see that happening.

"You could stuff a track in there," McCarthy said of the Faxon Field plan promoted by Koch. However, he warns of flooding, wetlands, parking issues, and general chaos.

McCarthy said track meets would engender the kind of confusion created each summer in the area when the carnival comes to town.

Opponents of Pageant Field cite such issues as the potential loss of century old trees and two softball fields as well as infringement on the picnic area.

In addition, members of the Adams family do not want a track at Pageant Field and that could prove to be a major obstacle to reconsidering Pageant Field.

Council Begins Search For New City Auditor

City Council President Jay Davis announced Feb. 2 that the council's search for a new auditor has begun. The position has been vacant for six months.

The auditor's position was advertised in the Boston Globe on Dec. 14 and 16 and Davis said he has a list of six to eight possible candidates for the job. He invited other councillors to submit qualified prospects.

Davis, also, announced that he has asked Councillors Michael McFarland and Brian McNamee, Ward 6, to serve on the council's search committee.

The council has operated without an independent auditor since July 1 when Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick resigned after accepting a position as Business Manager for Norfolk County Agricultural School

JAY DAVIS

In the months since Fitzpatrick's departure, Susan O'Connor has acted as interim auditor while being employed by the city's Municipal Finance Department.

Candidates should have a minimum of five years municipal finance experience in Massachusetts, CPA certification or a master's degree in business administration, public finance or accounting.

In addition, candidates must have a thorough knowledge of account, strong computer skills include MS Word, Excel and MUNIS.

Resumes and responses must be sent to Council Clerk Jeanne Reardon

John Adams Influence On Foreign Policy Explored

John E. Hill, a professor of politics and history at Curry College, will explore John Adams' role in establishing the patterns of American foreign policy Thursday, Feb. 26, at 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St.

In the process of winning the Revolution, the Founding Fathers not only used the hard power of military force and foreign alliance but they also established principles for international relations that guided U.S. foreign policy into the 20th century.

Professor Hill holds that Adams played a far more important role than is generally recognized in establishing these principles and will offer some thoughts on how these principles may apply to the present day.

He is the author of Democracy, Equality and Justice: John Adams, Adam Smith and Political Economy. There is no admission charge for his appearance to which everyone is welcome.

Pre-Kindergarten Screening March 17

Parents or guardians of children who meet the eligibility requirements for the Quincy Public Schools' "Integrated" Pre-Kindergarten Programs must schedule an appointment no later than Friday, March 6.

The programs are for children with special needs and typically developing peers who are 3 to 4 years old before Aug. 31. Priority is given to 4 year olds. Classes are half-day sessions held on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Pre-Kindergarten screening will be held Thursday, March 17, and Tuesday, April 7. Appointments may be made by calling the school that meets your eligibility requirements.

For children who are eligible for classes under the Title I Integrated Pre-Kindergarten Program call the Snug Harbor School at 617-984-8951 for the Snug Harbor and Clifford Marshall Schools or the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center at 617-984-8777.

For children who reside in a non-Title I City Wide Integrated Pre-Kindergarten Program district call the Snug Harbor School at 617-984-8951. There is a tuition fee for this program.

For children who are 3 and 4 years old a Special Education Screening, consistent with the Special Education Act, will be held to identify those with special needs at the Snug Harbor School, 617-984-8951.

QUINCY COLLEGE BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Seeks Nomination for a Board Member

The Appointing Council Shall Meet To Consider Qualified Applicants For Appointment To The Board

Nominees are to be considered for appointment to fill one vacancy

Board members are advocates for the institution, and have certain governance and oversight responsibilities for the College as specified in the enabling legislation. Members are expected to attend regular meetings, ordinarily scheduled in the evening, and to participate fully as a member of specific subcommittees usually meeting several times a month during the day. Additionally, members are participants in Commencement College Ceremonies, and demonstrate in actions and word a commitment to the mission and purpose of the College. Members must submit an annual financial disclosure form to the City Clerk.

Interested individuals must submit a letter of interest and resume, to the Appointing Council, to be received on or before March 26, 2009. The Appointing Council shall meet to consider qualified candidates, and will provide an optional opportunity for interested parties to address the Appointing Council. The Council welcomes diversity in applicants and encourages anyone who believes he or she might contribute positively to the continued success of the institution to respond. Those with experience in higher education are encouraged to apply.

Recycling Quincy Public Schools

Met with QPS Recycling Team. Last meeting was November '08. Slumping demand for recycled material has had tremendous effect on earnings. As a member of the Tri-town collaborative for waste and recycling services with Braintree and Weymouth, Quincy enjoys guaranteed fixed price for recyclables despite market fluctuations. Consequently, Tri-town members are probably only towns in state earning cash and not PAYING to dispose of recycles!

Green Team Environmental Club

All schools are invited to join Green Team Environmental Club sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection. Participation allows teachers access to myriad pre-built lessons in multiple disciplines to increase awareness of environmental issues.

Cardboard Recycling

Some schools have insufficient recycling containers. Complete survey of recycling needs for all school ordered. Capitol has agreed to start filling that order.

Idle Free Zone—Thanks to effort initiated by teacher Gina Joyce, No Idling signs have been installed outside Sterling Middle School. Citywide "No Idling" ordinance submitted to Mayor's Office. "No Idling" signs to be installed at all QP schools.

Styrofoam Food Trays—Research underway by Joanne Morrissey for QPS lunch programs to become Styrofoam free. Many substitutes being studied for cost effectiveness.

Video—Sterling in production of student video promoting environmental Portable Recycling Containers—Members of the committee to research purchasing portable recycling containers for use by coaches.

Green Newsletter—Possibility of resurrecting environmental quarterly published by students for students

OLD BUSINESS

Recycling at YMCA

Y has installed recycling containers around building. DPW has agreed to accept material.

Recycle Outreach Kits

100 cloth shopping bags donated by Capitol Waste have been outfitted with material to promote recycling and are ready for distribution.

Recycling in Condos

Promotional materials delivered to The Hamilton (176 units) and Hamilton Bay (175.) Working on spreadsheet of all condos and apt. buildings.

Empties For Cash

Program to recycle ink and toner cartridges and cell phones. Members will research having metal boxes constructed for purpose of collection. Committee looking for donated welder/labor.

NEW BUSINESS

SEMASS Tour

Tour being planned for SEMASS waste to energy plant in W. Wareham where all Quincy's trash is disposed.

Recycling Barrels

Access to DPW Yard

Many residents need access to yard for recycling and yardwaste year-round. Problems with keeping Yard open on Saturdays attributed to budget and scheduling constraints. Will discuss with Commissioner.

Recycle Outreach

All media avenues were reshaped. A comprehensive list of community newsletters and events to be comprised. Also research electronic ads on internet.

Trash or cash space ad distributed to QPS booster books, COA and HNC newsletter.

Discussed ways to target individual neighborhoods with recycling support materials.

Discussed involving partnerships between City and small businesses to increase recycling and supply recycling containers.

John Brothers from Quincy Asian Resources to attend next meeting to discuss strategies to increase recycling in Asian community. City may sponsor booth at Chinese New Year celebration at NQHS on February 8.

Status of certain senior housing complexes to be reviewed as pertains to public or private ownership

Morrissey Retains Joint Legislative Chairmanships

Sen. Michael Morrissey has been reappointed chairman of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Telecommunications, Utilities and Energy and the Joint Committee on Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure.

"I am extremely pleased to be able to continue my efforts in the arenas of energy and telecom, as well as consumer protection and licensure for my constituents and all the people of the Commonwealth," said Morrissey.

The Telecommunications Committee oversees a broad range of energy issues, utility and communication service providers. The Consumer Protection Committee also regulates boards of registration for building trades and professional occupations.

In the last legislative session, the Consumer Protection Committee shepherded through the passage of increased consumer protections of gift certificates and gift cards as well as comprehensive identity theft reform.

"It was crucial to strengthen and update identity theft protections in the Commonwealth in this rapidly changing electronic world," said Morrissey.

The Green Communities Act, a comprehensive energy reform package aimed at spurring development in renewable energy and reducing overall usage, was first taken up by the Telecom and Energy Committee.

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

"I am proud of the committee's work on Green Communities," said Morrissey.

"I believe it will go far towards reducing our overall energy usage, aiding residents, businesses and municipalities in clean energy development projects and moving further towards less fossil-fuel dependence."

Morrissey also retained his seat on the prestigious Senate Ways and Means Committee.

"I am excited to continue working constructively with Chairman (Steven) Panagiotakos and the other gifted legislators on Ways and Means," he said.

"The South Shore has been well represented on Ways and Means and I am proud to be given the opportunity to once again add my voice to the delegation."

Morrissey also has been reappointed to the Joint Committee on Economic Development and Emerging Technologies and to the Senate Committee on Post Audit and Regulatory Oversight and the Senate Committee on Global Warming.

Don White At Stone Temple Coffeehouse

Singer/songwriter Don White will perform Saturday, Feb. 21 at 8 p.m. at the Stone Temple Coffeehouse in Parish Hall at the United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Quincy Quiz

How well do you know your city?

Do you, as an old timer, know as much as the lady from Dubuque who saw the John Adams story on HBO and ventured east to learn more about the city that fascinated her.

Or are you, as a newcomer, so busy settling in that you haven't had the time to find Wollaston Beach or City Hall much less the Quincy Yacht Club or the Adams Birthplaces.

Does it embarrass you, as a long time resident, when a stranger asks you the way to Moswetuset Hummock and you have to shrug and admit to him, "I'm a stranger here myself."

In an effort to fill these possible vacuums, The Quincy Sun this week is restarting its once popular Quincy Quiz to test your knowledge of the city, its history, geography and people.

Try it. There are no prizes but it's fun. Maybe you know the answers already. But, who knows, you may pick up some little bit of trivia you always wanted to know but were afraid or too shy to ask.

This week's five questions:

1. What is the name of the MBTA station in South Quincy?

2. What is the nickname of the North Quincy High School athletic teams?

3. What well-known building stands at 8 Adams St.?

4. What do the initials GAR stand for in the Paul Revere GAR Post?

5. Who was Louisa Catherine Adams?

A correct answer to 1 gets you a grammar school diploma, 2 a high school diploma, 3 a college degree, 4 a masters degree and 5 a Ph.D.

ANSWERS

1. The South Quincy MBTA stop is called Quincy Adams Station.
2. The North Quincy High nickname is the Red Raiders.
3. The Adams Academy building, now the home of the Quincy Historical Society, is at 8 Adams St.
4. The initials GAR stand for Grand Army of the Republic, the organization of Civil War veterans.
5. Louisa Catherine was the wife of John Quincy Adams.

Six Quincy Students On Wentworth Institute

Wentworth Institute of Technology has announced the names of six Quincy students who are on the Dean's List for the fall semester. They are: Edward Frontino, Bethany Keenan, Kun Chong Lam, Terry Szeto, Marcel Tatu Makulo and Calvin Chan.

Patrick Morrissey On MMA Dean's List

Massachusetts Maritime Academy has named Cadet Patrick Morrissey of Quincy, to the Dean's List for the fall semester.

National Fire Protection Association Honors 2 Residents

Quincy Credit Union Participating In 'Invest In America Auto Program'

Through a national partnership with auto manufacturers, and affiliation with the Massachusetts Credit Union League, Quincy Credit Union will be participating in the "Invest in America Auto Program."

The program originated as a partnership between the Michigan Credit Union League and auto manufacturers like General Motors and Chrysler/Jeep.

The concept soon grew into a national program including hundreds of credit unions across the United States. And, since credit union members pay an average of one percent less on their interest rate as compared to other financial institutions, it was a win-win situation for the Credit Union Member looking to purchase a new auto, and auto manufacturers hoping to bolster auto sales.

Some manufacturers are offering specialty pricing while others present the buyer with rebates on new auto purchase. The buyer simply needs to be a Credit Union Member or finance their new auto with their Credit Union to receive the benefits of the program. Each manufacturer has slightly different requirements which are outlined at www.qcu.org or through www.lovemycreditunion.org

To learn more about the Invest in America Program at Quincy Credit Union, visit www.qcu.org or stop in at 100 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

On Sunday, Feb. 8, 2009, at approximately 9:30 p.m., Officer Roger White was dispatched to the area of 23 East Elm Ave. on a report of an assault and battery, "the victim was jumped."

Upon arrival, Officer White interviewed the victim, an Eastern Nazarene College student, who stated that he was on the Wendell Avenue side of the campus when he observed three males standing around. He said that he didn't think much of it until he heard footsteps approaching him.

When the victim stopped, the suspects pushed him down in the snow bank and then all of them started punching him while he was down on the ground. One of the suspects then kicked him numerous times.

The victim began yelling for help in an attempt to get attention from neighbors or other students. The suspects then stopped and ran toward their car and drove off down Wendell Avenue. The victim could not provide the license plate of the suspect's vehicle, but did provide a color and make, as well as descriptions of the suspects.

Officer White then searched the general area for the suspects and approached a vehicle traveling in the opposite direction at the intersection of Elm Avenue and East Elm Avenue. The vehicle matched the description of the suspect vehicle and had three occupants in it. The Officer noted that the three occupants, all males, looked at him briefly and turned away. The suspect vehicle then increased its speed as Officer White turned his cruiser around to catch up to the suspects. The officer was able to catch up to the vehicle and noted that the driver failed to use his directional on two occasions. The suspects were stopped in the area of 59 West Elm Avenue. Officer White looked inside the vehicle and saw that the occupants matched the description of the suspects provided by the victim.

A Job Well Done

The victim arrived at the location of the stop and the three suspects were removed from the vehicle. The victim first stated that the car was the same one that the suspects got into and secondly, he identified each one of them as well as their role in assaulting him.

Officer White was specifically interested in the suspect who kicked the victim because it is a felony charge, which is arrestable. Since the assault and battery of punching by the other two suspects is not arrestable, if not in the presence of a Police Officer, based on Massachusetts state law, Officer White obtained their information and will file complaints against them.

The "kicker", a 19-year-old Quincy resident, was arrested and charged with "Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon", to wit a shod foot. The other two suspects, both 18 years old, one from Quincy and the other from Wrentham, were allowed to leave but will face charges in Quincy District Court. The victim suffered minor injuries but did not require medical attention.

Nice Work!

RAD COURSE OFFERED: (Rape-Aggression-Defense) This 4 session program will be held on Monday, March 9, 16, 23, and 30 from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. This program is a hands-on, women-only course that begins with The Quincy Sun Staff Remembers Henry W. Bosworth, Jr.

By TOM HENSHAW

Henry Bosworth was a throwback to the newspapermen of old.

Don't call him a journalist for that implies that he was writing and editing from an ivory tower. He gathered his news from the folks who called him directly at the office and those he met at church or at the corner store or at city hall and batted it out on an old Royal typewriter. He never came to terms with the computer age. He was, in a word, an original.

He was also my friend for 62 years.

We first met in the newsroom of The Patriot Ledger. We were both 22 and just back from working for our uncle in the Pacific, he with the destroyer Cogswell in Tokyo Bay, I with the Third Marine Air Wing in the Philippines.

The Ledger of the mid-20th century was a far cry from the Ledger of today. The newsroom, the sports department, even the managing editor's office was crowded into a tiny room overlooking Temple Street. One wonders what they did with the brooms when they gave us the closet.

Relations among the staff were close, too. I had a car. Henry had none. When it came time for Henry to have his first child, it was my vehicle that was chosen to deliver his wife to the hospital. We were three abreast crammed in the front seat of a '38 Plymouth coupe. Henry concerned with Dot's comfort, I concerned that her baby would not be born in my car, but we made it, as Gail, now a grandmother herself, can attest.

The staff of the Ledger, circa 1946, was so small that every Tuesday and Friday night our sports editor, Pres Hobson, would raid the newsroom for anyone who knew the difference between a baseball and a hockey puck to cover a high school basketball game with the admonition: "Don't forget the junior varsity box score. They like to see their names in print, too, you know."

"The JV box score." The words speak to the very essence of what has come to be called "community journalism," the kind that gives equal coverage to the garden club and the middle school honor roll as it does to city hall and Beacon Hill, the kind that is practiced by The Quincy Sun.

Those days at the Ledger ended when I got myself fired.

The guys in the back shop, members of the ITU, went out on strike. Relations between management and labor were downright bitter. Clearly, Prescott Low, the publisher, was out to break the union. I used to stop and chat with the guys on the picket line when I went to work. I was told to cut it out. I didn't. Ergo, I was unemployed.

For a while, in a fit of pique, with an attitude that said, "I'll show the (expletives deleted)," I considered joining the Quincy Journal, the weekly paper founded by the strikers to harass the Ledger. Henry was one of those who talked me out of it. It was good advice.

Eventually, I caught on with the Associated Press and embarked on a path that took me from Yellowknife in the Canadian Arctic to the back alleys of Piedras Negras in Mexico to London, Amsterdam, Copenhagen and points in between. Henry remained in Quincy, the city he loved, and we lost touch for a bit.

After 15 years, I came back to Boston with the old Sunday Herald and found Henry gainfully employed as a columnist and a star reporter for its sister publication, the afternoon Traveler. Once again we were working under the same roof. But not for long. He spotted an opportunity and took it.

Over the years, the Ledger had expanded into a regional paper, covering the news from Plymouth on the south to Wellesley on the north. With every step in the expansion there was less and less space for "the JV box score."

Henry did what every newspaperman dreams of doing but rarely has the guts to do. At an age when many of us start thinking of IRAs and retirement, he quit the Traveler, pooled his resources and started his own paper, a weekly just around the corner from a strong, long established daily.

The Quincy Sun was born in a second floor office over a camera shop on Foster Street. There was Henry, a desk, a typewriter and not much else. Every now and then, when I could escape from duty at the Herald, I'd drop by and do a story or two, usually an interview with Jim McIntyre, the mayor.

Then there came a time when the Herald folded. I helped found a hockey magazine that also folded after two issues. I did publicity for a political candidate, a Republican, no less, and a loser. I sat down to write the great American novel which never saw the light of publication. Then Henry called.

We worked together on his Sun through one of the most turbulent periods modern day Quincy has experienced, the administration of Mayor Joe LaRana, the only time, to my knowledge, that Henry ever took sides in an election. He didn't think Joe was doing right by his beloved Quincy and he told him so in print. They have since made up. Well, sort of. They never became close friends but at least they stopped hurling thunderbolts at each other.

Henry the boss could be different from Henry the friend. Henry the boss could be difficult at times. And there are those who subscribed to the base canard that I too could be difficult at times. Whatever, those times coincided after 10 years and I left the Sun for what appeared to be greener fields with the Manner Newspapers.

Remembering Quincy Sun Founder Henry W. Bosworth, Jr.

Condolences, Memories, Tributes And Thank Yous

I am writing this letter on behalf of the Happel family and would like to thank everyone who was there to support our family during this difficult time in the passing of Henry Bosworth.

My mother Gail is Henry's oldest child. Our family loved and cherished Henry very much. We will miss him dearly.

The tribute given to him was at times overwhelming, but will forever be remembered and cherished. We will forever be grateful to the hundreds of people who came out to honor him. The stories people told and the good things people had to say was very special to us.

Our family always knew how great a person he was and it was great to know that so many others felt the same way.

I would personally like to thank Sheriff Michael Bellotti and Lt. Brian Tobin of the Quincy Police Department. Their support was very much appreciated during this troubling time.

I also want to thank the Quincy Police Department and The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office for all their help during the wake and funeral.

Thank you Quincy for showing us why my grandfather was always proud of having you in his newspaper's name.

Sincerely,
Fred Happel

To the Family of Henry W. Bosworth, Jr.

I wish to add, what must be a large response, my sympathy and deep condolences for your loss.

Henry and my father knew each other for decades and my father had the highest respect for him as a publisher, family man and friend.

With his passing, Quincy loses what I would call a "piece of old Quincy."

Our thoughts and prayers are with you.

Sincerely,
Stephen C. Ricciardi

To all the family:

I'm so sorry about your father passing away so suddenly.

I'll miss him.
So will Quincy.

"Henry was a legend in the city of Quincy. He was part of the life of the city as a reporter and a publisher and other non-profit activities like the muscular dystrophy marathon. He was a fixture in the city. His passing leaves a hole. Hopefully, his son will carry on."

Dear Quincy Sun:

Writing to express my sympathy with the loss of your publisher, Henry Bosworth. When we moved to Quincy from South Boston 15 years ago (moving into our new home) we received a complimentary copy of The Sun. We've been subscribing to it since then. It's a breath of fresh air. Even the advertising is refreshing compared to the Boston papers which can have trashy ads.

While most newspapers in Massachusetts tend to a liberal slant - editorial and otherwise - I found The Sun to be a class act with good common sense (very lacking today). Mr. Bosworth did an excellent job and his life experiences certainly were reflected in the paper.

I hope that The Sun will

Dear Bob:

I am writing to convey the sympathy and care of my congregation to you and your family upon the occasion of your father's death. It is difficult to envision the City of Quincy without him. His leadership in the city was truly significant. There were so many of us here in Quincy Point who belonged to his unofficial "fan club." His genuine enthusiasm for our city gave us all encouragement about the future of Quincy.

I want you and your family to know how much The Quincy Sun is an essential part of the fabric of our lives. The paper has helped to generate a unique sense of community in our city.

Every Thursday I await the arrival of the postal carrier. I make a quick run next door to Dunkin' Donuts for a cup of coffee, snatch The Quincy Sun from the secretary's hands, take a break from work and read the paper. It's like a weekly attendance at a mini-reunion of our extended family in Quincy.

At church this past Sunday, we gave thanks for the life of Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. and we hope that your memories will be blessed.

Sincerely,

The Rev. Ann G. Suzedell
Pastor

Henry Bosworth was a true Quincy icon.

He loved "his" City and the people in it. He was dedicated to sharing all the goodness about Quincy in his Quincy Sun.

I don't think I ever read an indecent or negative story in that newspaper. I truly love Henry, as do many, and will miss him dearly.

I was in his office last Wednesday to give him a picture on a story we were doing on "Love comes in many forms" for Valentine's Day. We had a wonderful visit with his usual greeting of, "hello my dear."

He would always tell me stories of my Dad...he knew how much I loved to hear them. Henry wanted to start running old photos weekly in "The Sun", and of course they were neatly displayed on his very organized desk!

I want Henry's family to know that he and I started talking about family and grandchildren and I complained how my granddaughter lives in Indiana and I hate how far away she is. Henry threw his arms up in the air and announced that he is the luckiest man in the world because all his family, his grandchildren, and great-grandchildren all live right here! He said one of his granddaughters is taking broadcasting at QHS and one of his grandsons loses sleep if he gets a grade lower than an A-. Oh Henry was beaming only the way Henry can. He was so proud of them all.

His love for his family and country was unconditional with true devotion. I will miss my friend. Quincy will miss him dearly.

Fondly,
Maryrose Mirick

Regrettably, because in the post-Watergate era of "gotcha" journalism, Henry never descended to it. Nor did I.

Later, when I retired from what had become the Community Newspaper Company, Henry came to my retirement party. During a quiet moment in the festivities, he suggested that, should retirement become boring, he might have something for me to do. One day a week was enough to start, then two, sometimes three.

For the fourth and final time we were back working together under the same roof once again. Late in the afternoon, our day's work done, while we waited for my limousine, the MBTA's RIDE, to pick me up, we would reminisce, two old war-horses recalling the days of their youth. At times, I think Henry kept me around for just that purpose.

Henry is gone now. I have lost a friend. So has Quincy. But Henry's legacy, The Quincy Sun, remains, still the ultimate community newspaper, still reporting "the JV box score."

By LAURA GRIFFIN

No one knew Quincy better than Henry as I found out early on when I started working for the Sun.

I led my first report on the high school track project, stating the project was moving along at "marathon speed." City council had just fully funded the project at Pageant Field.

Henry shook his head and I dropped "marathon speed." Henry knew better as he knew so much about the city and its workings. He loved its history and its rugged politics.

Even more, Henry loved Quincy's commitment to all its people through such groups as Father Bills, the Salvation Army, the churches, synagogues and agencies.

And he wanted to tell the world about Quincy and its citizens through his beloved Quincy Sun.

Henry was a challenge to the rest of us, visitors and staff alike. He wasn't interested in vacations. As far as I know, he only took one in decades.

Five days a week, 52 weeks of the year, Henry was at his desk.

He greeted one and all with, "Hey, kid," energizing us to do more.

We all thought he'd live forever.

The world got old last week.

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

To Henry I was "Marie From Sunny Italy" as he would say oftentimes when he entered the office. Or he would sing a line from the song, "Marie the Dawn is Breaking."

While I was at The Patriot Ledger, Henry and I both won the Unity Awards, and were pictured in the paper. After I left the Ledger, I would walk the Mall at the South Shore Plaza with friends and I would often see Henry walking with his friends.

After a while he asked me if I would like to come to work part-time at the Sun, and cover just one meeting, the License Board. I hesitated because I had covered countless meetings while at the Ledger and I wasn't ready to go that route again.

However, one morning, he convinced me after telling me that the meeting was held in the morning, and different than the long night meetings I had covered in the past.

Well that was almost 16 years ago and I have never regretted it for one minute.

Both Henry and his son Bob and daughters Dolly and Donna, as well as the rest of the staff, are a unique group of the most caring people and all create a wonderful environment to be working with.

Henry was never a demanding boss, but one in which you just wanted to please by your writing and performing duties on a weekly basis.

I would often walk into his office when he arrived and talk to him about any interesting news that might have happened over the week-end, or about our swimming pools and the problems we both were having with them.

Last year he decided to cover his pool and plant grass. Just last week after the practically daily snow storms, I said to him, "Bet you're glad to get rid of your pool." He agreed.

Following the recent deaths of my husband and grandson, Henry would always inquire as to how I and my family were getting along. Always so caring.

Henry was very fond of my brother Pete Ricciuti, former Public Works Commissioner.

Pete passed away 10 years ago, and when I returned to work Henry handed me a check. I looked at him with a puzzled look. He looked up and said "You would have been here." I have never forgotten that kindness.

That's the kind of gentleman Henry was. The office will never be the same without him.

By DONNA GRAY

The Quincy Sun has been a big part of my life for many years, starting in 1977 as a college graduate looking for a job.

Dad actually had gotten me my first job when I was in high school for Attorney Joseph Prone, right down the hall from him when The Quincy Sun was located above Kincaide's Furniture Store on Hancock Street, across from Colman's store.

By 1977, the Sun had moved down Hancock Street to its present location. Dad asked me if I would like to work for him, so for a while I worked half the day at the Sun and the other half for the attorney, running from one end of Hancock Street to the other. It didn't take too long for me to know the newspaper business was in my blood and that I wanted to work for Dad fulltime. The office was busy all the time with people coming in to see their friend Henry, who must have known everyone in Quincy.

Everyone works hard at the Sun, trying to get the paper out every week. Dad worked the hardest, putting in long days, six days a week, rarely taking a day off or a vacation. We finally convinced him a couple of years ago to close the office on Saturdays and he really enjoyed his two days off on the weekends.

Dad was a wonderful father, always loving and caring about each of his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren... He always worried about me getting to work if snow was in the forecast. "Call me in the morning," he would say, meaning he would want me to stay home from work rather than drive from my home in Pembroke to Quincy in the snow. How many bosses are like that?

The last months or so, I offered to pick Dad up in the morning and drive him home at night... He loved listening to the 40s radio station in my car, and we enjoyed listening to Glenn Miller, Benny Goodman and Frank Sinatra. I am so thankful that we had that extra time together, just the two of us.

I've always known how lucky I've been to work for Dad. Seeing him five days a week, being a member of The Quincy Sun family, proud to say, "Henry's my Dad," and knowing I've been so blessed to have him as my father.

Thank you, Dad.

I love you.
Your daughter, "DJ"

By DOROTHY NEWMAN

I loved my Dad very much.

He was my hero.

I always knew he was there for me and for Kellie and Jay. When I was going through chemotherapy in the early 1980's, he would come every night to Mass General Hospital to be with me after working a long day at the Quincy Sun.

My Dad always wanted to protect me and Kellie and Jay and he did. When my son, Jay, was born, he was so proud that Bosworth was his middle name.

He will always be in my heart and my children's hearts.

I love you Dad,

Dolly

By ROBERT NOBLE

I became associated with Henry Bosworth over fifteen years ago.

Through these years as I accepted more and more photo assignments from the Sun, we became good friends. We had many wide-ranging conversations about politics, religion and community affairs.

We did not agree many times but he was always willing to listen and respect my views and opinions.

We shared many conversations about our experiences in World War II. He was very proud of his service in the U.S. Navy and his service on the destroyer, U.S.S. Cogswell, in both the Atlantic and Pacific Theaters of Operation.

It was most fitting that his last Sunbeams column was about Quincy Point. He had many fond memories of his growing up in the Point and the many friends from that area who served their country and community.

Henry was always a gentleman and because of him I am proud to say that I am now a resident of Quincy Point.

By NOREEN PEPEJONOVIC

Henry loved this city and played such a major roll in its history. A piece of the heart of Quincy is gone. He is already sorely missed.

I've worked for Henry for 5 years and he was so much more than a boss, he was a friend. I loved working for him-even on Tuesdays-he taught me so much about putting a newspaper together and the business that goes along with it.

I will miss the way he always made time for me when ever I came to visit, bringing me into his office, as if he had all the time in the world just to talk to me, telling me that "I'm alright, for a homely looking kid" and discussing whether it was a 1 or 2 martini Tuesday night I could go on and on, but most of all I will miss sitting in his office and listening to his stories. He had the best stories. I will cherish all of them.

So, what else can I say but thank you, thank for the opportunity, the friendship, the stories, and everything. Thanks Henry, thanks for the memories.

By SEAN BRENNAN

I first met Henry Bosworth two and half years ago. It took only five minutes of discussing what would be required of me and what was expected of me to figure out that when it came to his paper, he was boss.

Henry explained to me that if I worked hard I would fit right in. He wasn't trying to put a scare in me, he just wanted me to know that if I wanted to be successful in this business, I should follow his lead. I felt like I was a part of the Quincy Sun family the second I left his office.

Henry was that type of man. Genuine to his core. Work hard and you'll fit right in, don't and you'll be looking for another gig. I loved it and enjoyed every day I had working side by side with him. He didn't treat me any different than reporters who had been here longer. He saw potential in me and made sure I reached deep every week, no excuses, I miss him.

He was a boss who I felt close to quickly. If I had a problem, he would listen and offer some sage advice. If he had a problem I would be there for him. I know that he appreciated all the work I did for him here at the Sun. "Thanks, kid," was a common greeting from Henry. Old school and new school working together in synch. Somehow it fit. It worked. I miss him.

When I heard from his son, Bob, that Henry had passed away, I was surprised. Henry and I had worked a full day on Friday and he gave me the usual "enjoy the weekend and I'll see you on Monday." I had come to expect him to walk through the door at the start of every week, smile and ask me how it was going. That Monday he didn't show. His sun had set.

I know he was beloved by his native Quincy. I want him to know that he was loved by me. He helped put my career back on track and for that I will be forever grateful. He was a great boss and an even better man.

Rest in peace, Henry.

By MICHELLE COLLINS

On Thursday morning I looked up at The Sun and I smiled because it was shining for you, Henry. Shining on the City of Quincy, which you were so dedicated to for so many years. Now every time I look up at The Sun I will think of you. Thoughtful, caring, concerned, generous, appreciative, enthusiastic.

You were a warm hearted person and boss who I am so grateful to have known and worked for. I so enjoyed and will greatly miss the enthusiasm we both had working on the Historical and the 40 Anniversary editions together.

Thank you for the many kind words of appreciation, they mean more to me than words can say. Oh, and I can't forget the chocolates you shared, they were always a nice treat.

The Quincy Sun, what a perfect name for the newspaper owned by a person who shined and touched on so many people's lives in such a warm way. Henry W. Bosworth.

By KELLY BOGNANNO

When I first walked through the door at The Sun this past September, I stepped back in time a bit. A combination of modern and classic techniques all coming together each week for a common purpose: a news packed edition for a city Henry loved.

Each week, Henry and I would head downstairs and start pasting up ads, photos and stories. We'd move things around a few times until they were just right. At first I thought "how is this going to work?" but it did, each edition, week after week, for over 40 years. So, then I thought, "if it ain't broke, don't fix it."

After we laid out the paper on the computer and printed out pages for proofing, Henry would look over each one with pride. Henry would proclaim, "Kel, we have a pretty newsie paper here, eh?"

Back in January, Henry was beside himself that we had a national photo on the front page. He was so excited that he had "contacts" at the Inauguration in Washington, D.C. "Can you believe it, Kel?"

Henry also never failed to thank me every week for coming to The Sun and putting in my effort to publish a paper that he loved so much. I can honestly say that I have never had a boss thank me weekly, and with chocolates, for doing what I was paid to do. Henry appreciated every little bit that the

A Time to Plant

It might be hard to believe, with winter still pounding at our doors, that it's time to start preparing the lawn and garden. But February is an ideal time to get ready for the upcoming growing season.

In some areas, it's not too early to start seedlings. In just a few weeks' time they will be ready for planting, right about the time that the soil and weather are both warm enough to nourish those plants.

To get ready for spring, start planning how you'll begin your seasonal lawn care regime, pick out new plants you'll want for your garden, inventory stored bulbs and seeds, and prep the lawn and garden tools.

Lay out all of your hand tools and check for damage or rust. Clean off rust with a little steel wool, and thinly coat the metal parts with an all-purpose lubricant like 3-in-1 oil or WD-40. Wooden handles should get a fresh, thin coating of a wood-friendly treatment like linseed oil or butcher block oil. Unfold the lawnmower and other gas- or electric-powered lawn tools and prepare them for use. Make sure blades and chains are in place, check to make sure spark-plug connections are clean — maybe even give the starting cord a good tug (in a well-ventilated area) to make sure starting is possible — and electric cords are not frayed. Don't fill gas-powered tools with gas just yet, but do fill a spare gas can with the correct mixture and store away from the house, well away from flames and in a well-ventilated area.

Finally, make sure you have all the lawn and garden supplies you need to handle springtime tasks. This includes fertilizer, extra grass seed for bare spots, mulch and any other items that will make outdoor work go faster and easier.

South Shore Hospital President Honored For Dedication To Healthcare Richard Aubut Conway's Citizen Of The Year

Jack Conway & Company has recognized South Shore Hospital President and CEO Richard H. Aubut as its 2008 Citizen of the Year for his dedication to healthcare on the South Shore, and his leadership in the construction of the new Dana-Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Center in clinical affiliation with South Shore Hospital.

Aubut accepted the recognition at the annual Conway Country Convention, Feb. 13 at the Four Points Sheraton in Norwood.

Conway has been honoring its Citizen of the Year since 1988, and it's presented annually to recognize and honor people in Conway Country who have stood out above the crowd.

"I am humbled to receive the Citizen of the Year Award," said Aubut. "I accept it as an honor on behalf of my colleagues who serve the people of our region with compassion each day."

Aubut oversees a hospital with nearly 3,500 employees, and more than 800 physicians. In the fall of 2009 the hospital's new cancer center is scheduled to open. The center is a place to bring all of the hospital's cancer-related services and affiliates under one roof, to be able to provide service to patients so they won't be on the road from doctor's office to doctor's office.

"This cancer center is so vitally important to the area," said company Chairman Jack Conway. "And Richard Aubut is at the helm, guiding the project to its completion."

The new $95 million medical complex will be run by South Shore Hospital as a joint venture with Boston hospitals Dana-Farber and Brigham and Women's Hospital.

"We are so honored that Jack Conway Co. chose the team effort that has resulted in a new outpatient cancer center at South Shore Hospital for this prestigious award," said Aubut. "Jack has generously supported our charity through serving on our Foundation's Board of Trustees. He leads by example and has encouraged thousands of his team members to advance our mission of healing, caring, and comforting."

Aubut joined South Shore Hospital as vice president of nursing in 1988. He was promoted to vice president of patient care services in 1989, to senior vice president of patient care and support services in 1992, to executive vice president of patient and community health services in 1994, to executive vice president and chief operating officer in 1998, to hospital president and chief executive officer in 2003, and was also named SSheC president and chief executive officer in 2005.

The Jack Conway Company was founded in Hingham Square in 1956 and operates 40 sales offices from Boston, to the South Shore, South Coast and Cape Cod. The firm also has its own full-service mortgage company, Conway Financial Services.

Reap the Rewards Of A Vegetable Garden

(ARA) - During World War II, Americans were encouraged to convert their backyards into Victory Gardens to contribute to the war effort.

The gardens also saved families money, something that was not abundant to most at the time. With the current economic downturn affecting many families' budgets and in light of produce scares in 2008, starting a backyard vegetable garden is a great way to help reduce grocery bills during the summer months while keeping your family supplied with healthy foods.

Even if you don't have a lot of space -- maybe only a balcony -- you can still produce plump red tomatoes, fresh lettuce, spicy peppers and more before the end of summer. Here are some simple tips for gardening in small spaces for big results:

Mix Vegetables With Your Flowers

If you already have an established flower bed, but no more land available for a vegetable patch, work some of your vegetables in between perennials. Carrots and onions don't need a lot of root space, and their foliage above ground can bring variety to the overall look of your landscape. Just make sure your vegetables will have plenty of sunshine and are protected from hungry wildlife.

Start a Container Garden

Balconies and porches are perfect locations for container gardens. Start easy with lettuce seeds, or onions set in a deep window box. Or use a larger pot for peppers or tomatoes.

To kick off the growing season for your tomatoes and peppers, use a Season Starter from Dalen Products, Inc. in your container. This innovative insulating system helps protect seedlings from frost conditions and extends the growing season.

Once established, growing plants can benefit from other Dalen products that help contribute to larger yields and vegetation protection. For instance, Dalen's patented Tomato Tray is designed to channel water directly to a vine plant's root system - critical for establishing healthy tomato plants in the early season. Also, items like Better Reds Mulch Film and Harvest Guard work to ensure that throughout the growing and harvesting season your plants are protected from weeds, drought conditions and early frosts.

Some helpful tips for container gardening are:

- * Find containers that are large enough for the fully-grown plant to prevent root binding.
- * Make sure containers have adequate drainage holes and are not plugged with soil or rocks.
- * Avoid container materials that contain products toxic or harmful to plants.
- * Don't use regular garden soil. Instead, use potting soil or a mix of garden soil with compost or perlite for enhanced drainage.

* Water plants frequently as plants in containers are more likely to dry out due to sun and wind exposure.

Grow Tall Gardens

Cucumbers, squash and melon plants take up plenty of space when they're sprawling across your ground. But getting them off the ground is an ideal solution for maximizing your harvest in a minimum amount of area. Installing a trellis next to plants allows you to direct vine plants' growth upward, while protecting fruit and vegetables from ground rot and pests. Using nylon netting, like Trellis Netting from Dalen Products, around your container pots, a porch railing or your garden beds is a great and durable way to encourage climbing vines.

With good management, you will have beautiful fruits and vegetables available this summer for cooking, canning and snacking - saving you money at the grocery store and giving your family safe and healthy food options. Visit www.dalenproducts.com to find more products perfect for growing your favorite vegetables or fruits in any size garden.

Expert Advice On Energy Saving Tips For The Home

(ARA) - What if you could easily save money and help the environment at the same time? You can. All it takes is a little expert advice on how to make your home more energy efficient.

According to the U.S. Department of Energy, the average family spends $1,900 a year on utility bills. Unfortunately, much of that money is being wasted on inefficient heating and cooling systems, or excess use of appliances, according to Greg Schuman, electrician program chair at Everest Institute in San Bernardino, Calif.

Schuman advises you to break your house down into different systems of energy usage, including heating, cooling, water heating, lighting, computers and electronics, appliances and refrigeration. Once you break down your energy spending into different components, you can look for ways to maximize your energy consumption in each area.

Start with heating and cooling. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, the costs of heating and cooling make up 46 percent of a family's monthly utility bill. Schuman suggests you be conscious of the temperature at which you set your thermostat. Try to set your thermostat as high as is comfortable in summer and as low as is comfortable in winter. Schuman also recommends you buy timed thermostats that can be programmed to use less energy when you are at work during the day and asleep at night.

Second, Schuman says homeowners should take advantage of the sun's natural heating system. "In winter months, you want to take advantage of the sun's heat. Open your southern and western facing windows to let as much light in as possible and make sure to keep your windows as clean as possible. Depending on the size of your windows, the sun can really help heat up a room." But in summer, Schuman advises keeping shades down and draperies closed to prevent the sun from entering.

Lighting is another relatively easy way to save energy. "Look into getting fluorescent light bulbs. Each light bulb can save you approximately $30 in electricity costs over its lifetime," Schuman says. On average, fluorescent bulbs use 75 percent less energy, produce 75 percent less heat and can last up to 10 times as long as regular light bulbs, so they more than make up for the initial expense.

When shopping for new appliances, Thad Becker, electrician program instructor at Everest Institute in San Bernardino, Calif., says to always think of both the immediate price tag and the long-term operating cost. "Sometimes it is worth it to pay more in the short run for a more energy-efficient appliance," Becker says. With refrigerators, top freezers are more efficient than side-by-side units. You also want to look for a fridge with automatic moisture control. Even if you aren't in the market for a new refrigerator anytime soon, Becker says to make sure to cover liquids and food items to prevent moisture from accumulating in the fridge, which makes the fridge work harder.

The stovetop and oven are more expensive to use than a microwave or toaster oven. "Toaster ovens actually use one-third to half as much energy as a full-sized oven, so use your toaster oven when possible," Becker says.

Laundrying clothes differently also saves money. More than 90 percent of the cost of doing laundry comes from heating the water, so Becker suggests washing clothes in cold water whenever possible and making sure to fill loads completely before running them. He also advises not to over-dry clothes and, when possible, to air-dry your clothes. "Air drying is a great way to save energy, and it also has the added benefit of helping extend the life of your clothing," says Becker.

If you are willing to spend a little money, check your insulation. Adding insulation to your attic floor, basement or crawl spaces is relatively easy and can prevent major heat loss in the winter. "If you are uncomfortably cold in the winter or hot in the summer, think about checking your insulation. Most homeowners don't realize that only about 20 percent of homes built before 1980 are well-insulated," Becker says.

"With a few small changes in your daily routine, or relatively inexpensive home improvements, you can really cut down on your energy usage, which can have a significant impact on your long-term utility costs, not to mention the pleasure of knowing that you are helping do your part to conserve energy," Becker says.

Modern-Day Thieves Target Your Computer

Scammers are becoming more creative, but one of their biggest theft tools is still the computer.

If you don't know the differences between a virus, Trojan horse, worm and rootkit, then your computer, your personal information and your money could be at risk.

Beef up your computer's security and set it to automatically update every day. That's how often new viruses come out. Even one virus program might not be enough. Consider also installing spyware or malware programs. Keep your computer's operating system current by getting the updates.

Make sure anyone in your house who uses your computer (the kids really should have their own) can recognize suspicious activity and know not to give out personal information. For young children, set their e-mail to not accept attachments and keep an eye on what they do online.

Be careful where you click. Go to the wrong Web site and you could inadvertently let a Trojan horse into your computer and end up giving control of it to thieves. Investigate programs that will scan links before you open them. AVG, a free virus-protection software, has Link Scanner, which will put a green check beside all links that are safe.

Minimize the number of occasions you check your accounts from your home computer, or call the bank's automated teller instead. Don't sign up for any e-mail correspondence from your bank or credit-card companies. That way if you get e-mail from one of them, you'll automatically know it's a scam.

Take a close look through your computer's hard drive (especially if you've had it for a few years) to make sure you haven't stored any passwords or account numbers.

If you have a friend who loves to pass along jokes or funny links in e-mail, ask him or her to stop. You've no doubt already heard them, and passing along a not-so-funny bug is entirely possible. Worse is if the friend likes to paste whole Web pages into your e-mail. Your computer can be at risk of any malicious code on that page.

Best bet: Use an older computer that's no longer hooked up to the Internet for your checking software and to store your personal information.

Seeding Secrets For A Sensational Lawn

(ARA) - Watering, fertilizing and proper mowing are all important aspects of lawn care. But to maintain that healthy, lush lawn you also need to be smart about seeding.

Fixing some bare spots on the lawn or filling out thinning grass requires the right type of seed, a little know-how and the patience to, literally, watch grass grow.

Paying attention to four factors when seeding can help turn your lawn from flop to fabulous:

Timing Is Everything

Many people wait until warm weather to turn a critical eye on their lawn, even though the very best time to seed is in the fall. But seeding can successfully spruce up your spring lawn -- if you start early enough.

Even if you suspect your region may experience one or two more frosts before spring, go ahead and seed. "Cold will not hurt grass seed," Marshall says. "Better to seed too early than too late."

If you're unsure of proper timing for your area, check with a local lawn expert or university extension program for advice.

Prepare the Ground

Failing to prepare the ground to receive seed is one of the top mistakes homeowners make, Marshall says. If you are seeding bare spots or dead areas, take a rake and scratch the spot until you see more dirt than dead grass. In order to take root, grass seeds must be in direct contact with soil.

To overseed an entire thin lawn, rent a core aerator or slit seeder and go over the lawn first in order to achieve the best possible seed/soil contact.

Choosing the Right Seed

Watering deeply and infrequently is the usual recommendation for an established lawn, but a newly seeded lawn requires more watering than usual because grass seed dies when it dries out.

To get the most out of your grass seed, opt for a seed, such as Scotts Turf Builder Grass Seed with Water Smart, that helps create a good looking lawn with less water. The seed is wrapped in a super absorbent coating that actually holds water to keep the seed moist even if a day of watering is missed. The coated seed will require water once a day and possibly even every other day depending on the climate where you live. Hotter regions may need more frequent watering.

Non-coated seed, by contrast, requires watering multiple times each day in order to keep the seed wet. "When grass seed dries, it dies," Marshall says.

Caring for Grass Seedlings

Once your grass seedlings appear, some simple steps can help you care for your growing lawn, including:

- Fertilize the lawn -- Remember to fertilize the same day you seed. After that, for most areas of the country, it's OK to fertilize your lawn every two months during warm weather.

- Keeping off the grass -- Contrary to popular belief, simply walking on grass seedlings isn't likely to do much harm, but it's a good idea to avoid walking on them if possible. If you've seeded in a high-traffic area it's a good idea to rope off the spot until the seed is well established -- usually after the first mowing.

- Mowing is good for your grass seedlings -- Once grass seedlings reach 2 to 3 inches in height, it's time to mow them. Marshall recommends setting your mower on one of the two highest settings. Trimming the top off new grass actually encourages it to grow laterally, spreading out to fill thin areas.

Smarter Snack Ideas When The Munchies Strike

(ARA) - When the munchies hit at 3 p.m. what do you do? Do you leave your desk and head to the vending machine? Does the thought of the approaching swimsuit season leave you caught between hunger and dread?

At some point during the day -- and often, multiple points -- most people crave a snack. It's easy to grab a snack that's gratifying but high in fat, calories, cholesterol or sodium -- and low on nutritional value.

The desire for healthy snacks (or at least less unhealthy snacks) is not a new one. What is new, however, is the emerging mindset that packing more for the punch, or doing more with less, can allow people to have their snacks and eat them, too. With a few lifestyle adjustments, the 3 p.m. snack -- or the mid-morning or late night snack, for that matter -- can continue.

Get Dense

To gain more from your snacking experience, go for nutrient-dense snacks that are enhanced with a greater amount of better-for-you ingredients. If you have an extra apple or some celery stalks on hand, take advantage of built-in nutrients and pull them out of the refrigerator.

If you are in the mood for a bag of munchies to satisfy your cravings, remember that today's bagged snacks come in a wide range of better-for-you varieties. Snyder's of Hanover, for instance, offers products like multigrain pretzels, chips, and puffs, and recently developed a dedicated EatSmart line of better-for-you snacks that fall into the nutrient-dense category.

Indeed, beyond traditional salty snacks made with whole grains, many bagged snacks today are made with non-traditional snack food ingredients. You can actually increase your intake of vegetables with products like vegetable-based crisps. EatSmart Veggie Crisps and Soy Crisps, for example, are made from real potatoes, tomatoes, spinach and soy.

Make Bold Choices

Nutritionists and foodies alike can attest to the fact that eating more flavorful food lends a certain satisfaction to the eating experience. Those who eat boldly flavored snacks may be less likely to over-consume and can take their time to enjoy how the food tastes.

Recognizing that bold flavors enhance the eating experience, manufacturers are responding with more intense and gourmet flavor profiles for snacks, such as pesto, parmesan, chipotle peppers and fire-roasted tomatoes, among many others.

A quick glance at a supermarket shelf in the snacking section supports the notion that consumers are seeking more unique flavors for snacks. Even the most popular chips come in a broader range of flavors beyond traditional cheese, ranch or sour cream and onion, while crackers are also topped with everything from cracked black pepper to bits of rosemary.

Go Natural

For those looking to maximize their snacking experience, all-natural snacks offer an added benefit of "clean" labels, namely, with fewer preservatives and artificial ingredients. Again, supermarkets and restaurants are offering more natural and organic products, in response to growing customer demand.

Looking for "all natural" or "organic" wording on packaged snacks and taking a few seconds to read the label is an assurance that what goes into snacks doesn't have to be unpronounceable.

Realize That Size Matters

Mindless eating, particularly snacking with little thought of controlling intake, is where a lot of people get into trouble. It may not seem like it when we're eating while working, texting or watching TV, but it's very quick and easy to overdo it.

To make it easier on consumers, snack food providers continue to introduce portion-controlled packaging, through 100-calorie packs and snack size products. Those items, ranging from chips to pretzels to snack cakes, are specifically designed to help people keep track of their snacking and stick to a pre-planned intake.

Pretty soon there won't be an excuse not to snack, given all of the available options. Better-for-you snacking fits into just about any lifestyle -- and, in turn, can help ensure a better fit into that swimsuit.

Simple Ways Seniors Can Stay Active and Healthy

(ARA) - You've worked hard your entire life to earn your retirement, and now you should enjoy it. But you won't be able to actively socialize with friends, family and neighbors, enjoy spending time on your hobbies or taking trips to see the grandchildren if you don't maintain good health and a good quality of life.

The average life expectancy is now 78 years, plenty of time to enjoy your golden years. You don't need to see a doctor every day to stay healthy; with the guidance of your physician, there are many ways you can take care of yourself at home. Here are a few ideas you can try yourself:

* Monitor the information your doctor wants to know. For example, an estimated one-half of senior citizens suffer from hypertension. The Lumiscope Blood Pressure Arm Monitor found at Montgomery Ward (www.Wards.com) allows you to track your blood pressure at home. Daily monitoring can help you and your doctor bring your blood pressure levels down to 120 or lower, which is recommended to avoid risks of stroke or heart attacks.

* Involve your friends, family and neighbors in a weekly yard game of bocce ball, croquet, horseshoes or badminton, to name a few. Not only are yard games good physical exercise, but the competition keeps your mind sharp and social interaction balances out a well-rounded lifestyle.

* Get your hands dirty and plant a garden. Whether you fill indoor pots with beautiful, leafy house plants or plant your entire outdoor landscape in a field of colorful blooms, working with plants is fun and contributes to a sense of well-being.

Plus, the planting process involves a little muscle, helping you to keep your body in good condition.

* Relive some of your childhood fun. Try a daily workout with the Cory Everson Trampoline (www.Wards.com). The trampoline provides a good cardio and muscular workout complete with a stability bar to assist your balance. And you can exercise at your level, without overexerting your muscles. Combine your workout with your favorite tunes and revert to your bouncy youth.

* Join a book club and invite the members to your house. Whether you're into mysteries, historical fiction, biographies or romance novels, stretch your imagination, share your thoughts and engage your fellow book lovers in a good discussion.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A SOLID CHOICE

Patients with missing teeth can choose between dentures, bridges, or implants to fill in the gap(s). While dentures are relatively inexpensive, they require removal for cleaning and must be adjusted periodically. A dental bridge is a permanently fixed replacement that is anchored to teeth adjacent to the gap. This affords a more natural feel than dentures, but it necessitates the modification of the anchor bone (crown removal). Implants, on the other hand, are placed directly in the bone. When the bond between implant and bone is complete, the implant serves as an anchor for replacement teeth or dentures. Keenan Division Champions

QHS Wrestling Finishes Up Successful Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy High School boys wrestling team finished the Patriot League regular season as champions of the league's Keenan Division. The Presidents accomplished the feat in dramatic fashion against Scituate High School.

Senior Liam Keogh, a 215-pound heavyweight, pinned his opponent in the meet's final match to secure a win and the league title. The match victory culminated a regular season that saw Quincy take key wins over Duxbury HS (37-36) and North Quincy HS (41-31).

"Hard work pays off," said QHS head coach Patrick Lane. "It has really shown this year in the improvement and the hard work these kids have put in from day one."

Quincy, which has 12 seniors, five juniors, four sophomores and four freshmen on the varsity roster, used this grizzled experience and new blood, along with hard work and dedication to a grueling sport, to come out on top in a new league and against unfamiliar opponents.

"Kids like Josh Gerry, Paul Reggiannini and Dan Quinn, especially, were working out religiously at the Dungeon (Quincy's new non-profit wrestling facility located on Broad St.), and at other camps and off-season tournaments," added Lane. "But not just those three. Other kids were dedicated to the weight room, adding strength to their repertoire, working out at the Dungeon."

"The work is paying off for these kids individually and hopefully it will continue to pay off for us as a team. Obviously I am going to miss these seniors who have put in four years of hard work, but just the same, hopefully we can garner some recruits and reload instead of rebuild each year."

According to Lane, there was a feeling before the season started back in the early winter that this could be a team that had the talent and ability to compete for a league title.

"This is our big year with all this talent in the senior and junior classes. I knew that this was a year where we could push for a league title and we won our division title which was great. The Patriot League crowns two division champions but in my opinion would be great to have one league champion."

"But we are still top in our division."

Six seniors and a junior accomplished the bulk of the work done during this successful season. Seniors Paul Reggiannini (140 lbs., 25-5 record, 2nd at the Weymouth Tournament, 5th at the Lowell Tournament), Zack Manning (171 lbs., 22-5, 3rd at Weymouth), Dan Quinn (160 lbs., 16-2, 1st at Weymouth), Scott Griffin (152 lbs., 23-6, 3rd at Weymouth), Liam Keogh (215 lbs., 14-12) and Tyler Balcum (119 lbs., 17-12), along with junior Josh Gerry (125 lbs., 31-2, 1st at Weymouth, 5th at

Team Earns Share Of Fisher Division Title

Red Raiders Preparing For Post-Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raiders accomplished one of its stated pre-season goals; the Red Raiders earned a share of the Patriot League's Fisher Division championship following the team's 74-42 season-ending victory over Middleboro High School last Thursday evening.

North finished the regular season with an impressive 16-5 overall record. The team's 12-4 Patriot League mark equaled that of Hanover High School, and although Hanover went 2-0 against the Raiders this winter, the league bases division titles on overall league records, not head-to-head results.

"The way the Patriot League measures it, we tied for a share of the Fisher Division title with Hanover," said NQ head coach Michael Jorgenson. "Although we lost to them twice (72-70 and 65-45), they don't seem to take that into consideration beyond overall league record."

Against Middleboro, senior guard Siobhan Carnell led the Raiders to an easy victory. Carnell finished the game with a game-high 27 points. She also set a school record for most points scored in a season and reached the coveted 1,000-point mark in the first half.

Carnell scored her 1,000th career point in the second quarter, scoring on a 17-foot jumper off a pass from junior Cara Murtagh. With that personal achievement already reached, Carnell moved on and shattered the North Quincy High School single-season scoring record of 464 points, set by Sarah Stanton.

"Siobhan is averaging 21 points per game this season," added Jorgenson. "It was a nice accomplishment (scoring her 1,000th point) for her considering she had only three seasons of varsity play."

"She had always been a good scorer, but she has taken it up scoring-wise this season. She has been pretty consistent and she is a determined player and a team player. It was a great honor for her."

Helping Carnell and the Raiders jump all over Middleboro was senior forward Catherine O'Connell. O'Connell scored 18 points in the win.

The Raiders, who won back-to-back Atlantic Coast League titles before switching leagues this season, will now take a week to prepare for the upcoming South Sectional tournament. But for the moment, the team will enjoy its third league title in three years.

"It was one of our goals

Quincy Babe Ruth League Awarded 'Official' City Charter

Babe Ruth Baseball, Inc., headquartered in Trenton, New Jersey, is pleased to announce that it has designated Quincy Babe Ruth League, Dick Lombardi, President, as the "official" designated charter for the 2009 season for ages 13-15.

Quincy Youth Baseball, Inc., previously a Babe Ruth 13-15 charter, was also vying for charter status as well.

"The decision to grant charter status to either organization was not an easy one," said Robert Faherty, Babe Ruth League National Commander, "but we had to make a decision and move forward. Both organizations have done a truly outstanding job providing the residents of Quincy with excellent opportunities to play baseball at every level of play. And will be expected to continue to do so.

"Quincy Babe Ruth baseball is one of the most successful programs in the United States," Faherty added, "having hosted three 14-year old World Series in the past six years, and has demonstrated an incredible level of community support and cooperation that has become the model for other Babe Ruth programs throughout Massachusetts."

Lowell) were all instrumental in their team's success.

"The season was a little rough because we had many missing weight classes and we had to battle back from deficits against some really good teams," said Reggiannini of his team which finished the regular season at 4-0-1. "But we made up for missing some lighter weight classes with the solid wrestlers that we had. All the seniors from this class wrestled a decent amount freshmen year and we had a lot of mad experience. We all matured very quickly that year and it showed in our season as seniors."

Reggiannini's junior teammate Josh Gerry shared similar sentiments about the season.

"We have a lot of seniors and kids who worked real hard all season and off-season," Gerry said. "Our team dynamic was great. Everybody pulled out the big wins when we needed them, especially Liam Keogh, who won us meets with pins."

Senior Dan Quinn added:

"It was up to the kids who wrestled to pin and that is what we did all season long. I am proud of these guys because the whole team has come a long way since we were all freshmen. We had a tough league schedule and it helped to keep us on edge."

"Wrestling in Quincy used to be a force and I think we have gotten it back on that track this season."

Quincy also received contributions from seniors Salma Goummih (103 lbs), Steve Kamb (189 lbs) and Taylor Radcliffe (285 lbs), junior Mike Kneeland (189 lbs), sophomore Mike Meng (145 lbs) and freshmen Greg Lowe (145 lbs) and Tony Janeiro (125 lbs). The rest of the varsity roster included seniors Scott Griffin, James Wilbur, Steve Shattuck and Mike Brown, juniors Joe Spargo, Sang Do and Lance Peterson, sophomores Jacob Hynes, Michael Mang, Thotsawat Sangsit and Ryan Boyle and freshmen CJ Brooks and Jaleek Leary.

"It has been a very good season for the team and hopefully as we get to the post-season we can continue to make noise," added Lane.

Notes: The Presidents wrestled at Natick High School last weekend in the Division II Metro Sectionals. The top-four finishers in each weight class earn an automatic bid in the state tournament. The results of this weekend, which the Quincy Sun did not have as of press time, will be highlighted in next week's issue.

NQ's Siobhan Carnell Reaches 1000th Point Plateau

By SEAN BRENNAN

It is time to edit the North Quincy High School girls' basketball record books.

Last Thursday, NQHS senior guard Siobhan Carnell passed the 1,000th career point plateau and in the process broke the girls' basketball single-season scoring record of 464 points, previously held by Sarah Stanton.

Carnell, who is averaging 21 points per game and is one of the Patriot League's leading scorers, scored 27 points against Middleboro High School, helping her Red Raiders finish the year in a tie with Hanover High School for a share of the league's Fisher Division championship.

"It is a great honor for her and for her team," said NQ head coach Michael Jorgenson. "Sometimes when a player scores 1,000 points or reaches some other individual goal, it doesn't reflect team success. Sometimes individual achievement is just that, but not with Siobhan."

"The whole team can share in her achievement. These girls play well together and all of them wanted her to get her 1,000th point. Maybe more than she wanted to get it."

Carnell's athletic achievements extends to the soccer field as well as the hardwood (she was a Patriot League all-star as a goalie), but it is her standing in the North Quincy SIOBHAN CARNELL (#23 in the background) shoots and scores her 1,000th career point last Thursday against Middleboro High School. Carnell scored 27 points in a 74-42 win, helping NQ to a share of the Patriot League's Fisher Division championship.

High School community and in the classroom that makes her shine brightly over other student-athletes who have had success on the field, court or ice.

"She is a very humble person and is not all that concerned with what she does individually," added Jorgenson. "It is all about her team. She takes challenges head-on and excels. She is a great example for the younger players and students in the school. She is a great leader."

Her ability to score points at a rapid pace the last three seasons has helped North Quincy become one of the more successful programs in the area. On the court, teams tend to focus on her, and rightfully so, but according to her coach, that has only made North Quincy more dangerous.

"Sometimes we (the coaching staff) look at a box score and see she scored 27 points and wondered how did that happen," said Jorgenson. "She quietly puts up points. And teams know that. It opens up the court for her teammates to get easy baskets and for us to win games."

"Siobhan is a team player and these records were not something she wanted to really talk and think about. Right now I think all she wants is for the team to do well in the post-season."

(a division title) entering the new league," added Jorgenson. "We reached our goal through hard work. The Patriot League is very competitive and every game we played was against a quality opponent.

"But my team feeds off competition and we play our best games when the opponent is tough. The league games were tests that hopefully have prepared us for tournament play. We ended the year clicking as a team and it should carry over and help us starting next week."

The Raiders, at 16-5 overall, is all but guaranteed a first-round home game when the seeds are announced on Friday and home court advantage is something that Jorgenson is looking forward to.

"There are some really good teams at the top of the seeds and having the possibility to host a home game in the first round is an edge," Jorgenson said. "But we will need to play our game to advance no matter where the game is being held."

"I think we can be a matchup problem for a lot of teams. We have good post play with O'Connell and Kristina Anderson and Montana McBirney. And with Carnell and Kathleen Lynch playing so well right now and with the team all playing together as a unit, we should be very good and should have a chance to do some damage."

SIOBHAN CARNELL lays the ball in the basket and in the process breaks Sarah Stanton's single-season record of 464 points. Carnell averaged 21 points per game this year.

UCong Girls Basketball Having A Great Season

UCong, the girls' basketball team from the Union Congregational Church in Wollaston, is in the midst of a great season. The team, which began the season with no coach, no bench and no uniforms, has proceeded to have a very successful winter season. The team is a true Cinderella.

The team is the first basketball team that UCC has fielded in over 30 years and was the vision of Outreach Minister, the Rev. Martha Swanson, whose hard work, determination and optimism against long odds made the team a reality.

Edward Kockanowski of Wollaston coaches the team and the six players on the team are Cassie Swanson, Jaz Caracuate, Klea Avrami, Sam McNally, Christine Kelliher and Ashley Cat-

QRD's February School Vacation Gym Schedule

The Quincy Recreation Department and Director of Recreation Barry J. Welch announce that the QRD will conduct an expanded schedule of supervised gym programs during the upcoming school vacation period. Gyms will be supervised from 9 a.m. until 12 Noon for free activities for boys and girls age 8 through high school.

School gyms will be open in all neighborhoods of the city and will feature activities such as basketball, floor hockey, gym games and dodge ball.

Registration will be held at each location and kids age 8 through Grade 5 will attend from 9-10:30 a.m. Participants in Grade 6-12 will attend from 10:30 a.m. until 12 Noon. Participants may attend the program of their choice and some minor changes in times may occur in some locations to accommodate differences in enrollment.

In addition to the day schedule, the ongoing night gym programs will also be conducted in selected locations and all regular Saturday morning programs will also be conducted on Feb. 21.

Participants are requested to wear sneakers at all locations.

These gym activities are part of "Quincy On the Go!" programs that are designed to promote beneficial active lifestyle among Quincy youth. The following are a list of the gym schedules for the rest of school vacation week:

(Today) Wed., Feb. 18 from 9 a.m. until 12 Noon is as follows: Bernazzani, Beechwood Knoll, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Atlantic and Squantum.

Night gyms will be held at Atherton Hough (5-7 p.m.), Bernazzani (5-7 p.m.) and Montclair (5-8 p.m.).

Thursday, Feb. 19 from 9 a.m. to Noon is as follows: Atherton Hough, Beechwood, Squantum, Wollaston, Point Webster, Merrymount, Montclair and Atlantic.

Night gyms will be held at Merrymount (5-7 p.m.), Bernazzani (5-7 p.m.) and Squantum (5-9 p.m.).

Friday, Feb. 20 from 9 a.m. until Noon is as follows: Bernazzani, Snug Harbor, Wollaston, Atlantic and Point Webster.

staff did to make the paper the best it could be each week.

In my short time here, I came to look forward to the time Henry and I had "downstairs" as we laid out the paper each week. He would often pause and say, "Kel, did I tell you about the time that..." and he always had an interesting tidbit to add. Of course, I would comment on something Navy-related and ask about one of the boats, for example, and he was quick to tell me they were ships, not boats; he said it with a twinkle in his eye, always smiling at my lack of naval knowledge.

I take away from this short time I knew Henry, that you must do what you love every day and if you're not, you need to find out what it is that you love to do, and just do it.

For over 40 years, Henry came to The Sun every day, typed his column on his Royal typewriter, and published what he thought was an asset to the Quincy community. And he was right. The Sun is a wealth of information to all readers.

Henry did what he enjoyed most, informing the citizens, up until his last day with us. I will try, too, in my life, to do what I love every day, so that I may also have such great memories and stories to pass on to those willing to listen.

"And until we meet again,

May God hold you in the hollow of His hand."

Compared to the rest of the Quincy Sun staff, I spent relatively little time with Henry, and yet I was truly impacted by his passing.

Henry was such a force! A good man who positively affected so many people's lives. And he was my first truly professional editor!

I offer my sincere condolences to all of you who worked so closely with him, and special regrets to Bob, Donna and Dolly and to Henry's lifelong friends, Tom Henshaw and Bob Noble.

Sincerely,

Miriam Joseph
Quincy Sun staff

Henry hired me right out of college and, as a young journalist, I could not have learned about the profession from a better man.

He was one of the hardest workers I've known. In fact, I don't think he even took a vacation or missed a day in the seven years I was there. He was dedicated to the paper and to delivering the local news to the city. The one thing I'll always remember is how many people would come up to me when I was on an assignment to ask how Henry was doing and to tell him they said hello. He touched many lives in Quincy and will be missed."

Chris Poisson
Former Staff

All of us have people in our lives who played a major role in getting us to where we are today. In my case, Henry was one of those people.

When I received my journalist's degree from Emerson College in 1990, after transferring from Northeastern University two years earlier, it was until recently probably the worst time since the Great Depression to look for work. And I had no real experience, save for a brief three months at The Patriot Ledger during my Northeastern days. Still, Henry liked the fact that I'd spent some time in his old Ledger stomping grounds and that I was a North Quincy High graduate who'd grown up in the city. In September 1991, more than a year after my graduation, he offered me a job. It was the break for which I'd been patiently waiting.

I'm now employed in my third newspaper position since my seven years at the Sun. There were also a couple of PR gigs and a stint as the Sunday announcer at the former WJLA Radio. Happily, I've remained in touch with most of my former Sun co-workers, including those who are still there.

Knowing that Henry had put in a full day's work on Feb. 6, it was a bit of a shock to hear of his death the following day. He was one of my greatest mentors.

Given his distinguished career, it's safe to say he'd forgotten more about newspapers than I'll ever learn. But one thing I'll never forget is the gift I received from him nearly 18 years ago. He gave me my start, and for that I will be forever grateful.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some unsettling facts about a past situation could come to light. And while you'd love to deal with it immediately, it's best to get more information to support your case.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A straightforward approach to a baffling situation is best. Don't allow yourself to be drawn into an already messy mass of tangles and lies. Deal with it and move on.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Don't be discouraged or deterred by a colleague's negative opinion about your ideas. It could actually prove to be helpful when you finally get around to finalizing your plan.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Ignore that sudden attack of "modesty," and step up to claim the credit you've so rightly earned. Remember: A lot of people are proud of you and want to share in your achievement.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A financial "deal" that seems to be just right for you Leos and Leonas could be grounded more in gossamer than substance. Get an expert's advice to help you check it out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Don't ignore that suddenly cool or even rude attitude from someone close to you. Asking for an explanation could reveal a misunderstanding you were completely unaware of.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Unless you have sound knowledge, and not just an opinion, it's best not to step into a family dispute

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Old virtues such as duty, patriotism and service to one's country sometimes today meet with a certain amount of criticism. So it's good to remember the birthday of George Washington ... "First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen." ... For fifteen years, seven in war and eight as President, Washington founded and guided a new nation to manhood and, as the father of our country, bequeathed a unique and precious heritage to all Americans.

Washington can be remembered for setting an example in manners, bearing character and simple honesty. His name was never associated with scandal or greed. Honor, duty and country were to him the dearest words in the English language. He was truly national, not regional, in outlook.

It would be hard to find a better example to hold up to our youngsters of our nation today

LEGAL NOTICE

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
Mayor James R. McIntyre City Hall
1305 Hancock Street
Quincy, Massachusetts 02169

2009-024 January 20, 2009
Presently pending in the Ordinance Committee of the Quincy City Council

Be it ordained by the City Council, that the Quincy Municipal Code is amended as follows: In Title 9 Public Peace and General add a new Chapter:

CHAPTER 9.20

CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE ORDINANCE PUBLIC CONSUMPTION OF MARIJUANA OR TETRAHYDROCANNABINOL

9:20.010 Prohibition

No person shall smoke, ingest, or otherwise use or consume marijuana or tetrahydrocannabinol (as defined in G.L. 94C, § 1, as amended) while in or upon any street, sidewalk, public way, footway, passageway, stairs, bridge, park, playground, beach, recreation area, boat landing, public building, schoolhouse, school grounds, cemetery, parking lot, or any area owned by or under the control of the city; or in or upon any bus or other passenger conveyance operated by a common carrier; or in any place accessible to the public.

9:20.020 Enforcement

This ordinance may be enforced through any lawful means in law or in equity including, but not limited to, enforcement by criminal indictment or complaint pursuant to G.L. c. 40, § 21, or by noncriminal disposition pursuant to G.L. c. 40 § 21D, by any police officer. The fine for violation of this ordinance shall be three hundred dollars ($300) for each offense. Any penalty imposed under this ordinance shall be in addition to any civil penalty imposed under G.L. c. 94C, § 32L. Said fines shall inure to the benefit of the City of Quincy.

POSSESSION OF DRUG PARAPHERNALIA

9:20.030 Prohibition

No person shall sell, possess or purchase with intent to sell, or manufacture with intent to sell drug paraphernalia, knowing, or under circumstances where one reasonably should know, that it will be used to plant, propagate, cultivate, grow, harvest, manufacture, compound, convert, produce, process. Prepare, test, analyze, pack, repack, store, contain, conceal, ingest, inhale or otherwise introduce into the human body a controlled substance in violation of this chapter.

9:20.040 Enforcement

Whoever violates any provision of this paragraph shall be punished in addition to the provisions of G.L. Chapter 94C, Section 32 I, by a fine of three hundred dollars ($300) for each offense which fine shall inure to the benefit of the City of Quincy.

9:20.050 Arrest without warrant

Pursuant to G.L. Chapter 94C section 41 a police officer shall have the authority to arrest without warrant any person committing in his presence any offense set forth in this chapter.

9:20.060 Severability

If any provision of this chapter or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the invalidity does not affect any provisions or applications of the chapter which can be given effect without the invalid provisions or application, and to this end the provisions of this chapter are severable.

9:20.070 Effect

This ordinance shall take effect upon passage.

Classes Begin In New Science/Math/Technology Academy

'We've Changed Education At Quincy High School'

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The official ribbon cutting ceremony for the first phase of the new Quincy High School was held Sunday, and on Monday an excited student body and staff began their classes at the new Science/Math/Technology Academy.

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Quincy High Principal Frank Santoro, and School Committee member Elaine Dwyer were bursting with pride as they welcomed the crowd of educators, administrators, city and state officials, former mayors, architects and media representatives.

After the welcoming reception and opening remarks, they each conducted tours through the state-of-the-art facility, a four-story structure located behind the old Quincy High School.

When the next phase of the school is completed, on the site of the former Center for Technical Education, entrance hallways from this wing will be cut out to connect to that much larger section of the school, yet to be constructed.

Santoro said, "We've changed education at QHS...because things that used to be separate are now inter-locked, just like the real world, and this building serves that purpose."

The design of the new building literally connects various fields of science, math and technology, such as nursing classes with biology and engineering with math, which Santoro referred to as interdisciplinary.

Dr. DeCristofaro, spoke of the professional development of the QHS teaching staff and its in-

Councillors Clash On Sex Offender Ban

BY LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors clashed Monday over a proposed ordinance which would ban Level 3 sex offenders from living in most wards or loitering near or in parks, libraries, elderly housing, daycare centers, and, possibly, beaches.

The council, meeting as the Ordinance Committee, took no action but plan to revisit the issue at a future meeting.

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro, Chairman, and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, co-sponsored the proposal. Coughlin outlined the need for precise restrictions, then cited incidents in which Level 3 offenders loitered near children in libraries or on streets.

However, opponents charge the proposal is a "feel-good measure."

akin to a snake-oil cure that will do more harm than good.

"These people pose a risk," said Gutro. "Many communities are already taking action and we are not."

"Where the state is not taking the lead on residency requirements, the city must," said Gutro, noting that 22 states have enacted similar statutes and more than a dozen Bay State communities, including Weymouth, have enacted statutes.

Gutro and Coughlin also fear that the city is becoming a safe haven for offenders as neighboring cities and towns enact sex offender residency restrictions, driving offenders from their borders into Quincy.

Committee OKs Limo Regulations

The Ordinance Committee Monday approved legislation regulating limousine services as recommended by City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Shea told councillors the proposed ordinance would bring the city's regulations into the 21st century.

In the past 15 years, Shea said limousine business has grown and Quincy is one of the few cities without licensing and registration requirements for limousines and liveries.

"It's probably a little bit of a revenue builder," said Shea, adding that would be a side benefit from the ordinance.

Shea said the main impetus was the sizable and growing limousine business in the city.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond submitted the legislation at the request of Shea.

"We have no regulations right now as to who operates those vehicles, or the condition of those vehicles," said Raymond, adding passengers deserve assurance the drivers are properly trained and that vehicles are well maintained.

The ordinance, which must be approved again in a City Council session, will require special licenses for both the driver and the limo or vehicle and dictates $300 fine for any violation of the ordinance.

The ordinance includes restrictions prohibiting drivers from accepting a fare without a reservation made at least two hours earlier.

City's Firefighters First To Accept Wage Freeze

City firefighters have voted overwhelmingly to accept a wage freeze requested by Mayor Thomas Koch, as part of the city's plan to confront the most serious fiscal crisis in a generation.

"I am truly grateful to our firefighters for leading the way and understanding the gravity of the situation," Koch said. "This is a great symbol of what we can do when we work together in the best interest of the city, and I am hopeful our other unions will follow suit."

Ernie Arienti, president of the 200-member Quincy Firefighters Local 792, did not divulge the exact vote tally for privacy reasons, but said the margin was "overwhelming" in support of the one-year wage freeze. City officials expect the decision will save more than $500,000.

"Quincy firefighters know we are all in this together from the city to firefighters to residents," Arienti said. "We wanted to do something positive to help with the budget cuts and the cuts to services. Hopefully, things will get better for all of us in the next year and the economy will rebound."

Koch has asked all 2,400 city employees to accept a one-year wage freeze to help soften looming cuts in the budget year that begins in July. If every union accepts, the city will save roughly $5 million, Koch said.

Koch has met with the members of several city unions, and talks are ongoing, which require unions to voluntarily reopen, negotiated contracts.

The city faces a total of $6.8 million in cuts to state aid. Coupled with declining revenue and other challenges, the Koch administration is crafting a budget that will include substantial spending cuts.

The wage freeze does not guarantee there will be no layoffs, but it "without a doubt will save jobs and protect services," Koch added.

"This is a major help, but it is not a silver bullet that solves all of our problems," said Koch. "We are working hard, looking at every penny the city spends, and we know we will have to make difficult choices."

This is the second major cost-saving initiative negotiated between Koch and city employees in the last six months. In the fall, unions voted to give up negotiating rights over health care coverage to join the state health insurance program, called Group Insurance Commission.

Quincy is the largest city in the state to voluntarily enroll in the program and the move is expected to save $4 million in health care costs in just the first year.

Koch's Probe Of Honeywell Prompts State Inquiry

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that an exhaustive review of the $32.8 million Honeywell energy management program has prompted the state Inspector General to investigate a project that was supposed to save both energy and taxpayer money.

The administration review, which began shortly after Koch took office, found that infrastructure overhaul in 40 city buildings was beset by inflated costs, faulty work and a contract ripe for abuse. After meeting Koch, Inspector General Gregory Sullivan launched the investigation of the Honeywell contract, which began in 2007.

"This was a boondoggle, plain and simple, and we will not let the taxpayers take the beating on this," said Koch. "We identified these problems and we are going to do everything in our power to ensure our city is protected."

The city review found several glaring examples of Honeywell charging the city exponentially more for repairs than industry standards or contractor estimates, including billing $224,000 for a roof project at the Wollaston branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library after a contractor estimated the project would cost $50,000.

"This is a lot like those old stories about the Pentagon spending $500 for a hammer," Koch added. "Beyond the cost, we have serious questions about the work. For example, they installed weather-stripping on the Park Department storage building, which doesn't even use heat."

Other issues found by the city's investigation include:

- $185,000: Fire Department Headquarters roof repair. (Four times the contractor's estimate on the building permit.)
- $77,000: Installation of doors at Police Headquarters.
- $200,000: Windows at the North Quincy Fire House. ($70,000 more than the contractor's estimate on the building permit.)

Two recent roof projects conducted by the city following standard public bidding rules cost between $1,110 and $1,800 per square foot of construction. The roof repairs completed by Honeywell cost up to $7,000 per square foot of construction.

The review also found shoddy work that led to burst pipes in some locations, including one in the Broad Meadow Middle School that destroyed a computer lab.

Quincy entered into the contract with Honeywell in 2007, when much of the work was also completed. The agreement, allowed by recent state legislation, was based on a "energy performance contract," meaning that Honeywell charged the city upfront for repairs, but the cost was supposed to be paid back by energy savings accumulated over 20 years. The legislation and contract allowed Honeywell to hire subcontractors without using the public bid process.

Koch sharply questioned whether those savings would ever be realized, pointing to a contract that is "hidden with loopholes." Specifically, he noted that the contract calls for energy savings to be determined by Honeywell, not an outside authority. Koch also called into question the $700,000 annual payment that the city is expected to pay Honeywell to maintain all the boilers, lights and windows it replaced throughout the city.

Koch said his administration is responding to multiple requests from the Inspector General's Office for information and will also consider taking court action against Honeywell.

"This is exactly the kind of action that needs to take place when an issue this serious is uncovered," Koch said. "We have an obligation to fight on behalf of our residents."

'Crime Does Occur But We're A Very Safe City,' Police Chief Says

Keenan Realigns Patrols To Cool High Crime Spots

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy's a big city and major crime incidents are inevitable, but there's no crime wave spreading in Ward 2 or anywhere in the city, according to Police Chief Paul Keenan who said police patrols are realigned regularly as needed and police saturate areas with high crime reports.

"It's a big city," said Keenan, adding, "Crime does occur but we're a very, very safe city."

Keenan responded last week to fears arising from arrest reports in January in which drugs, automatic weapons and ski masks were confiscated in separate incidents on neighboring streets in Quincy Point.

In another incident last week, a vandal or vandals smashed the windshields and broke the mirrors on six cars parked on Crescent Street in West Quincy.

Keenan said officers are alerted to problem areas daily during roll call, "They would saturate the area. We do increase patrols."

"Every area in the city is covered 24-hours a day," said Keenan, describing the 10 to 15 patrol cars available for assignment.

Keenan said the city is divided into zones and when increased criminal activity is reported in one area, that zone will have added coverage.

"We realign (patrols) to equalize the workload," said Keenan, noting that incidence reports are reviewed regularly and patrols are assigned as needed.

Under the plan, police officers covering low crime zones are assigned a larger patrol area while officers covering high crime zones cover smaller areas.

In addition, Keenan said areas such as Quincy Point and West Quincy have plain-clothes officers and unmarked cars patrolling the district when reports suggest higher criminal activity.

Keenan discussed the issues at the Feb. 2 and Feb. 17 council meetings and after the meetings.

Councillors began the discussion after Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee questioned crime reports in Quincy Point.

McNamee described citizens' fears after he read a letter from Robert Smith of Granite Street who asked if a crime wave was erupting and the city, particularly Quincy Point, is becoming a safe haven for criminals.

McNamee asked Keenan if there were "some underlying reason these elements (are) comfortable in Quincy Point?"

"It doesn't appear that area is any more dangerous (than other parts of the city)," responded Keenan, stating that robberies and drug arrest reports were scattered and not concentrated in one particular area.

"Times are changing," said Keenan of drug arrests and criminal activity, but he added, "We're ahead of the curve."

When needed, patrol units overlap areas, according to Keenan who said that detectives work in conjunction with the federal Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA).

"We got the DEA to come back," said Keenan, adding that the city's drug enforcement team includes dogs trained for drug detection.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, also, asked Keenan to report to the Feb. 17 meeting regarding the January incidents and recommended commendations for the seven officers who arrested the suspects.

In his commendations, Raymondi said of each officer, "Your vision was clear and, with quick decisive action, you professionally

South Shore Buick: End Of An Era

It's certainly a sign of the turbulent economic times and a victim of the recession but for me, the closing of South Shore Buick is akin to losing a good friend.

Or, a close buddy who you could count on when you needed something. I've had three Buicks and always found the sales and service departments top notch.

And apparently there are many others who feel the same way.

"It's been like a wake," says auto dealer Bob FitzGerald, who began working at the landmark dealership during the Blizzard of 1978.

"I don't know many other businesses that when they close they've received prayer cards and we have. It's sad but it's also uplifting to know people have appreciated you and think that much of you. It's been quite touching. There's been a lot of hugs, a few tears but I'm a firm believer that when one door closes, another door will open.

"You just have to have faith."

The dealership, which first opened its doors in 1923, will shut down for good by the end of March. The main culprits: decreased market share, spiraling health care costs and property taxes and the worst recession in decades.

"The reasons we have to close is because of decrease market share and there are too many brands and too many dealers," says FitzGerald, who holds a degree in finance from Providence College. "I believe that GM will eventually have just General Motors under one roof and not the various and sundry brands that we've been accustomed to over the years. They predict that 2,000 dealers will close their doors within the coming year."

Over the last decade or so, GM's market share has slipped an astounding 6 percent -- from 7% to less than 1% -- primarily due to foreign competition. That drop, plus the consolidation within GM, left South Shore Buick "quite vulnerable," FitzGerald says.

The final nail was the recession. "The economic tsunami that came rolling through was the coup de grace."

But the beginning of the end can be traced directly to market share which started declining about 10 years ago.

"When I initially bought the Buick franchise, Buick was covering between 5 and 7% market share," FitzGerald noted. "When I finally kicked the franchise back to GM just recently, we were well under 1% market share. When you lose that kind of market share over time and you try to adjust your overhead, the elasticity of your overhead is not in keeping with the market share loss. It was becoming more and more difficult (to do business). And the consolidation which is frankly necessary left a guy like me with just a single point franchise. I was on the outside looking in."

Reacting the dwindling market share, FitzGerald said GM tried to promote single platforms (designs) as several different models. In effect: competing against itself.

"GM thought they were saving money and offering more choices, but all they really did was cut the pie into more and smaller slices in the face of increased competition. As far as Buick in particular is concerned, GM let the product line get old, then discontinued models instead of updating them."

It wasn't too long ago that Buick was a "cash cow" for GM, FitzGerald said.

"LeSabre and Century sales represented 50 percent of GM's gross profits in North America at one point. The costs had been amortized, but GM did not reinvest in Buick."

"In the short term, GM is consolidating Buick-Pontiac-GMC as a single entity, but I think they will do much more before they have a structure that works. They will eventually figure it out, and begin a comeback. Unfortunately," he adds, "there will be a lot of pain between now and then."

FitzGerald, who in 2000 expanded into Watertown in an effort to stay competitive, insists closing the dealership was not a "knee-jerk reaction."

"We have been under some degree of distress for nine years. We were doing what we could and we had some success primarily because we are that little neighborhood

SOUTH SHORE BUICK, which has been selling automobiles for some 86 years, will close its doors next month. The familiar brick building at 50 Adams St. opened in 1941.

dealership that people felt comfortable visiting and had a sense of trust which gave us great loyalty. When you're doing a service for a friend, which a great deal of customers ended up being, there's a two-way relationship there and there's a level of trust. That's how we were able to survive as long as we did."

Losing a business like South Shore Buick is not just a hit for its employees -- which had numbered as many as 50 several years ago but dropped to about 15 at the beginning of this year -- but also for the community. There are few, if any, small dealerships left in the city.

"The fabric of a community is really made up of all its little bits and pieces and the local car dealership was one of the little bits and pieces," FitzGerald says. "The small business person in this country is just having a harder and harder time. They tend to have all the same cost structures like the bigger operation but they don't have the same economies on the other end. It's just becoming more and more difficult between taxes and health insurance ... it's like pushing a snowball uphill."

Until the business is closed, South Shore Buick is still selling pre-owned cars, servicing autos and inspecting vehicles. "We have more limited capability but we don't want to leave customers or employees in the lurch. Certainly we are winding down," says FitzGerald, who has been busy trying to help his employees find other work.

"We're trying to close down gradually and gently with some grace and dignity. So far many of my folks have had success in locating other positions. We're fortunate that South Shore Buick enjoys a good reputation, not only amongst our customers but with our peers."

Over the next several weeks, South Shore Buick will have more and more limited capacity and "at some point, we'll turn the key and put out the light and that will be that," FitzGerald says.

As for his own future, FitzGerald says "I want to make sure make sure that I've done whatever I could do for my employees so that I know that when I leave it will be a clear conscience. Then I can start focusing on my next move."

It may be time, although, to shift gears.

"The industry is going to go through a great deal of turbulence in the next couple of years. I don't want to limit myself at this point. I've enjoyed the auto industry. I've made a lot of good friends, made a decent living. We'll have to see."

He is confident his brother Richard FitzGerald, the dealership's longtime general service manager, will land on his feet.

"Part of the reason South Shore Buick has been successful is because we're had such a solid service department and the number one guy there is Richard. He's been great with the employees, been fabulous with the customers. From a service standpoint there's no one better than Rich."

The future of the 2-acre site at 50 Adams Street is also uncertain at this point. "We all love the old building. It has character you just don't find anymore. We'll keep an open mind," FitzGerald says.

As South Shore Buick's final days count down, FitzGerald knows the end of era is nearing, both professionally and personally.

"I've been spoiled. I've been able to work in a situation where your customers end up being real friends. That's not just hyperbole, that's the real deal. I don't know if that's going to exist in another situation or another job. I suspect that it might not so that aspect of it I will miss the most."

Quincy's gonna miss South Shore Buick, too.

Garage Bond Issue Faces Struggle

By FRANK MCCAULEY

The $1 million bond issue sought by Mayor Arthur Tobin to add two floors to a downtown parking garage faced tough sledding at a special meeting of the City Council.

The proposal required a two-thirds vote of the council or six votes to pass, and a Quincy Sun survey prior to the meeting showed two councilors against it, one not voting, one undecided and one available for comment.

This Week
1980
29 Years Ago

"I can't see bonding city money for construction of the garage," said Council President Leo J. Kelly, who said he planned to vote against the bond. "It just opens us up to other problems." Councilor Stephen McGrath also said he planned to vote "no" on the bond proposal.

Councilors Francis X. McCauley, who is president of the Presidential Cooperative Bank, said that he would not vote on the issue for fear of conflict of interest since his bank is on land that figures in another phase of the project.

PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARIES NEXT TUESDAY, 35% TO 40% TURNOUT PREDICTED

A high vote turnout of 35% is expected for Tuesday's presidential primary that features contests on every ballot including rival slates for the Democratic Committee in Ward 2.

City Clerk John M. Gillis predicted a 35% turnout and he added it could go much higher if Sen. Edward M. Kennedy were to make a good showing against President Carter in New Hampshire.

Major candidates for the Republican nomination for president included Cong. John Anderson, Sen. Howard Baker, George H.W. Bush, former Gov. John Connally, former Gov. Ronald Reagan and Sen. Bob Dole.

The Democratic ballot contains the names of President Jimmy Carter, Edmund Brown, Jr., and Sen. Kennedy.

QUINCYSIMS

Ruth Johnson, Girl Scout service cookie manager for Quincy, is coordinating the cookie distribution for troop cookie managers of the city's 38 Girl Scout troops. Brenda Morrison, daughter of Mrs. Meredith Morrison, 16 Doyle Terrace, Germantown, was named to Dean's List for the first semester at Nasson College, Maine. Marshfield Stove, 138 Washington St., Quincy Point, was advertising "Wood Stoves 50% Off on Selected Models." The ad warned that the per gallon cost for oil could reach $2 by September 1980. The Quincy Sun Sunbeams Column noted that Ward 5 Councilor Stephen McGrath had his eye on the Second Norfolk Representative District seat presently held by Rep. Thomas F. Brownell. Little opposition was expressed at a public hearing on the proposed Burgin Parkway Extension held by the Massachusetts DPW at the Lincoln-Hancock School. Target date for the completion of the project was the spring of 1983. (Editor's note: The groundbreaking for the project was held until July 1984 and the road opened for traffic the day before Thanksgiving 1985.)

Rev. James L. Kimmell, pastor of Faith Lutheran Church, attended a two-week orientation clinic of the Bethel Series, an international Bible study program in Madison, Wisconsin. Old Colony Bank and Trust Company, 1449 Hancock St., Quincy Center, was advertising "Six Month Certificates of Deposits, $10,000 Minimum With An Interest Rate of 13.629%."

Mayor Tobin received an eight-month-old German shepherd named "Snoopy," a gift of the Sons of Italy Quincy Lodge. The dog is trained to sniff for hidden drugs and was assigned to the Quincy Police Department. Melissa McCauley, daughter of Councilor and Mrs. Francis X. McCauley, 210 Manet Ave., Houghs Neck, was named to the Dean's List, with high honors, at Northeastern University. Miss McCauley, a 1979 graduate of Quincy High School, was majoring in physical therapy. Two Quincy women were seeking re-election to their respective State Committee posts. Miss Kathleen O'Donnell was running for re-election as the Democratic State Committeewoman in the Norfolk Senate District. Mrs. Kathryn Roberts was seeking re-election as the Republican State Committeewoman in the same Senate district. Uses for three Quincy elementary schools scheduled to close this year (1980) included: A marine center for the Great Hill School in Houghs Neck, a warehouse for the Myles Standish School in North Quincy and the C.E.T.A. Headquarters for the Cranch School on Hospital Hill. (Editor's note: The Great Hill School was torn down after a fire and the land converted to parkland; the Myles Standish School was utilized over the years by the Quincy Lodge of Elks and the Beechwood Community Life Center and at present is being converted to a Senior Center and the Cranch School was converted to condominiums.)

City Receives $2.8 Million For Homeless Assistance

The Quincy/Weymouth Continuum of Care has been awarded $2,827,599 in homeless assistance funding under the 2008 McKinney-Vento Program, administered by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

The announcement was made by Mayor Thomas Koch.

Here's how the homeless assistance is earmarked:

- $1,143,787 will be allocated among eight projects, which will be used to provide housing and supportive services for 54 individuals and 26 families over the next year. One of the eight projects will run for at least two years. After that time, the City has the option to file for a renewal of these projects.

- $1,614,264 will be allocated to seven projects under the "Shelter Plus Care" program, which is a rental assistance program. These projects will provide housing vouchers for 73 individuals and 35 families.

- $69,548 will be used to enable local housing providers to participate in a program called the Homeless Management Information System (HMIS), which provides homeless assistance data to HUD. HMIS also allows the local Continuum of Care to track homeless individuals and forecast trends in homelessness.

As an entitlement community, the City of Quincy was awarded an additional $90,938 under HUD's Emergency Shelter Grant (ESG) program. This funding will be allocated to Father Bill's Place for the operation of its emergency shelter on Broad Street.

Since 1996, the Continuum, through the Quincy Planning Department, has secured $17,499,815 in McKinney funding to be used for programs that serve the homeless in the Quincy/Weymouth area.

Crosstown Connector: Road To Nowhere

I have been reading the papers, and have read the cost of this crazy crosstown connector.

Just to tear down a perfectly good building, with no problems at all, $127 million of our tax dollars. The money to take down all these buildings, about $10 million to put a two-lane highway, to God knows where.

Our fire department, police department, city highway, and school departments could use these funds for new equipment, with the money our city officials are wasting on this foolish project.

Our city officials know very well that the taxpayers don't want this project, but are determined to shove it down our throats anyway.

Why?

Elections are this year, then the voters and taxpayers can tell the city officials what we think of their project.

Celtic Bells Free Concert At Crane Library March 8

Celebrate the culture of the British Isles and try out a few traditional dances with the Celtic Bells at a performance for all ages Sunday, March 8 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The Celtic Bells are Jerry and Nancy Bell with their children, Calum and Katriona. Together they play and dance everything from the traditional Scottish Highland Fling, Irish jigs and step dances, to bagpipe tunes and favorite Irish songs.

The performance will include spirited sets on pennywhistle, flute, bones, Irish drum, a work song in the Gaelic language and storytelling. The concert is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public

Fundraiser March 26 To Benefit Literacy Volunteers

Literacy Volunteers of Massachusetts-Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library will hold its annual fundraiser Thursday, March 26 from 6:15 to 9 p.m. at the library, 40 Washington St.

The fundraiser is a trivia challenge put together a team of friends or co-workers. This is a team event. Donation for the event is $20 per player.

A raffle, refreshments, prizes, and surprises will make this a fun evening in a good cause.

All proceeds benefit The Literacy Project and will be used to purchase reading and writing materials and training for tutor-student pairs.

The Thomas Crane Public Library literacy program serves adults on the South Shore. Dedicated volunteers are trained and matched through LVM-Quincy and have provided free tutoring to adults in basic reading and writing since 1985. LVM-Quincy is an accredited affiliate of the national network of Pro Literacy America and is one of 13 LVM programs statewide.

Trivia jockey, Phil Beatrice, will emcee this evening. He is donating his time and expertise to the fundraiser.

Our space is limited. Call Elaine Kline at 617-376-1314 for a registration form and information.

YMCA Kicks Off Strong Kids Campaign

The South Shore YMCA based in Quincy will kick off its 2009 "Strong Kids" campaign tonight (Thursday) at The Scarlet Oak Tavern in Hingham.

The event will be emceed by Sean McDonough of ESPN.

"Strong Kids promotes the one thing missing from our children's lives – an active and healthy childhood," said Peter Racicot of Fallon Ambulance, this year's Strong Kids Campaign chairman. "For many kids, it's a chance of a lifetime just to go to camp in the summer or play on a soccer team that puts teamwork and friendship ahead of winning."

While 75 percent of those who receive YMCA scholarships are under the age of 18 years old, the campaign supports any and all who need assistance to join the YMCA or one of its many programs.

The YMCA Strong Kids Campaign seeks donations from individuals, corporations and foundations to be able to continue to provide access to YMCA programming to children, teens and families who would otherwise be unable to pay.

South Shore YMCA members and community volunteers hope to raise more than this year's goal of $1.3 million to provide membership assistance and scholarships to programs like summer camps, child care and teen activities to more than 5,500 people living on the South Shore.

For more information, call Jill Donovan at 617-479-8500 ext. 146.

Quincy Animal Shelter Volunteers Publish 'Recipes For Caring'

A cookbook presented by the Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc. (QAS) called "Recipes for Caring" was put together by an all volunteer organization to celebrate the spirit of pet rescue and how animals touch our lives.

It is a collection of recipes for both humans and animals.

Sandra Morse, QAS director said "Our volunteers really put their heart and soul into this project. It has been a long time in the making, but they really wanted to get it right. This cookbook is not just a cook book; it is for animal lovers who understand how our pets can change our lives."

The cook book also contains recipes from some local restaurants.

The 150 pages of food, stories, and fun, which will soon be available at local pet friendly retailers, is also available at the Quincy Animal Shelter, 56 Broad St.

For more information, call 617-376-1349, or Morse at 617-297-2668.

Konstandina Zorzos Wed To Pascal Dinis

A reception at the Wequasset Inn in Chatham followed the recent wedding of Dina Zorzos and Pascal Dinis.

They were married at St. George Greek Orthodox Church in Hyannis.

The bride is the daughter of the Rev. Dr. Steve Zorzos and Pauline Zorzos of Rockville, MD. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benoit Dinis of Quebec City, Canada. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Antonakos of Quincy.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Lynn Miller as Maid of Honor. Best Man was Anthony Zorzos, brother of the bride.

The ushers were all members of the Brown University hockey team.

In addition to the bride's father, the Rev. Dr. Steve Zorzos, other priests in attendance were the Rev. Peter

MR. and MRS. PASCAL DINIS

Gianacopoulos of Hyannis, and the Rev. George Poulos of Stamford, Conn.

Both the bride and groom are graduates of Brown University and are employed in Boston.

After an extended wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple are living in Boston.

QUINCY KIWANIANS and invited guests recently learned about the operation of a local winery at the Boston Winery located at Neponset Circle, Boston. Along with tasting several of the Boston Winery's wines, the group toured the winery and received a presentation which included the history of the winery, special programs they offer and an informative lecture about the type of wine they produce. From left are: Scott Dahill, Boston Winery; and Kiwanians Bob FitzGerald, a past president of the club; Janet Joyce, Bonnie Schwerin, Jeff Bertman and Jean McCarty, past president.

To Honor 'Life, Accomplishments, Service And Humanitarianism' Of Quincy Sun Founder

City Hall Plaque To Honor Henry Bosworth

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor Thomas Koch and City Councillors will honor the memory of Quincy Sun founder Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. by raising a special plaque in his honor in old City Hall, also known as The James R. McIntyre Government Center.

The plaque will honor "the life, accomplishments, service and humanitarianism of Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., from Quincy Point," according to Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymond.

Raymond and Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly co-sponsored a resolution for the plaque which won unanimous support from the council on Feb. 17.

Mayor Thomas Koch joined the councillors in supporting the initiative for the plaque, according to Policy Director Chris Walker.

"As you enter Old City Hall, there is a place set aside to honor certain members of the local media who have distinguished themselves in their professional and personal lives," said Raymond who read the tribute to Bosworth.

HENRY W. BOSWORTH

"His love of Quincy and Quincy Point was unparalleled and Henry was fond of saying, 'We are proud to carry the name Quincy on our banner. That what we're all about, Quincy, the best city in the world.'"

Raymond chaired last week's meeting which was dedicated in honor of Bosworth. Mr. Bosworth died suddenly Feb. 7.

Kelly was absent from the meeting due to illness.

The honor of the special plaques has only been bestowed twice in the past when the city recognized two other exceptional members of the media, Fred Hunt of the Patriot Ledger and Herb Fontaine of radio station WJDA.

In their prepared tribute to Bosworth, Raymond and Kelly cited the publisher's service in World War II, his seven decades in journalism which included stints reporting for The Patriot Ledger, Boston Traveler and Associated Press.

Raymond also described other highlights of his career which included covering General Douglas McArthur, President Harry Truman and Adelaide Stevenson.

In addition, Raymond listed more than a dozen community, veterans, charitable and business groups aided and supported by Bosworth over the past four decades.

"Last year, The Quincy Sun celebrated the 40th anniversary of reporting news fairly, objectively and accurately..." said Raymond who, also, recalled the publisher's love of his family, most particularly his wife Dorothy, his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Raymond announced the dedication at the beginning and end of the meeting.

Councillors John Keenan and Douglas Gutro, Ward 5, joined Raymond in offering tributes prior to the 7-0 vote of the council. Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, president, was on vacation.

Details of the installation ceremony will be announced at a future date.

City Offers Coupons To Purchase Single Stream Recycling Barrel

Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth are joining forces again to combat the high cost of waste disposal and to encourage more residents to recycle.

Beginning March 1 the City of Quincy will offer a limited supply coupons worth $5 towards the purchase of a 32-gallon, Single Stream Recycling Barrel (one to a family).

Funds for the program are provided through the Capitol Waste contract which provides money for community outreach and education.

Under the successful Single Stream system, households are encouraged to convert a plastic, 32-gallon trash barrel, into a recycling container. No sorting is needed with this new system...paper, cardboard, glass, cans, plastic can all go in together, in any order. The larger barrel allows for greater recycling and the coupon makes the purchase a little easier.

Coupons are available March 1st in the City Hall foyer, the DPW Office at 55 Sea St, and at the Council on Aging Office, 83 Saratoga St. Coupons may be redeemed at Curry Ace Hardware, 370 Copeland

St, Danny's Hardware, 53 Billings Rd. Quincy, Curry Ace Hardware, 190 Quincy Ave, Braintree, Richmond True Value Hardware, 899 Washington St, Braintree, Braintree Lumber, 110 Hancock St, Braintree, Park Ave Market Hardware, 46 Park Ave, Weymouth, and Justice Hardware, 827 Broad St, Weymouth until April 15.

The stores will add Single Stream decals to the barrels and literature to help your recycling efforts. We ask residents to fill in their name and address on the coupon to keep track of the redemption.

"Single stream has been a great success in Quincy and the outreach efforts installed in the Capitol Waste contract could not come at a better time," said Mayor Tom Koch. "The program is intended to reach those who may have missed earlier outreach efforts and to make it easier for more people to participate. It is also designed to stimulate the economy through our local businesses."

Rebecca McWilliams Announces Candidacy For School Committee

Rebecca McWilliams, 24 Newcomb St., announces she is a candidate for Quincy School Committee.

McWilliams is a licensed architect and a four-year Quincy resident. Her experience in the Quincy Public Schools includes the design, programming and construction administration of the new Quincy High School from 2006 to present as an architect and design team member at Symmes Maini & McKee Associates.

As a LEED accredited professional with experience meeting the sustainable design standards of the Massachusetts Collaborative for High Performance Schools, McWilliams said she has evaluated site, energy, and daylighting solutions for the new high school.

McWilliams has also served as a wind energy coordinator for the State of Rhode Island Energy Office, focusing her efforts on community outreach and wind education resulting in the installation of a 750 kilowatt wind turbine at Portsmouth Abbey School.

McWilliams said she is running for a four-year seat on the school committee in part because she is interested in bringing 21st century sustainable technology to the Quincy Public Schools.

REBECCA McWILLIAMS

"In Massachusetts, our current method of thinking is to build schools that last 50 years. We need to invest in upgrading the materials, daylighting, HVAC systems design, renewable energy and increased air quality.

"This will ensure that first, each school in our city is a healthy building for students and teachers to use

Enjoying Life at Allerton House

THE ALLERTON WAY

Allerton House at Hancock Park, Quincy, MA
by Kelly Richards

Theresa Webber's children surprised her two years ago when they came to her Dorchester home and simply said that they wanted to take her somewhere.

Webber says, "As it turned out, the final destination of our mystery ride was Allerton House at Hancock Park. After taking a tour and meeting some of the residents and staff, I knew I would love living here." She credits her daughter and three sons for doing their research, knowing her needs and personality, wanting to make life easier, and finding her a perfect home. "It was the first place I looked at," she says. "I didn't need to look any further."

Today, Webber's spacious one-bedroom apartment at Allerton House is decorated with lots of photographs of her children and grandchildren, as well as other personal possessions that she holds dear. "All of my furniture fit right in," says Webber. And my family is close by so I see them all the time. They especially like to come to the special events here. At the Christmas party, they saw me sitting on Santa's lap."

Prior to her move to Allerton House, Webber lived alone. With her children nearby, she could always count on them for help, but at age 82, she continued to carry out the day-to-day tasks that home ownership entails. She says, "I don't have to do anything now - no cooking, no cleaning, no paying the bills, no laundry. All of those things are done for me, and the meals are great. Now I just do what I want to do."

Webber's engaging personality touches everyone she meets. "I believe we all just need to keep going and stay involved," she says. And stay involved she does. You may find her at the Bingo game at Allerton House three or four times a week, joining other residents on a road trip for lunch at a local restaurant, socializing in the residence's elegant dining room. One of the first friends she made when she moved in now lives at Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's skilled nursing center in Hingham and Webber makes it a point to visit her often. "We both enjoy catching up during our visits."

According to Webber, one of the best things about living at Allerton House at Hancock Park is the opportunity to be around truly nice people. "I know everybody here," she says, and "everybody is wonderful. Moving here was the best thing!"

Kelly Richards is the Marketing Director for Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy. The 42-apartment assisted living residence is owned and managed by Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group which is celebrating 60 years of service to seniors. Marie's Kitchen

Eggplant Pulpets 'Extraordinaire'

I don't know how long this recipe has been around, but I just found it recently and it's made with eggplant mixed almost exactly as you would make a meatball. My daughter Ann Marie called me up one day very excited about it and how great it tasted.

So I was invited to dinner at my daughter Nancy's home and she was just beginning to prepare it. Both of us made it and it turned out unbelievable. With this recipe you can also make a veggie burger by flattening the ingredients instead of making them into a ball.

Eggplant Pulpets

1 large eggplant (skin and slice about a quarter of an inch)

1 cup ricotta cheese

1/2 cup grated parmesan cheese

1/2 cup seasoned breadcrumbs (if you prefer plain bread crumbs, then season with favorite herbs.

1 egg

1 small onion and a clove of garlic

1/2 pound fresh mushrooms (optional)

salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Slice and eggplant and place it on a slightly greased cookie sheet. (We used parchment paper with a little olive oil)

Bake until almost done, soft enough to put in a food processor or blender.

In the food processor, put the eggplant, onion, garlic and mushrooms until they are well blended.

In a large bowl, add the eggplant, and the other ingredients that were blended, the ricotta, parmesan cheese, egg, bread crumbs, salt and pepper. Now they are ready to roll as you would a meatball. It will be about the same consistency as a meat mixture.

Roll into balls, and then place on a slightly greased cookie sheet (we used olive oil on parchment paper) and bake in a 350 degree oven until done (about 25 minutes) Keep checking until the top forms a slight crust.

We had it with bow tie pasta, and sprinkled a little tomato sauce, but eating them just plain were delicious.

P.S. This is how we made this, but other ingredients certainly can be used with the same result.

March 7 At Quincy Elks

Quincy Kiwanis To Honor Junior Heroes At Breakfast

The Quincy Kiwanis Club will recognize some very accomplished young leaders with its "Junior Heroes Award" at a breakfast Saturday, March 7 at 9 a.m. in the Quincy Elks Tirrell Room.

Each year, Quincy Kiwanis presents the awards, named in honor of Patrick Toland White of Quincy, to young people, who were nominated for outstanding community service.

Those being honored were again selected because they stood out amongst their peers. Knowledge of their special individual civic efforts and contributions helped identify each one as a "leader" within their respective schools.

"Collectively, their contributions portray a wonderful new perspective on just how often local youngsters contribute to those less fortunate than they," said Quincy Kiwanian Maralin Manning.

"These young people have learned early in life the skill of giving back. With persistent parental and community encouragement they should continue to use this skill their entire lifetime," she added.

Community leaders, parents and teachers who guide these "junior heroes" will be invited to join them on this special occasion.

This year's "heroes" attend the following schools:

Archbishop Williams High School, Atherton Hough Elementary School; Bernazzani Elementary School, Broad Meadows Middle School, Central Middle School, Merrymount Elementary School, Montclair Elementary School, North Quincy High School, Parker Elementary School, Snug Harbor Elementary School, Quincy High School and Sterling Middle School.

The mission for all Kiwanis clubs is to serve the children of the world. The international organization has clubs in more than 75 nations and boasts of more than 300,000 members.

Quincy Kiwanians are individuals who desire to improve their community through personal involvement in leadership and service to others.

Wind Energy Topic March 4 At Ward 4 Community Center

The Quincy Environmental Network will host John MacLeod, former operators manager of the Hull Municipal Light Plant, Wednesday, March 4 at 7 p.m. in the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., Quincy (connected to the Della Chiesa School.)

MacLeod will share his insights on Hull's experience successfully building two turbines. He will discuss how the town determined the turbines sites and conducted public meetings, and what are the benefits to town taxpayers. The success of the two turbines has lead to plans to install four more offshore.

The event is free and open to the public. For more information, call Maura O'Gara at 617-302-0150.

'Go Green And Save' Event Saturday

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN), Sustainable Milton, and Curry Ace Hardware's Quincy store, 370 Copeland St., will join forces Saturday, Feb. 28 to help homeowners learn how to make a big dent in utility bills, cut their carbon footprint, and fight global warming, all at once.

Shoppers will find out about the top 3 easiest ways to go green and save green in the home: Programmable thermostats, compact fluorescent lightbulbs and low-flow showerheads and faucet aerators.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.,

Sustainable Milton and QEN representatives will be present to discuss green living and the Low Carbon Diet program (www.empowermentinstitute.net/lcd), which helps individuals and groups tackle their carbon footprint and save on average $250 per year in utility bills.

John Keohane Participates In NextGen Seminar

John Keohane of Quincy was among the many young professionals attending the recent Selected Independent Funeral Homes' NextGen Seminar.

Keohane is a funeral director at Keohane Funeral & Cremation Service in Quincy and Hingham.

"This is a very energetic group, and it is always a wonderful experience to get together with my colleagues for a few days," said Keohane. "This meeting provided an excellent opportunity to share ideas and challenges with each other."

NextGen Seminars are conducted annually by Selected Independent Funeral Homes to encourage networking among its young professionals and those new to funeral service. Participants gained valuable insight from a panel of NextGen alumni who have progressed in their funeral service careers to prominent positions within their firms. This sharing of best practices is a hallmark of Selected Independent Funeral Homes.

Keohane Funeral & Cremation Service has been a member of Selected since 1967. The association was founded in 1917 and is the world's oldest and largest association of independently owned funeral homes. Its members represent the finest and most caring funeral professionals in North America and around the world.

Selected Independent Funeral Homes actively promotes its use of best practices by its members in order to provide families with the finest care possible.

Six Residents On Simmons College Dean's List

The following Quincy residents were named to the Simmons College (Boston) 2008-fall semester dean's list (grade point average of 3.5 or higher).

They are:

Wendy Leung, senior, biochemistry major.

Christine Cahalan, junior, biopsychology major.

Kim Vu, sophomore, English major.

Jona Angiello, senior, international relations major.

Samantha Shaw, freshman, undeclared major.

Jenalee Shepherd-Morse, freshman, undeclared major.

Flu Death Raises No Concerns In Quincy

The death from the flu of an unvaccinated 12-year-old Jamaica Plain boy may have caused a rush on vaccine around the state --- but not in Quincy.

"We've had one or two walk-ins but no increase," said Karen McKim, the public health nursing supervisor in the Health Department. "This is the peak flu season and it takes about two weeks for the vaccine to take hold."

Sharon Giordani, the director of Emergency Room Service at Quincy Medical Center, said there has been little uptick in flu cases but nothing significantly higher.

But if you're still nervous about it, the Health Department at 1585 Hancock St. has plenty of vaccine on hand.

Montclair/Wollaston Meeting March 5

Joseph Canavan of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office will discuss the "Are You Okay?" program Thursday, March 5, at 7:30 p.m. before the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association at the Church of the Good Shepherd, corner of Harvard and West Squantum Streets.

The program is a free service established by Sheriff Michael Bellotti in which senior citizens who sign up receive a phone at a chosen time every day between 6 a.m. and 12 noon, providing a person with the comfort and security needed to maintain personal independence.

For more information on the program, call 1-866-900-7865.

Remove Christmas Decorations From City Cemeteries

Christmas is over for those who like to decorate their family graves in the city's cemeteries with wreaths and other festive holiday items.

The Board of Managers of Public Burial Places would like you to remove them on or before Sunday, March 15, so that work crews can give proper maintenance.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

ADDRESSING BUNIONS

For those suffering with bunions, some form of surgery may be necessary to relieve the pain and correct any resulting deformity that impedes the individual from performing normal activities. When a bunion exists, the bone that joins the big toe becomes prominent. The resulting bump is composed of bone and soft tissue. Some sufferers may find it difficult or even impossible to walk any significant distance, even in athletic shoes, without experiencing extreme pain. The big toe may be chronically inflamed and non-responsive to anti-inflammatory medications or rest. The toe may "drift" toward the small toes and appear deformed. When all other treatments fail to make a substantial improvement, a recommended surgical procedure may provide the desired relief. Are you plagued by bunions or another foot condition that makes every step a painful one? One of the best things you can do to take good care of your feet is to treat them to regular professional podiatric care. With all they do for you, your feet deserve it. We'll do all we can to teach you how you can achieve and maintain optimal foot health. State-of-the-art facilities to treat all foot concerns, chronic conditions, injuries and hereditary problems are available to you at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Call 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S. Bunions can also occur on the joint of the little one (bunionette).

In one example, a Level 3 sex offender banned from Weymouth announced that he planned to move to Quincy.

Proponents believe that residency restrictions will discourage sex offenders banished from other communities from moving to Quincy.

False Security

Councillor Joseph Finn cited the "dark secret" statistics indicating that family, friends and acquaintances commit 93% of sex offenses against children.

Finn, along with other skeptics, contended the residency ordinance will drive convicted sex offenders underground, promote "sex offender ghettos," generate a false sense of security and create "unsafe zones" in unprotected wards.

"This is not a benign ordinance," warned Finn, predicting that sex offenders will stop registering and disappear. "If it's adopted, it tanks your (sex offender) registry system."

Finn said he has reported suspicious activity and, as the father of seven, "I appreciate the concern that accompanies the management of sexual offenders in our community."

"I support lifetime commitment for true sexual predators" and more stringent sentencing for those who have a history of recidivism, said Finn.

As for residency restrictions, Finn cited statistics showing sex offenders disappear from law enforcement radar after residency restrictions are enacted.

Finn, also, stated that many prosecutors, across the country, oppose such legislation.

'Unsafe' Zones

A map provided by Coughlin, co-sponsor of the ordinance, indicated that the forbidden areas or "safety zones" would encompass almost the entire city with only a few pockets such as Ward 4, the Marina Bay area, several dozen streets in Squantum and Wollaston.

"It creates unsafe zones in areas of our city," said Finn who cited several unprotected areas as did Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, and Councillor John Keenan.

McNamee read off the names of nearly two dozen streets in his ward that would be unprotected by the ordinance.

"My concern is that there are neighborhoods left uncovered," said Keenan. "As long as there are areas in the city that are uncovered, I will not support it. It's just not fair."

Supporters

Parents, police and school officials testified in favor of the ordinance, some describing local incidents where known sex offenders loitered on streets and near students while police had no legal remedy.

Police Detective Lt. Patrick Glynn told the committee that Chief Paul Keenan considered the proposal "a clear, concise and enforceable ordinance."

Glynn provided the following statistics on Quincy residents:

17 Level 3 sex offenders,
22 Level 2 sex offenders
30 Level 1 sex offenders

Kendall Whittington, vice president at Eastern Nazarene College, called the proposal "a wise move," and advocated for the loitering provisions. He outlined the need to protect the 97 children in daycare programs on the ENC campus, as well as the college's students.

"We completely support the proposed law," said Whittington who then described an incident in which a Level 3 offender was on campus three times.

"The offender could not provide a viable reason (for his presence)," according to Whittington who said police could not arrest him.

Glynn later told councillors that the proposal outlined a "ticket" system for loitering offenses which he acknowledged might offer little deterrent value.

Parents of local school children, also, favored the ordinance.

"It's pretty much a no-brainer," said Tracy Costello of Vassar St., describing the 10,000 children in the Quincy school system and the additional thousands in daycare and parochial school throughout the city.

Costello asked councillors to "pass this in a very quick manner."

"I urge quick passage of it," said Scott Smith of Andrews Road, president of the Parent Teachers Organization at Beechwood Knoll School.

"Everywhere you look, there are kids," said Costello, adding that she'd received a notice from her child's middle school warning of two incidents in which cars followed middle school children.

Resident Mark Stokes described a Level 3 sex offender "living within 1500 feet of a school. We couldn't do anything about it."

"That person was walking around our neighborhood at 3 a.m. in the morning," said Stokes, recalling the night one neighbor found him in her driveway.

One speaker said the difference between Level 2 and Level 3 sex offenders is a plea bargain, but Davis said that Level 2 offenders are considered less likely to reoffend and have, often, been convicted of statutory rape sometimes involving two teenagers.

Coughlin and Gutro said they would consider the testimony presented Monday and reschedule a discussion of the proposed ordinance.

They will, also, review suggestions offered at the committee meeting.

These included banning all levels of sex offenders from the city, a blanket residency ban covering the entire city, and stronger loitering provisions.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond suggested an ordinance banning convicted drug dealers and other major criminals from living in the city.

THE FOOD PREPARATION area inside Quincy High School's new Science, Mathematics and Technology Academy also attracted a crowd at Sunday's ribbon cutting ceremony.

volvement, right from the beginning, in the planning of the new high school, including sharing the needs of the students and staff with the architects.

"As a city we should be very proud of so many people that made this happen because we continue to keep our focus on all of our young adults and children of this city."

"We started talking about this during Mayor Sheets' administration, then Mayor Phelan and Mayor Koch have all been involved in this, and every one of them tremendously supportive of this project."

There was an emphasis on integrating the needs of the students and the community in general in this new facility.

Dr. DeCristofaro: "We wanted to make sure that the community has great use of this building, and that is built into everything that we do and all the philosophy that we have for this building includes our community."

Mayor Tom Koch thanked everybody for coming together and making the project happen, including past mayors and past school committee members and council members. He said, "There is so much pride in this room—in these difficult times we've come together for such a positive day."

The mayor quoted from an article written by JFK regarding the importance of making a student's education relevant to life. Koch said, "When you go through this facility, it's hard not to see the relevance—this magnificent facility will put our kids in great shape as they move on."

Former Mayors James Sheets, Joseph LaRaia and William Phelan attended the ceremony. Phelan said, "I really believe this new school will impact kids' lives...what better thing can you do than that—the state-of-the-art facilities for today's learning is so important."

"And there are so many people that worked very hard on this entire project and it couldn't have been accomplished without a lot of good people coming together."

The architects, SMMA, received input not just from the QHS teaching staff, but from its custodial staff, regarding the design of the building.

School committeeman and State Rep. Ron Mariano, one of the original planners of the project said, "It's been a long time getting to this point, and I think this is a tremendous opportunity for the kids in the city to come in and have a first-rate facility, with state-of-the-art technology, state-of-the-art equipment. This is a great day for the city, and I'm excited and really pleased with the way this has come out."

Future plumbers, electricians, auto mechanics, certified nursing assistants, cooks, mathematicians, engineers, biologists will all be studying in a modern, sunny, technically-advanced environment now.

There is no such thing as a blackboard anymore. It's called an interactive white board, and it can display computer images, internet sites, teachers' writings and even students' answers through the use of a wireless clicking device.

The old Center for Technical Education has been emptied and is scheduled for complete demolition by April school vacation.

On its site, and scheduled for a September 2010 opening, will be built the Fine Arts Academy, including a 750-seat auditorium, the Humanities Academy, including a library and media center, a gymnasium which will include a walking track, and a cafeteria, with seating for 500.

SUNDAY'S RIBBON CUTTING ceremony and tour also included a visit to Quincy High School's new 150-seat Adams Lecture Hall located between the second and third floor of the Science, Mathematics and Technology Academy. At left is former School Committeeman James Timmins, the city's solicitor.

BIOLOGY TEACHER Michael Imhoff leads his students in a class discussion Monday in Quincy High School's new Science, Mathematics and Technology Academy.

A New Era At QHS

By KELLIE NEWMAN
QHS Sophomore

Quincy High School has officially begun a new era, after nearly a decade of planning the new high school.

With the opening of the new Science/Math/Technology Academy Monday, located right behind the main building of the high school, life at Quincy High has gotten a lot easier; at least with getting from one part of the school to the other.

With the Center for Technical Education, students had to endure the bridge, the only connection to get from the main building to there, which with over a 100 students trying to get through at the same time in opposite directions, made it next to impossible to make it to class on time.

"The way the new building is connected, it makes it easier to go from one building to the other. No more traffic jams on the bridge, which is nice," sophomore Lisa Lam says of the new layout of the school, adding that in addition to more ways to pass between the Academy and the main building, the design itself is much improved.

Each floor of the Academy connects right to the main building, where the elevators used to be located. Students just go up a short flight of stairs and find themselves in spacious hallways, lined with brand new lockers.

"It's really big and really nice compared to the old Votech; it's a better learning environment. I actually wanted to come to school, I was all pumped. I couldn't go to sleep," Lisa added with a big smile on her face.

Conor Curran-Cross, a fellow sophomore, shared Lisa's enthusiasm about the new school.

"We actually have windows we can look out of." To which Lisa added, "Finally."

Now that the Academy is complete, students now look to the future, to when the final building is due to be complete in fall of 2010. For now though, everyone is adjusting to the change, and most are glad that they even get to see one building of the new Quincy High School.

The Next Phase Of The Project

The Academy offers interdisciplinary instructional staff work-stations, a large group instruction area with 150 seats and a full-service restaurant.

The state-of-the-art facility will enable students to earn technical certifications and college/institute articulations in the disciplines of Culinary, Automotive, Metals, Information Technology, Electrical, Computer-Aided Architectural Design (CAD), Engineering, as well as Rehabilitation, Medical Assistant, Patient Care, and Early Childhood Education.

The next phase of the high school project begins with demolition of the Center for Technical Education building and the bridge that connects the two original high school buildings. Following demolition, the construction of the new 224 square-foot wing will begin, with completion anticipated in September 2010. This wing will showcase three additional academies: Humanities, Visual and Performing Arts, and the Freshman Academy.

The next phase will also house a three-station gymnasium with a walking track and multi-purpose and fitness rooms, along with a 750-seat auditorium, a 500-seat cafeteria opening to a courtyard, and a media center library.

The Quincy High School project team includes Tishman Construction as the Project Manager, Symmes Maini & McKee Associates as the Architect, and Gilbane Building Company as the Construction Manager. In collaboration with the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA), this project has targeted the Massachusetts Collaborative for High Performance Schools (MA-CHPS) certification program for sustainable/green design and construction.

The tour included a stop in front of some of the new student lockers. About 100 people toured the new Academy Sunday.

Window Shopping Made Easy

(ARA) - This year, as people are staying closer to home, why not try a home improvement project that involves little effort, makes your house more beautiful and efficient and can provide benefits for years to come -- replacing your windows.

Beauty, comfort and energy efficiency are excellent reasons to replace your old windows. Not to mention, when windows are old, leaky and don't work properly, they can also be frustrating to operate.

If you've determined it's time to seriously consider a window replacement project, Paul Delahunt, president of Renewal by Andersen, says replacing your old windows is easier than you think, and offers the following considerations to help make your project as easy as opening a new window.

Choose windows that are energy efficient.

Traditionally, poor performing windows and doors have been the weak energy link in homes, often accounting for up to 40 percent of a home's heat loss during the winter. Make sure you choose windows with energy-saving benefits. Two simple ways to check a window's energy efficiency and performance are to look for an ENERGY STAR label and a label from the National Fenestration Rating Council (NFRC).

Choosing ENERGY STAR qualified windows can help reduce your energy bills by up to 15 percent, according to ENERGY STAR. Plus, homeowners who purchase and install qualifying ENERGY STAR windows and doors in 2009 may be eligible to receive a one-time credit of up to $500 on their 2009 federal income tax.

The NFRC label shows a window's U-Factor, which tells you how well the window keeps in heat. U-Factors generally fall in the range from .20 (most energy efficient) to 1.20 (least energy efficient). The lower the number, the better the window is at keeping heat in. In colder climates, a U-Factor of .30 or lower is recommended to get the most energy efficiency from your window.

Choose windows that offer low-maintenance.

Today, homeowners can choose from several framing material options including wood, vinyl and composite frames. Because ongoing maintenance can be daunting, many of today's homeowners are looking for windows that require little or no maintenance.

Windows made from composite materials can be a good option for homeowners who like the look and strength of wood windows but also want the low-maintenance features of vinyl. Because of the unique blend of materials, composite windows do not need ongoing staining or painting to maintain their natural beauty, saving you time and money.

In addition, today's window technologies offer a new generation of low-maintenance glass, featured on Renewal by Andersen replacement windows, that helps reduce dirt build up and water spots on your window's exterior when activated by sunlight -- mak-

Bathroom By Numbers

(ARA) - Thinking about updating your bathroom, but not sure what to budget -- or if you'll even recoup the costs in today's market? The good news is that modifying a bathroom not only adds daily enjoyment and comfort, but will enhance your home's value as well.

"Any changes you make on your house now should increase your home value later," says Kermit Baker, project director for the Remodeling Futures program at Harvard University.

Still not convinced? According to "Consumer Reports," a 5-by-7-foot bathroom remodel, at a national average cost of $15,000, provides a solid return of 78 percent.

Get Started

To make your bathroom transformation pay, begin by creating a list of "must-haves," "nice ideas" and "dreams." This will help you understand the numbers before starting your renovation and prioritize what makes the most sense for your investment.

Following are a few bathroom projects, with low- and high-end options, as well as costs to consider before getting started.

* Fixtures

Must-have

Fixtures, including sinks, toilets and tub/showers, are all must-haves in your bathroom according to "House & Home Magazine." Basic versions can cost $350 to $900 to replace, so plan accordingly. Upgrades such as double or undermount sinks, dual-flush toilets or deep soaking tubs can range from approximately $1,300 to $2,250.

Nice Idea

If you don't want to spend extra money replacing some of the basics, why not give your tub or shower a quick touch-up? Try hiring a surface-restoration company, such as Miracle Method (www.miraclemethod.com). For approximately $465 to $600 you can make your ceramic, porcelain and fiberglass fixtures shine like new.

Dream Big

If you've always dreamed of a luxury spa shower and have room in your budget, try installing a custom glass shower enclosure. Retailers, such as The Home Depot offer a variety of glass or glass block options ranging from $2,000 to $3,500 that will have you singing with delight in the shower.

* Faucets

Must-have

Faucets are not only a must-have, but can also be the focal point in the bathroom. Basic faucets range from $50 to $350 with different finish selections and configurations. Before going faucet shopping, be sure to do your homework and review your sink set-up. Today's faucets are available in three primary styles: 4-inch centerset (the most popular), 8-inch widespread and single-hole (typically seen in a vessel sink application).

Nice Idea

When looking to replace your faucet, choose one that offers both style and water-saving benefits. Moen's Lindley bathroom faucet is WaterSense labeled by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), indicating it meets guidelines as an environmentally responsible and efficient product.

Lindley offers traditional, mid- and high-arc designs that use 32 percent less water without sacrificing performance. Available at The Home Depot for between $89 and $154, Lindley is offered in today's most popular finishes including Chrome, LifeShine Classic Brushed Nickel and Old World Bronze.

And with your new hardware updates, don't forget to add finishing touches with matching accessories such as towel bars, towel rings, robe hooks and pivoting paper holders to help pull the design of the room together. Moen Accessories offers a variety of options starting at only $20.

* Storage and Counter-tops

Nice Idea

Need more space? Try installing a new or antique dresser-like vanity for approximately $100 to $1,500. It adds storage and style with many options to personalize -- or you can save even more by recycling an old dresser.

Dream Big

If high-end counter-tops are your dream, add a custom-built vanity. Prices range from $2,000 to $5,000, but allow you to customize dimensions and choose from materials including natural stone, marble, frosted glass or exotic and engineered woods. It's also a great way to give your bathroom a brand-new look.

* Flooring

Must-have

Going for an upscale look to complete the room without the cost? Try installing ceramic or porcelain tile. For approximately $1 to $3 per square foot, you can choose from a variety of colors, shapes, sizes and finishes.

Nice Idea

Like the idea, but are worried about stepping on to a cold, uninviting floor in the morning? A nice idea is to install an electric floor warming systems for under your tile. Companies such as SunTouch Floor Warming Mats (www.suntouch.com) can help with costs between $400 and $1,600, depending on your bathroom's size.

Dream Big

Or if you dream of high-end porcelain tile and good-quality stone and glass, options range from $7 to $18 per square foot. Want a customized glass tile mosaic for your bathroom floor instead? For between $20 and $200 per square foot, you can design your own masterpiece without any visible grout lines.

No matter what your budget or dreams, by investing and renovating your bathroom today you will enjoy an improved room for years to come and add some extra cash in your pocket.

The property was leased to Charbel Elchaak of Quincy. He intends to use the site for his auto dealership.

Hardworking Kitchens With Style

(ARA) - Years ago, the kitchen served a very utilitarian function - a place to prepare food and clean the dishes. Today, it's truly the nerve center of the house where families eat meals, discuss the day's happenings, plan calendars, check e-mail and even entertain.

As a result, more homeowners than ever seek ways to make their kitchens work harder so they can re-focus their energy away from cooking and cleaning, and put it more on their family and friends who have gathered.

High-tech faucets and appliances, expanded work surfaces and carefully thought-through floor plans are just a few elements that have emerged in kitchen trends. But one of the most noticeable differences in today's kitchen is the demand for multiple sinks and various water sources.

According to Jeff Pratt, of Danze, a manufacturer of decorative plumbing products, many homeowners are using multiple sink areas to increase efficiency. However, they don't want to sacrifice the ability to showcase their personal tastes and eye for design.

"Homeowners and designers place a lot of emphasis on a sink's role when planning a kitchen remodel," says Pratt. "While convenience and functionality have always been concerns, today's homeowners also want to enhance the room's ambiance and decor they've worked hard to achieve. Style can't be sacrificed for function or convenience any more."

According to Pratt, the countertops you surround the sink with and the faucets you place on them, can add much of the design a homeowner seeks.

If you're looking for ideas on how to make your kitchen more functional and stylish, consider integrating these options into your kitchen remodeling plan:

Main Sink

An all-purpose station primarily used for clean-up duty, the main sink often features a deeper, single basin to handle dishes and oversized pots and pans. Pratt suggests pairing these sinks with a high-rise pre-rinse faucet or pull-down faucet. These faucets improve functionality of the sink area by allowing users to literally "take the water to the work," but are noticeably fashionable.

In addition to the primary functional faucet, many kitchens feature a water filtration faucet or tap as part of their main sink configuration.

Second Sink

Often located in a center island, this sink helps avoid congestion at the main sink and is a great way to increase a kitchen's workflow. Many refer to this sink as a prep sink, which quite literally is one of its primary uses. Homeowners commonly use this extra workspace for cutting vegetables, chilling wine or washing hands before a meal. Choosing a faucet style and finish that complements the room's decor can add an eye-catching decorative piece to an otherwise "ho-hum" island.

Bar Sink

Also referred to as a convenience sink or a beverage center, this area is traditionally used for entertaining purposes. It's occasionally located on the center island, but is often placed on a separate countertop in the kitchen or adjacent room (if space allows). Make sure to choose a faucet that matches the other kitchen faucets. Danze offers several types of bar faucets including high-arc options, small-scale faucets and pull-down faucets. Choose a style that will make this space "enter-taining."

Looking for another water source without a full sink? Try incorporating a pot filler faucet at your stovetop. These faucets provide a convenient, safe way to add more water to boiling pots or saute pans. Danze offers a variety of wall mount and deck mount pot fillers in traditional and contemporary options.

As you plan your kitchen remodel or look for ways to maximize your work areas, don't be shy about making your sinks, work surfaces and water sources work hard for you. But don't forget that style is just as important in today's kitchen.

How to Silence a Squeaky Floor

Q: The hardwood floor in my loft apartment is beautiful. It's very old and has a rough look from generations of use, but the floorboards squeak loudly in several places. The landlord says the floors are as-is and won't repair them, but he did say I could try to fix the problem myself. How do I do that? — Tony B., Boston

A: Squeaky floorboards are an annoying problem, and can be an expensive fix depending on the cause of the squeak. If the boards just squeak when stepped on and don't sag under your weight, the sound can be minimized without too much work.

Floorboards squeak because one board is rubbing against another. On a perfect floor, boards don't rub against one another because they lie flat against the subflooring and are placed firmly side by side. Over the years, however, heat, cold and damp, as well as everyday use, cause the boards to swell and contract, sag under heavy weight, and spring up away from the subfloor.

A quick fix, one that works on minor squeaks, is to squeeze graphite powder between the boards. (Some folks use talcum powder instead.) This lubricates the joints, and although the boards still rub against each other when you walk over them, the squeak will be minimized or disappear — but only for as long as the lubricant stays in place.

Larger squeaks and sagging boards take a bit more work. If you have access to the subflooring (unlikely in an apartment building), stand beneath it as someone walks across the floor above and pinpoint the squeaky areas. Then, hammer shims (thin wedges of wood) between the joist nearest the squeak and the subflooring, and put wood screws up through the subfloor to the center of each board to reattach them to the subfloor.

Chances are you don't have access to the subfloor so you'll have to work from the top. In this case, locate the squeaky spots and hammer finishing nails into the edges of the boards at several spots. Angle the nails slightly so they'll have less chance to work back out. You can also re-anchor the boards to the subfloor from this direction by placing either nails or screws along the center of each board. Drill a pilot hole first, and then either drive a nail or a screw into the board, sinking the head of the nail below the board surface. Fill the small hole that results with wood putty to hide the nail head.

If a floorboard squeaks and sags so much that you're afraid you'll fall through, it's time to re-engage the attention of the landlord. Check the lease laws in your state — most lean in favor of the tenant. If the flooring problem is so severe that it impacts your ability to live comfortably in the apartment, the landlord has an obligation to fix it.

ing your view better and cleaning easier.

Choose a reputable company that provides installation and warrants it.

Quality installation is a critical component of any successful window replacement project. Even the highest quality windows will under-perform if installed incorrectly. That's why Renewal by Andersen includes professional installation as a key part of their window replacement process, offering homeowners the ease of working with one company throughout their entire window replacement project. In addition, the company provides a limited warranty on both its products and installation.

Eliminating those uncomfortable drafts and unsightly windows is a great way to start the year. Armed with the knowledge to make the right window replacement decision for your home, you can easily commit to making this the year to make your home more beautiful, comfortable and energy efficient.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, Feb. 13, 2009 at about 1:17 P.M., Officer Scott Doherty was dispatched to Cleverly Court to meet a victim of an "armed robbery" that just occurred.

The victim stated over the phone that the suspects fled in a gray car. While other units searched for the suspect vehicle, Officer Doherty interviewed the victim, who said that he had posted his Playstation 3 (PS3) on Craigslist.com for sale and received a cell phone call from a prospective buyer who said that his name was Gary.

A follow up call from "Gary" was made seeking directions to the victim's home, which he gave. The victim noted that the cell phone number was the same as the original call. When the suspects arrived at the victim's house, they entered without any problems, although the victim noted that one of the suspects was wearing a black stocking type cap that had eye holes cut out of it, as if to be pulled down over his face. He also had a red bandana hanging out of his back pocket.

The victim was concerned that these items could be used to hide their identities, but they were not wearing them over their faces. While in the house, the suspects examined the PS3 and one of the games for it, (Madden 09) and talked about purchasing it. Suspect #1 asked the victim how much he wanted and was told $250.00. Suspect #1 was holding the PS3 boxed unit cradled under one arm and with the other arm, he pulled up his shirt purposely to show a handgun he had stuffed in his waistband.

The suspect then said, "Thanks, we appreciate it." Both suspects then walked out the door without paying the victim for the Playstation. The suspects got into a gray colored vehicle and drove away and it was at this point that the victim called the Police.

The victim provided a thorough description of the handgun. Lieutenant Detective John Steele arrived on scene and interviewed the victim, who provided a thorough description of the handgun. One of the video games was touched by the suspects and left excellent fingerprints, so the game was seized as evidence. Officer Doherty provided Lieutenant Steele with the phone number that the suspects used to contact the victim. Soon after, Lieutenant Steele received the name and Weymouth address of the owner of the phone.

Officer Doherty transported the victim and joined Lieutenant Steele and Detective Jason MacIsaac in Weymouth, where Weymouth Detectives were conducting surveillance on the home. Lieutenant Steele and Detective MacIsaac went to the door and interviewed a male who matched the description of the suspect. After a brief conversation, the suspect (#2) admitted to being in Quincy and taking the Playstation 3. He directed the Detectives into his home and showed them the PS3, which was hooked up to the television in the living room and had a game in the system. The PS3 and its box were seized as evidence.

Suspect #2 identified the other suspect by name and said that he lived in Norwood. Detective Wash created a photo array and suspect #2 picked out suspect #1 as his conspirator. The photo array was also shown to the victim, who also picked out suspect #2. After booking, suspect #2 was interviewed by Detectives' MacIsaac and Tom Cleary after waiving his Miranda rights.

Suspect #2 said that he called about the PS3 and confirmed the telephone number on his cell phone. He continued by saying that suspect #1 came to his house and they both went to the victim's house, with suspect #1 driving. Suspect #2 admitted that once in the car, he asked suspect #1 to take the PS3 and he would give him $100.00 for doing it.

Suspect #2 said once a price was agreed upon, he went out to the car to get his wallet and when he came back into the house, the victim was giving suspect #1 the PS3, all boxed up. Suspect #1 said, "Thanks" to the victim and the suspects both walked out the door. Once in the car, suspect #1 became very angry with suspect #2 for taking so long getting back from the car into the house. Suspect #1 dropped suspect #2 off at his home, where suspect #2 gave suspect #1 $100.00. Suspect #2 set up his "new" PS3 system to his television. Suspect #2 was asked about suspect #1 lifting up his shirt to show a handgun to the victim, but he stated that he did not see suspect

First Round Home Game, 7 p.m. Wednesday

Red Raiders Excited About Post-Season Chances

By SEAN BRENNAN

A home game tonight (Wednesday) opens up the 2009 Division I South state tournament for the North Quincy Red Raiders. North Quincy, which is seeded third out of 17 eligible teams, will play host to the #14 seed Newton North HS at 7 p.m.

This first-round home game pits the 15-4 Raiders against 11-9 Newton North. If North Quincy can hold court at home, the team would then host a quarter-final game against the winner of the Needham/Durfee first-round game. But for the North and head coach Michael Jorgenson, the only game that matters is the first one.

"We have been looking back at the school records and this may be the highest seed any basketball team has had at North Quincy. It is pretty exciting. We have accomplished a lot this year: a Fisher Division title and 15 wins.

"We did not really know what to expect playing in this new league (Patriot League), but the team has played great all year and we have been rewarded with a first-round home game. But we need to take care of business against Newton before we can look forward."

This year's Raiders will be looking to match last year's team's run to the Division I South semifinals. The 2007-08 team and the

GIRLS BASKETBALL

2008-09 have similar resumes. Last year North won 15 games, this year's team has already won 15 games, last year's team captured the Atlantic Coast League North Division title, this year's team captured the Patriot League's Fisher Division crown.

The Raiders made it all the way to the semifinals in 2008. The team defeated Bridgewater-Raynham HS 67-58 in the first round, knocked off the #1 seeded Franklin High School in the quarters, before falling to New Bedford in the semifinals. With a number of players off last year's team back this season, Jorgenson has high hopes for another long tourney run.

"We have a number of proven players who have been a part of these types of games last year," he added. "Players like Siobhan Carnell, Kathleen Lynch and Catherine O'Connell will be asked to carry the load for the younger players. But these girls know what to expect in the tournament and after the initial nervousness we should be ready to go and I expect them to play up to their abilities.

"Playing in our home gym is a big factor. We are hoping a large crowd comes out and supports us, and we are sure they will, but we need to focus on Newton and not worry about what could happen if we were to win."

When asked what he and his staff expected from Newton North, Jorgenson was confident but at the same time understood that the game would not be a first-round cakewalk.

"They play in a very good league (Bay State)," Jorgenson said. "That league is very competitive and every game they play is against a solid team. Their record is deceiving and if we are not ready to play we could be in trouble. But at the same time we are confident in our group and will be ready to play."

Jorgenson sees last year's successful tournament run as a positive for this year's team.

"I can tell you that not one player on this team who played last year was happy that we made it all the way to the semifinals. They all felt like they could have won more games and that is a good thing as we start another post-season.

"We have that game experience and we know what it takes to advance. It all starts Wednesday."

Jorgenson will lean on his senior class against Newton North. Carnell, Lynch and O'Connell were all named as Patriot League all-stars last week. They will be helped by seniors Jesse

"My seniors have been so successful the last three years," said Jorgenson. "With three league all-stars and a number of productive seniors on the roster this team is in good hands as we move forward this year."

Juniors Cara Murtagh and Sammy Bonanni and sophomores Montana McBirney (a star in the making), Emily Gray and Uyen Vu will also be counted on to provide minutes and support.

"This is a team that has the chance to do some great things," Jorgenson added.

Notes: A North Quincy victory tonight would set up a quarterfinal home game on Feb. 27 at 7 p.m. Lynch, a Patriot League all-star, was awarded the team's Sportsmanship Award by the league coaches. Bridgewater Raynham and Marshfield High Schools are the #1 and #2 seeds, respectively.

QHS' Josh Gerry Wins 125-Pound State Championship

Local Wrestlers Impress At Division II States

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy High School wrestling program continues to impress this winter. The team, which entered the Division II States, held at North Andover High School last weekend, as the Patriot League's Keenan Division champions, had several wrestlers capture individual accolades.

Junior captain Josh Gerry, wrestling in the 125-pound class, won the first individual state championship for Quincy High School since Joe Hern back in 2002. Gerry took a 17-5 match decision over Marshfield High School's Joe Pronk to earn the state championship.

His 17-5 win was the largest margin of victory by decision at the event. Gerry had previously defeated Pronk, 5-4, in the Weymouth Tournament final last month. Gerry improved his season record to 38-2.

"It was a state tournament: I wasn't holding anything back," Gerry said. "I just went at him and caught him in the first period, and just went with that momentum. I had been preparing for this moment since last season, doing extra running and extra workout sessions."

"I had no doubt that if I faced him I would win. I feel like I outworked everyone there and I never backed down."

Gerry wrestled at 119-pounds as a sophomore and finished third in this tournament last year.

"Hard work and preparation equals success," said QHS head coach Pat Lane. "Josh loves this sport and executed and dominated when it counted the most. He really wanted this win because last season Pronk defeated him twice last year by a 5-4 margin.

"The excitement in the gym after Josh took Pronk down in the early stages of the match was noticeable. He just went in and dominated him. He deserved to be the state champion."

Senior captain Paul Reggiannini finished in third place in the 140-pound class. Seniors Zack Manning (171-pounds) and Scott Griffin (152-pounds) also wrestled well for the Presidents.

"Paul lost a tough match in the semifinals and could have packed it in for the rest of the day, but he didn't," added Lane. "He used that tough loss as motivation and he finished with two strong wins. He decided to go for third place and he wrestled with a purpose. I am very proud of him."

"Zack finished the tournament at 2-2 in a very tough weight class (171-pounds). He rose to the occasion on a day when he wasn't feeling his best. Finishing in the top-8 in that class is a job well done. Scott finished the day 1-2 and wrestled well."

Reggiannini had this to say about his day:

"I took my first two matches by major decision and after losing in the semis I knew I had to go out there and show them what I had left. Getting third was not my goal but I had to get back out there and show everyone that I can beat anyone in my weight class. It was a great day for all four of us."

The North Quincy Red Raiders also had several individuals give standout performances.

Senior Mark Thach took sixth place in the 119-pound class. Junior Dan Amato (215-pounds) and senior Terrell Staley (125-pounds) also wrestled well for the Red Raiders.

Gerry and Reggiannini will both be competing this weekend at the All-States in Salem.

BOYS HOCKEY

By the time The Quincy Sun reaches newstands this week the North Quincy Red Raiders boys' hockey team will either be packing up their equipment bags for another long off-season, or the team will be getting ready for a Division II South Sectional quarterfinal matchup against #1 seed Canton High School.

The Raiders, owners of a 12-6-3 overall record, were scheduled to play host Tuesday night against Plymouth North High School. North entered the post-season as the #8 seed and Plymouth South as the #9 seed.

North Quincy earned its third straight spot in the Division II South Sectionals by virtue of its second-place finish in the Patriot League. The team wrapped up league play, its first year in the Patriot League, with an impressive 9-4-1 record.

The Raiders battled tooth-and-nail with Pen-broke High School (11-1-2 league record) all year for the top-spot in the league.

Heading into the tournament, the team is led offensively by senior forward Brandon Gilmore. Gilmore led all Patriot League scorers with 19 goals and 19 assists, good for 38 points.

Junior goalie Matt Brundage finished the season among the best backstops in the Patriot League. Brundage ended his year with a 2.08 goals against average.

The eleven-team Division II South Sectional field is wide-open. Last year, North Quincy entered tourney play with a 10-7-4 record and dropped a first-round game to Franklin High School, 3-2. Gilmore scored both goals for the Raiders.

This year, a first-round victory would mean a date with top-seeded Canton HS. The Bulldogs finished the regular season with a 15-3-2 record. Other notable schools in the tournament include Mansfield (#2, 15-4-1), Coyle Cassidy (#3, 14-4-2), Franklin (#4, 14-5-1), Nauset (#5, 14-5-1), Sandwich (#6, 12-4-4), Martha's Vineyard (#7, 12-4-4), NQ, Plymouth North, Whitman-Hanson (#10, 10-9-1) and Oliver Ames (#11, 10-1-0).

The rest of the Red Raider roster includes seniors Joe Vailpando, Kevin Chenette, Scott Richardson, Brian McLean, Evan Verhault, Bobby Fontana, Paul Reardon, Matt Rodriguez and Gilmore, juniors Jake Mullaney, Ryan Gorman, Trevor Richardson, Brandon Whitehouse and Brundage, sophomores Mike Nelson, Derek Graham, Frank Mastorilli, Brendan Glynn and Brian Graselli and freshmen Tim Marks, Mike Adduci and James Dunn.

Defeats Scituate 9-3

Future's Bright For Q-NQ

By SEAN BRENNAN

A 9-3 season-ending victory over Scituate High School gave the Quincy-North Quincy girls' hockey team six wins for the year. A major improvement for a team that had zero wins last season and has a roster littered with underclassmen.

"It was a big win for the program," said Q-NQ head coach Kelli Doolin. "The girls were ready to play and we were fortunate to have shots find the back of the net. For a team that didn't win a game last year, to come out this season and capture six victories made for a successful year."

"We are going to gradu-

ate only two seniors so next year we should be even better. My underclassmen have only gotten better and more experienced this season. The future is very bright for Quincy-North Quincy."

Against Scituate, senior forward Meg Gillespie recorded a hat trick (three goals), and freshmen Christina Walsh and Presley McLaughlin each scored twice.

"I was happy for my seniors that they got to end their high school careers with a win," added Doolin.

"They really helped the coaching staff this year. With so many underclassmen, they showed leadership. They will be missed."

"This year, every game we got better. We had improvement across the board and we can use this season's success as a building block moving forward."

Q-NQ, which finished the season with a 6-11 record, will return four of its five highest point getters in 2009-10. Leading scorer, junior Colleen Newcomb, missed her team's final three games due to injury but still racked up 20 points (13 goals, seven assists). Freshmen McLaughlin and Walsh ended the season as the team's second and third ranked scorers. McLaughlin finished with 19 points (13 goals, six assists) and Walsh finished with 12 points (five goals, seven assists).

Senior Lauren Brooks finished the year with eight points (two goals, six assists) and junior Laura O'Donnell had eight points (three goals, five assists).

"We return so many of our top goal scorers that we can only get better," said Doolin. "I had four freshmen contribute. We also have a number of eighth graders (nine) who saw some time and will only get more ice time next year."

The team will also re-

One big season-ending win could have huge ramifications for the Quincy Presidents when the team opens up the 2009-10 season next fall.

Quincy, which will graduate just three players off this year's roster, upset tournament bound Hingham High School on Feb. 12, 76-72. The win gave the Presidents an overall record of 4-16 and 4-12 in the Patriot League. Hingham finished their regular season with an 11-9 overall record.

"The first time we played them, they handled us," said QHS head coach Jeff Bretsch. "Tonight, we beat them. It is that exciting for us. I kept saying to the girls, 'I'm waiting for the game where it just clicks, where it all works.' We finally got that in our last game."

Leading the way for the Presidents was senior Katie Chernicki (12 points off the bench) junior Leslie Campbell (23 points, 12 rebounds) and sophomore Kori Sorensen (24 points, 8-for-11 from the free-throw line).

"It was a tremendous

game for Campbell," Bretsch added. "And Katie was hitting shots from everywhere. We had to battle to hang on to this one, but the kids really had to step up, and they responded in a big way."

With Campbell and Sorensen back next year, along with juniors Olivia Berry (a developing force in the paint), Colleen Tobin, Kylie Kozlowski, Becca Shea and Julia Yee and freshman guard Juli Tomer, the Presidents should be a better and more experienced squad.

"This was our best game of the season," added Bretsch. "We played to win, not lose. We attacked their press defense and we shot the ball really well. It took us awhile this season to play off each other, but in this game we did and we scored the most points all year."

Fans of the program should be encouraged by the play of the team's underclassmen in the latter part of the season. One bright star to keep a close eye on moving forward is Sorensen.

"This year as our point guard she had more responsibility," said Bretsch. "She has made progress but it did take time for her to learn to play against other team's best defenders. But she sure ended the season strong. She had 18-second half points Hingham."

"Campbell, Berry, Chernicki and Kori all played their best games of the season in this game."

The team will miss the production of Deanna Hutchins, Elisa Lam and Chernicki next season, but Quincy is expected to have members of their JV and freshmen teams make impacts sooner rather than later, and that has Bretsch excited about what the future brings.

"We have come a long way this year and have seen big improvement by a number of players. We graduate only three players and we have serious talent on the JV and freshmen teams. We should big better next year."

Five Quincy Residents Playing D1 Baseball

At present, the city of Quincy has five student-athletes playing Division I college baseball.

The five include John Folino, a senior at the University of Connecticut; Michael LeBel, a freshman at the University of Rhode Island; Scott Warwick, a freshman at Fairfield University; and Tom Conley and Glenn Misho, both freshmen at the University of Massachusetts.

very high level and a stamp of approval for the quality of baseball players Quincy has bred over the last few years.

"I can not remember the City of Quincy having more than two residents at the same time playing college Division One baseball," said Ray Cattaneo, the longtime general manager of the Morrisette American Legion baseball team and a former minor league baseball player himself, "so having five at the same time is remarkable."

Cattaneo, who coached

Folino and Misho and coached against LeBel, Warwick and Conley, added, "I am not surprised at the success of these five ballplayers because they are hard working and good students and you need these traits to play at the Division One level."

Folino, who was drafted by the New York Yankees last year, was a preseason selection to the All-Big East team. He is the staff ace for the Huskies and was the starting pitcher in UConn's season-opener Feb. 20 in Clearwater, Florida. Folino pitched five innings, striking out five and allowed two runs. LeBel, the starting third baseman for the RI Reds, played in the South Carolina State Summit Invitational last weekend. LeBel, in three games, batted 400. He had four hits and two walks and scored three runs. On defense, LeBel had two put outs, six assists and no errors.

Conley, Misho and the Minutemen open the season against Northwestern on Feb. 27 in Winter Haven, FL and Warwick and Fairfield open their season against U Mass on March 1 in Winter Haven.

South Shore Church League Schedule Drawing To Close

The regular season for the 2008-09 South Shore Church Basketball League is drawing to a close. This Saturday (Feb. 28) will be the last scheduled day for games before the playoffs begin later next week.

The schedule for Saturday is as follows:

Ruth Division (Girls 13-15 years old): Union Congregational will play against Holy Trinity at 9 a.m., followed by Union Congregational playing versus Wollaston Nazarene at 9:50 a.m.

Sarah Division (Girls 10-12 years old): West Quincy B will play Wollaston Nazarene at 10:40 a.m., St. John's will play Holy Trinity at 11:30 a.m., Quincy Point Congregational faces St. Ann's A at Suspect #2 was adamant that suspect #1 did not have a gun nor did he see him motion that he had a gun. Detective Cleary explained the seriousness of the armed robbery and asked the suspect if there was something other than a gun that the victim may have confused as a gun and he said no, not that he was aware of. After concluding the interrogation, the detectives contacted the Norwood Police Department and asked them to apprehend suspect #1, who may be armed.

A short time later, Norwood Police notified the Detectives that suspect #1 was in custody. Suspect #1 was also interrogated and admitted to the crime, with the exception of showing a handgun. Detective MacIsaac contacted the victim and told him that it was very important to clarify this issue about the gun, that he had to be 100% certain about seeing a gun. The victim confirmed that he saw the gun in the waistband of suspect #1. Both suspects gave the same confession, with the exception of possessing a gun. Based on the available information, Suspect #1, a 20-year-old Norwood resident, was charged with "Armed Robbery and Conspiracy". Suspect #2, a 22-year-old Weymouth resident, faced the same charges and it will be up to the Judge to determine if a weapon was used.

Nice Work!

As in this case, buying or selling from an unknown person has its inherent risks. Is the buyer reputable? Does he/she pose a threat to you? Are they paying by cash or check?

Is the seller reputable? Are they selling stolen goods? Will there be problems if the item becomes defective after the sale? There are many more questions to be asked based on the circumstances of each unique sale. For safety purposes, try to make the transaction in public, whether it be at a local donut shop or even at curbside in front of your home. As always, allowing an unknown person(s) inside your home puts you at risk.

Quincy Youth Baseball's 13-15 Year Old Division Set To Join Little League International

Quincy Youth Baseball (QYB) announces its 13-15 year old division, which is now in its 53rd season, has been invited to join "Little League International" and has begun the process of receiving a "Little League International" Charter for the upcoming 2009 season.

"Little League International" is the largest youth baseball organization in the world and will provide a Charter and Insurance for all of the players and coaches of the 13-15 year old Quincy Youth Baseball program.

In addition, the Quincy Youth Baseball 13-15 year old program will be eligible to participate in District All-Star tournament competition with local towns such as Canton, Scituate, Abington, Rockland, Cohasset, Norwell, Whitman and Hanson. Last year, a team from Canton advanced to the 13-14 year old Little League World Series in Oklahoma.

QYB is excited about its new and improved "player friendly" baseball program for Quincy children aged 13-15. With over 140 players registered, at present, QYB will be forming 10-12 teams at the 13-15 age group. Half of these teams will be placed in the "Major League" Division for players seeking a more competitive baseball program. Half of the teams will be placed in "International League," which gives players the opportunity to play baseball in a less competitive environment.

Both the "Major League" Division and the "International League" Division will feature continuous batting orders, free defensive substitution, and will guarantee that each player play a minimum of three innings in the field defensively in every game. Traditional baseball substitution rules will be relaxed to allow each player the opportunity to participate fully in each game.

The QYB 13-15 year old leagues will also offer travel baseball opportunities for those players seeking to play more baseball. We will field two-travel team, which will play a schedule of games in the spring AAU league. The QYB "house league" schedule will be made up to avoid conflicts with AAU teams and serious 13-15 year old baseball players in Quincy will be given the opportunity to play AAU baseball without conflicting with QYB schedules. Based on interest, QYB will also field travel teams in the summer baseball travel league such as the Suburban and or South River Leagues.

Any person seeking information or looking to register a child for the 13-15 year old QYB program can contact Mark Jaehnig at 617-472-3311, director of the "Major League" Division or Mike Saville at 617-794-7038, director of the "International" Division.

Clearing the Air On Allergies In The Home

(ARA) - Chances are you're one of the estimated 50 million Americans who are affected by some form of allergies.

Fortunately, you can keep sniffs, sneezes and itching at bay with some simple suggestions for the home that significantly reduce the number of allergens roaming through the air.

- Dust every room - One of the easiest paths to an allergy-free home -- dusting -- may already be a part of your spring cleaning routine. Dust mites can collect in a variety of materials around the house; especially those with fabric, including upholstered furniture, mattresses and pillows.

Make sure to check under and behind all large furniture and appliances including tables, dressers, refrigerators and ceiling fans. You should always use a damp cloth when dusting, as a dry cloth only spreads the dust around.

- Pull up the carpet - Bacteria, dust and dirt can easily become embedded in carpeting and beyond the reach of vacuuming. To solve this, consider installing hardwood flooring throughout the home. When properly cared for, hardwood floors are extremely resistant to the microscopic allergens that carpet can attract including pet dander, pollen and mold. Carpet is also known to trap dust mites that are too small to be seen and cause allergic symptoms, according to the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America.

"Hardwood flooring is much easier to install and less expensive than most homeowners realize and provides a significantly healthier home environment," says Tom Sullivan, founder and chairman of Lumber Liquidators.

Hardwood floors still need a cleaning every few weeks. Products such as the popular Bellawood Floor Care Kit include a soy-based cleaner, perfect for keeping floors clean and in the best shape possible.

- Uncover the AC - Although it may be tempting to crack the windows to enjoy the breeze, allergy sufferers should choose air conditioning instead of an open window. When the season is in full bloom, the air coming through the windows may carry a welcoming smell, but it's actually carrying tons of allergens into the home.

Homeowners already using air conditioning should check the filters regularly to ensure the system is functioning properly.

- Use the exhaust fan - Keeping surfaces dry helps prevent the growth of mold in moist areas of the home. Installing and regularly using an exhaust fan while showering helps keep mold at bay. Also make sure to thoroughly wash your shower curtain every week or buy inexpensive liners that you can replace regularly.

How To Stay In Shape
Like the First Family

(ARA) - The newly installed first family is young, vibrant and providing inspiration for millions of Americans to get active. What are some of the Obamas' favorite fitness activities and how can you stay in shape like the newest residents of the White House?

The first, and perhaps biggest, step is to make time to get up and get moving. The president and first lady show that even with a very busy schedule, you can find the time to stay fit and healthy. Make a date on your calendar to work out and keep it. Participate in a variety of activities to keep it interesting and work out with a friend or family member so you can motivate each other.

The President

He may be just about the busiest man on the planet, but President Barack Obama still makes time to stay in shape. He enjoys running, swimming and, most famously, playing basketball.

Running is great aerobic exercise that efficiently burns calories and boosts cardiovascular health. Whether you jog on a treadmill or enjoy running outdoors, make sure you have a pair of running shoes that fit properly. Before you begin running, it's crucial to stretch and warm up properly to prevent any injuries.

Swimming is a great way to work the whole body, but is much more low-impact than running. While most people don't have the benefit of an on-site pool like at the White House, the health benefits of swimming make it worth the trip to your local community pool. Swimming improves cardiovascular health, endurance and muscle strength and an hour in the pool burns about as many calories as running six miles. If your goal is to shoot hoops with the president, you'll have a lot of practicing to do, but you'll certainly get in shape in the process. In addition to burning hundreds of calories, a game of basketball with friends or family is a great way to have fun.

The First Lady

Michelle Obama has become a style icon and a role model for women worldwide. She makes it a priority to go to the gym to swim and use free weights and makes sure to use time with daughters Malia and Sasha to stay active. Her friends have said she is a motivated and accurate rope-jumper, an activity that can burn 100 to 200 calories in just 10 minutes.

The first lady has also been known to pick up a hula hoop and strut her stuff. Her husband told "People Magazine" that Mrs. Obama is, "The best hula-hooper I know." Hula hooping is a low-impact exercise and, according to the American Council on Exercise, burns up to 200 calories when you work out for 30 minutes. You can burn even more calories and trim up to 2-inches from your waist if you use a piece of equipment such as a Sports Hoop -- a weighted hoop you swivel for just 10 to 15 minutes to tone muscles and burn calories and fat (Sports-Hoop.com). It's a workout that is fun and so easy the entire family can hoop together, even the kids.

One of the most important fitness items Michelle Obama says she keeps on hand is a positive body image. When you feel good about yourself and keep a positive attitude, you're more likely to stick to healthy behaviors and habits.

must be received by 5 p.m., Monday, March 2.

Daffodil Days offers a bouquet of products for the public:

- For a $10 gift, donors receive a bouquet of 10 fresh daffodil blossoms.
- Three mini-daffodil bulbs in a soil filled pot are available for a $15 donation.
- A bouquet of ten daffodils and a Boyd's collectable stuffed bear for a $25 donation.
- Gift of Hope: daffodils are delivered to a cancer patient undergoing treatment. $25

Dollars raised through Daffodil Days enable the Society to offer free programs and services that help people fight cancer with courage and optimism, while it provides day-to-day help, emotional support, and 24-hour information to help ease the cancer experience. Additionally, daffodil contributions provide the Society with much-needed dollars to fund groundbreaking cancer research, educate people about the importance of cancer prevention and early detection and advocate for meaningful public health policies that benefit the community.

Resources in Massachusetts include:

- Transportation assistance to and from treatment
- A one-on-one support program that matches trained breast cancer survivors with those newly diagnosed, to provide emotional support and guidance
- A series of online educational classes for people with cancer and their loved ones
- A free and confidential service that helps cancer patients locate a cancer clinical trial based on their individual situation
- A free program dedicated to teaching women techniques to help restore their appearance and self-image during cancer treatments

Do Cholesterol
Drugs Really Work?

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I read a cover story in a national magazine that claimed there is much question about the need to lower cholesterol and to prescribe statin medicines. I can't believe this story wasn't front-page news, since 18 million Americans take statin drugs. People taking statins are exposed to the risks of muscle pain, memory loss and sexual dysfunction. My husband experienced these firsthand. His doctor ignored all his complaints and changed only the brand of statin drug. I hope you look into these reports on cholesterol and statin drugs and get the truth out to your readers. — R.B.

ANSWER: I know that voices of dissent arise about every medical theory and over every drug developed to correct what most consider a health hazard. Numerous studies have confirmed the proposition that high blood cholesterol and high blood LDL cholesterol lead to heart attacks and strokes. Most of the worldwide medical community subscribes to that proposition. Similarly, innumerable articles have demonstrated that lowering cholesterol and LDL cholesterol prevents heart attacks and strokes, prolongs life and can possibly reverse artery-hardening. All of this has been done by rigorous scientific investigations.

Statins are the most powerful medicines for the lowering of cholesterol. (Statins are: Zocor, Pravachol, Crestor, Lescol, Mevacor and Lipitor.) Muscle pain occurs in 1 in 1,000 users. Muscle damage occurs in much fewer. Memory loss and sexual dysfunction are very rare. Most of the side effects of statins are reversed with discontinuation.

Every doctor I know believes in the cholesterol theory and in the benefits of statin therapy. I put my money where my mouth is. I take a statin.

To be fair, the magazine should present the other side of the story.

The pamphlet on cholesterol tells the whole story in detail. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 201W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE CONSEQUENCES OF NEGLIGENCE

If you have ever wondered what would happen if you neglected to brush and floss your teeth, a study was once undertaken in which a group of dental students were asked to give up oral hygiene for 21 days. At the end of the three weeks, all exhibited signs of plaque, gingivitis, and overt clinical inflammation. Without daily flossing, plaque (a sticky, colorless substance that forms daily on teeth) builds between teeth. In as little as two days, plaque can transform itself to a hard substance, called calculus (also known as tartar), which may only be removed with professional cleaning. Then, it may not be long before periodontal disease begins between teeth, where a toothbrush cannot reach.

Have you had a professional cleaning this year? Most insurance companies allow two cleanings per year. Call us at 617-479-6220 today to schedule your first professional cleaning of 2009. Good oral hygiene is important, not only for looks, but for general health as well. Poor oral hygiene can lead to a variety of dental and medical problems, such as gum disease, infection, bone loss, heart disease, strokes and more. Regular checkups and cleanings can prevent these problems as well as provide you with good oral hygiene. You can count on us for family-oriented dental care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincypediatricdental.com.

P.S. Toxins produced by gingival infections can destroy the supporting tissues around the teeth, including bone, which leads to tooth loss.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Seeing the silly side of some really ridiculous situations helps give the Lamb a new perspective on how to handle them. Some important contacts can be made this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Try to complete your outstanding tasks by midweek. This leaves you free to take advantage of new possibilities — both professional and personal — opening up by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20): With both your creative side and your energy levels rising this week, you should be able to tackle that too-long-neglected project again. A family member might have important news.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22): An explanation you requested seems to be more confusing than enlightening. You should insist on clarifications now rather than deal with problems that might arise later.

LEO (July 23 to August 22): Your energy levels might be ebbing a bit. But that's no excuse for taking catnaps when you could be working on those unfinished tasks. There'll be time to curl up and relax by week's end.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22): It's a good time to get those ideas out of your head and into a readable format if you hope to have them turned into something doable. A good friend is ready with worthwhile advice.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Careful — you might be stepping into dangerous territory if you decide to "exaggerate."

The facts too much. Remember, the truth speaks for itself and needs no embellishment.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Although your workplace successes have earned you many admirers, there are some colleagues who are not among them. Be careful how you proceed with your new project.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): You might have to go into great detail to explain why you're currently reluctant to make changes to an already prepared plan. Be sure you have all the facts to back yourself up.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19): Travel plans might still be uncertain. But instead of getting upset about the delays, open yourself up to other possibilities and begin checking out some alternative destinations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18): Changing conditions might require you to alter some of your plans. While you might be agreeable to this, be prepared with explanations for those who do not want change made.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20): Although you might have to deal with some detractors who aren't as kind in their critiques, you gain points when you're willing to stand up and defend your work.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for creating a warm and loving environment between yourself and others.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

We are, by nature, I think, creatures of habit. I have heard it said that most of us will not change until the pain of remaining the same is greater than the pain of changing. We are like the old dog the preacher encountered when he went to visit an elderly church member. As the two men tried to visit, the dog continually moaned and growled. The old man explained why... "The old dog is trying to sleep, but he's lying on a nail. He hurts enough that he can't sleep, but he doesn't hurt enough to make him get up and move."

Often we hurt enough to moan and growl about the way things are and never consider trying an attitude of thanksgiving to improve our lives. The Apostle Paul said in 1 Thessalonians 5:18 we are to "give thanks in all circumstances." He believed it would make a positive difference in our lives.

Attitude is a choice. Victor Frankl wrote: "The last of the human freedoms is to choose one's attitude in any given set of circumstances." You don't just evolve into a thankful person, you choose to become one... One preacher wrote, "If your abilities are equal to those of other people and you are not sharing in equal success, then your attitudes are probably the difference. Since God created you with the freedom to choose your attitude, the choice determines much of what happens to you."

Quincy Youths Sing At The Vatican

Four Boston College High School students from Quincy were among 15 members of the school's Concert Choir which recently took part in a concert tour of Rome.

The Quincy students are: Seniors Eric Jaukkuri and Joseph Principato and sophomores Keegan Hannon and Mark Hogan.

Upon landing in Rome, the jet-lagged singers immediately set off across the city, first under the ominous arches of the Colosseum, then through the majestic ruins of the Roman Forum. The following day, the choir traveled beyond the city walls to visit the catacombs, the ancient Christian underground burial chambers, then wandered through the towering ruins of the baths of Caracalla.

That night, the choir, under the leadership of director Dr. Marina Rozenberg of Quincy, performed a friendship concert with the singers of Coro Primo Levi, thrilling their hosts with their renditions of "Ave Maria," "Come Back to Sorrento," "The Prayer," and "O, Sole Mio."

As dawn broke the next morning, the choir toured the vast museums of the Vatican, saw countless priceless works of art, as well as the final resting places of past Popes and St. Peter himself. Words failed as the group craned their necks to take in Michelangelo's mural on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel.

That evening, the choir returned to the magnificent St. Peter's Basilica in the Vatican to sing Mass performing with poise and professionalism beyond their years. Merely walking past Michelangelo's Pieta and staring up into the massive vaulted ceiling were awe-inspiring and humbling enough, but the gravity of actually singing in such a place weighed upon all the singers and accompanying parents and friends, and represented a significant milestone in the growth of the Concert Choir from its simple beginning.

Cramming in as much cultural and educational enrichment as their schedule would allow, the choir gaped with disbelief at the seemingly-living figures of ancient gods hewn from cold marble by Gian Lorenzo Bernini, as well as enjoyed authentic pizza rustica by the waters of Trevi Fountain. The trip to Rome concluded with a final concert in the venerable Basilica San Giorgio al Velabro.

City Hall Workers Vote 74-3 To Accept 1-Year Wage Freeze

City Hall workers voted overwhelmingly Tuesday as the third group of employees to accept Mayor Thomas Koch's request for a one-year wage freeze as part of the city's plans to confront the ongoing fiscal crisis.

Domenic Venturelli, president of the Quincy Public Employees Association said late Tuesday that the vote was 74-3 in favor of the wage freeze.

The 136-member union includes office staff, clerical positions and custodians throughout every city department, with average salaries around $40,000 a year. The wage freeze will save about $170,000 in the city budget that begins in July, when the city will be hit with substantial state-aid cuts and declining revenue from other sources.

"We all have to do our part, and this is our way of working with the Mayor to help us save jobs and services the city provides," Venturelli said. "Giving up a raise we negotiated in a contract will not be easy for many of our members, but it is the right thing to do considering the times we are in."

The union would join firefighters and traffic supervisors in the Police Department as the first two unions to accept the one-year wage freeze. If all 2,000 employees agree to Mayor Koch's request, the city will save $5 million.

The wage freeze is one piece of a major cost-cutting plan the administration is pursuing as it prepares a new city budget. Major spending cuts are a near-certainty, and the wage freeze does not guarantee that there will be no layoffs among city or school ranks, but it will "make a major difference in terms of how much we will need to cut from the budget," Koch said.

"We are taking aggressive action to address this crisis, and this request is one important step," Koch added. "It does not get us out of the woods by any stretch, but it once again shows that by working together on behalf of the City we will manage this crisis and emerge a stronger community."

State's Opinion Awaited On Independence Issue

City, College Officials To Meet Again March 16, 18

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City and college officials will meet again March 16 and March 18 as they prepare to terminate their 50-year relationship. At this time, the college is a department of the City of Quincy.

President M. Sue Harris is hoping for Quincy College independence by June 1st in order to expedite accreditation review due in the fall.

However, breaking up is hard to do as city and college officials are learning in the process of going their separate ways.

Even an amicable split could turn bitter after decades of partnership, particularly if $500-an-hour lawyers are involved, one party feels stifled by the relationship, the other party used, and the fine print ignores reimbursement for decades of support and leaves health insurance and pension questions in limbo.

The college was founded in 1958 and subsidized by the city until 1980 when it became fully self-supporting but remained a department of the city.

Now, its Board of Governors aims to become an independent non-profit institution.

QUINCY COLLEGE OFFICIALS David Dennis, chairman of the Board of Governors, and President M. Sue Harris hope to gain the college's independence from the city by June 30. Dennis, a Norwell resident, told City Council Feb. 17 that the college can not borrow money, buy property, or even settle union contracts at this time. (Quincy Sun Photo/Laura Griffin)

The proposed petition insures "...that no part of its net earnings or assets inures to the benefit of any private individual." If the college dissolves after independence, the city would receive all excess capital.

According to Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, Quincy College has a $19.1 million annual budget and a multi-million dollar capital fund.

At this time, all funds for the college are deposited in an enterprise fund with the city and every expenditure, no matter how small, must be signed off at City Hall.

Such city oversight "makes our operation inefficient, slowing progress and compromising growth," said David Dennis, chairman of the Quincy College Board of Governors who outlined the need for independence.

Addressing the council on Feb. 17, Dennis, a Norwell resident, cited major impediments hindering the college as a department of the city.

"Quincy College can not borrow money for capital projects, independently settle union contracts, or handle its own finances," Dennis said, adding the college cannot even accept the title to Saville Hall which the college purchased in 2007.

Raymond countered that the college is a city asset, thanks to the taxpayers who sacrificed in order to keep the college afloat in its early years and there's been no bidding or public process providing Quincy residents with compensation, guarantees, and protection.

"The employees are still going to be public employees," said Raymond, adding that the college's employees will maintain their city and state pensions and state health insurance coverage, but will not be governed by the state's ethics laws.

The proposed agreement states that the independent college must "comply with all applicable laws prohibiting self-dealing or otherwise relating to conflicts of interest."

Raymond suggested there are no guarantees in the agreement that the 'unnamed' corporation taking over Quincy College could not relocate, and offer satellite classes.

After the initial meeting on Feb. 2, Raymond sought legal intervention and advice from the State Inspector General's office.

City Solicitor James Timmins said he expects the Inspector General will "have something back to us in early March."

Mayor Thomas Koch filed the Home Rule Petition with the City Council on behalf of the college. The petition, also, must be approved by the state legislature and signed off by the governor.

"It is vital for Quincy College to become independent so that both the school and the city may better serve and better compete," said Dennis after he outlined the college's contributions to the city which includes the employment of over 100 residents and education of over 1000 students from the South Shore and all over the world.

"At least $3 million in college expenditures go to Quincy vendors each year," said Dennis who, also, cited the $2.5 million in renovations the college invested in its leased Newport Avenue campus.

Dennis pledged that "Once we are independent, much of our continued growth and success will be reinvested directly back in the City of Quincy."

However, the separation petition presented to the council pledges the college's 'best efforts' to remain in Quincy.

Section 13 states, "The board of trustees of New Quincy College shall make best efforts to maintain the main campus of New Quincy College, including primary administrative offices, within the city of Quincy."

The agreement, also, states that the independent college will serve the "south shore (sic) of Massachusetts, among others...."

"We have to do our due diligence," said Raymond who asked Timmins if legal fees of $545 an hour charged $1B Project 'Exciting, Extraordinary, Essential'

Councillors Pleased With Downtown Revitalization Plan

A developer's billion dollar makeover proposal for Quincy Center got an enthusiastic thumbs up from city councillors Monday after the first public presentation.

"This is a private public vision," said Richard Heapes, Street-Works, LLC, of the plan to redevelop Quincy Center.

"I'm delighted to have them in the City of Quincy," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro of the Street-Works team while Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly said, "I think it's absolutely extraordinary."

Councillors Joseph Finn and Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2, also described the project as exciting as did Council President Jay Davis, Ward 4, who cited the residential component as essential.

Mayor Thomas Koch introduced Richard Heapes at the council meeting which served as the first public discussion of the proposed $1 billion makeover for Quincy Center that has been on the planning boards for four years.

Koch has been working on the proposal with Street-Works since his election more than a year ago. Heapes praised Koch, Planning Director Dennis Harrington and former Mayor William Phelan for their foresight and former city leaders who designated rezoning areas and arranged funding.

Heapes said he fully expects a great deal of dialogue and change as the project develops and residents and councillors offer suggestions. "I guarantee we will have our ugly moments," Heapes said, while suggesting he

Concept Of Quincy Center Plan

Developer Richard Heapes of Street-Works compared his team's Quincy Center concept to a three-legged stool crowned at the top by the center's rich historical landmarks, United First Parish Church, the Hancock Cemetery and Old City Hall.

MOTHER NATURE reminded those hoping for an early spring that winter is not quite over after dropping 10 inches of snow in Quincy Monday. That brought the city's snowfall to 75.5 inches this season. Arbitrator Overturns Officer's Suspension

A arbitrator has overturned the five-day suspension of Police Officer Joseph McGunigle who was penalized from writing too many citations on dogs owned by his Houghs Neck neighbors.

The arbitrator ruled that the way former Police Chief Robert Crowley conducted the investigation of the case in 2007 violated the union contract resulting in an unlawful order.

McGunigle said Tuesday he had not seen the written decision but "it's important that my name be cleared."

Bruce Tait, president of the Quincy Police Patrolmen's Association, said that he too had not seen the decision but he understood that McGunigle is awarded back pay, details and overtime.

Tait called it "a cleanup of something left over from the previous administration" of Chief Crowley, who retired in 2008 in the midst of a feud with the QPPA

The case for consolidating your mortgage and equity line into one loan right now

You had a great rate on your mortgage and didn't want to touch that. But there was something you needed or wanted money for. And adjustable home equity line rates were low-low-low. So you took one out. Now that line keeps adjusting up-up-up. You're feeling the squeeze and suffering with the squeeze. You are not alone. If you're worrying about where rates are going next and simply want to have the same mortgage payment every single month, consider consolidating your original mortgage and that home equity line into one new, locked-in fixed-rate 30-year loan while those rates are still near historic lows. Come see us and we'll help you figure out if consolidating is right for you. Or call Richard Coleman or Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On March 2, 1807, the U.S. Congress passes an act to "prohibit the importation of slaves into any port or place within the jurisdiction of the United States ... from any foreign kingdom, place or country." Great Britain also banned the African slave trade in 1807.

• On March 7, 1876, 29-year-old Alexander Graham Bell receives a patent for his revolutionary new invention — the telephone. Three days after filing the patent, the telephone carried its first intelligible message — the famous "Mr. Watson, come here, I need you!" — from Bell to his assistant.

• On March 3, 1887, Anne Sullivan begins teaching 6-year-old Helen Keller, who lost her sight and hearing after a severe illness at the age of 19 months. Under Sullivan's tutelage, the previously uncontrollable Keller flourished, eventually graduating from college and becoming an international lecturer and activist.

• On March 8, 1893, Emmet Dalton, the only survivor of the Dalton Gang's disastrous attempt to rob two Kansas banks, begins serving a life sentence in the Kansas State Penitentiary. After 14 years in prison, Emmet won parole and returned to society a reformed man. He finally married and began a successful career as a real-estate agent.

• On March 4, 1933, at the height of the Great Depression, Franklin Delano Roosevelt is inaugurated as the 32nd president of the United States. In his famous inaugural address, Roosevelt outlined his "New Deal" and told Americans that "the only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

• On March 5, 1966, a jet breaks apart in mid-air and plummets into Japan's Mount Fuji. All 124 people on board the aircraft were killed. The plane's pilot apparently flew close to the mountain in order to give the passengers a better view, and severe turbulence literally blew the plane apart.

• On March 6, 1986, Georgia O'Keeffe, the artist who gained worldwide fame for her austere minimalist paintings of the American southwest, dies in Santa Fe, N.M., at the age of 98. O'Keeffe's paintings of cow skulls and calla lilies gained particular attention and won her an enthusiastic audience.

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

More Fond Memories Of Henry

Henry, frankly, would be embarrassed by it all. Gratefully touched, too.

While it's been a month since Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth passed away, the condolences, tributes and stories about my father's impact on people's lives continue to stream into the Sun office.

We've been getting e-mails, cards, letters and visits to the office from folks from throughout the city and beyond who were shocked and saddened by his death. I've been stopped on the street by well-wishers who have wonderful memories about Henry, too.

Every single word we read and hear gives comfort to all his loved ones.

I want to share with our readers some of those heart-felt thoughts below:

Jonathan Burak, former Quincy Sun photographer:

"Henry was one of the finest persons I have ever known. His commitment to journalistic integrity, getting the best story — the body of work he produced will always be a key to understanding the history of Quincy during his time.

"Henry was always supportive of my photography, was generous and forthcoming with ideas for my career, and introduced me to persons who would be my clients for years. He made The Quincy Sun such that I felt honored whenever my pictures were displayed in the front window.

"Henry always wanted me to succeed. Although I gave up photography as a profession a long time ago, Henry Bosworth was a lot of the reason I was good at it. Henry always inspired those who worked for him to give their best; he was not a man one would ever want to disappoint.

"Henry Bosworth had an extraordinary life and a wonderful family, many people loved him, and he was extremely well-liked and respected by all who knew him. He made an indelible mark on the history of Quincy and will always be remembered as a great man and a master journalist."

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro:

"I am deeply saddened by the passing of your father. The news touched me in a way that I only experienced during the passing of my own father a year ago. While I got to know Henry during the past decade, little did he know that his life's work shaped my world and defined the city I grew to love.

"During my time on the council, Henry was kind, honest and fair. Today, The Quincy Sun remains our most anticipated and enjoyable piece of mail each week.

"While a preplanned business trip precluded me from extending my personal condolences to your family, my thoughts and prayers remained firmly in Quincy. When my plane landed late and I arrived to a darkened city, I thought of Henry Bosworth and felt as if I were returning to a different city. While I know The Quincy Sun will still shine brightly, I feel as if Quincy has marked the close of another golden era in its history. An era where Quincy's story was not only fully and fairly told, but as importantly cherished under the watchful and adoring eye of its decent and honorable disciple: Henry Bosworth. Godspeed."

Ron Della Chiesa, nephew of former mayor Amelio Della Chiesa, and radio host of WPLM 99.1 in Plymouth:

"I was saddened to hear of the passing of one of Quincy's great legends. Not only was Henry Bosworth a wonderful man loved by all who knew him but a dear friend.

"I will always remember our casual conversations on the phone or when I'd drop by to visit him at the Quincy Sun's office. We talked about other Quincy legends like Ruth Gordon, Lee Remick and Billy DeWolfe. He would always comment on the music he loved and I'd always be sure to dedicate something by Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett, or Glenn Miller to him on my radio show.

"He had an impeccable memory when it came to history and it was always a joy to hear him reminisce about places long gone like the Alhambra Tea Room, Paul Mayo's barbershop, or the grand old movie houses like the Strand, Adams, and Capitol.

"One of his favorite stories was about my late uncle Amelio, one of the city's former mayors. Henry told me he would go around city hall making sure all the lights were off at night to save the city money before going home.

HENRY

"His founding of the Sun and his love of the city assures his place as another great Quincy legend that has passed on.

"As the song goes, Thanks for the Memories, Henry ... We'll miss you!"

Bill Arienti, Quincy firefighter:

"As a newsman, the greatest praise I can give your father is that he was fair and honest. In a city steeped in political rhetoric and dealings that is Quincy, your father maintained a professional distance from the fray to observe and report the news in an impartial manner. He never took sides, but instead offered the facts, un-opinionated, and allowed the readers to judge the situation for themselves.

"The Quincy Sun never had an agenda to promote, but rather an idea to which it aspired ... The reporters he hired over the years are better reporters today because of Henry's tutelage as well as his ethical commitment to journalism. I hope you pick up his heavy torch to continue his legacy of shining light on the truth and enlightening the readers of Quincy."

John F. McDonough, George F. Bryan VFW Post:

"Henry Bosworth was what every man tries to be. He was a gentleman's Gentleman. He enriched our city with his newspaper and its fair and honest coverage. Henry was a longtime member of our post and we always welcomed his support.

"Our World War II veterans are passing on at a rapid rate now, with each passing the country loses a member of the 'Greatest Generation.' May God Bless Henry."

Norma and Martin Finnegan, former Quincy athletic director and residents of Desert Hot Springs, CA:

"Just received my Feb. 12 issue of The Quincy Sun. 'What a shock! A great man, a great paper. Fair, honest, timely, touching at times. A great loss to Quincy. May God give strength to Bob and the staff to continue.'

Dorothy Blythe, Wollaston:

"Quincy has lost its greatest advocate, one who brought joy to many. His non-judgmental reporting made him a hero to many of us. He really captured Quincy at it finest. I read it faithfully every week. I'm so glad that the Sun is a family-run paper because you learned from the best.

"Everyone reads the Sun. What a tribute to your father. Keep up the good work. It's your father's last gift to Quincy. Priceless!"

Peggy and Frank Walker, Quincy:

"I remember Henry when I taught at the Woodward School and at Quincy Junior College. He was always fair and balanced as is demonstrated by The Sun."

Donna Teed of Holbrook, daughter of the late Bernie Reisberg:

"You and I share paths alike, both our fathers were very loved, respected, successful men in the city of Quincy. My father owned Bernie's Formal Shop in Quincy Center. My mother Marilyn gave me the Feb. 19th issue of The Quincy Sun to read, which brought me to my this letter. I was overwhelmed with emotions after reading this edition. I, like hundreds of others, was touched by your dad's life.

"It was so heart-felt to read your expressions of your dad. We really don't know one another though I felt a common bond. Our fathers were leaders and we followed. May this letter bring you strength and much success."

Annie Murphy, Rockland:

"We lived across from each other in Quincy Point. How ironic that he went to the Point a week before he passed away. I never realized the many commitments he had. I'm amazed and feel privileged that he would take my phone calls when I called. I appreciate the time he took to discuss with me about the column that he had written about. I'm going to miss talking to him. I hope you will run his Sunbeam stories every so often.

"Everyone who knew Henry has lost a good friend. But your loss is greater. You have lost a husband, father, grandfather, great-grandfather and best friend."

Thank you to everyone who has taken the time to send a personal note about Henry. We know there are many others and we appreciate every single one.

With the help and support of true friends like those mentioned above, and many others like them, Henry's legacy will continue to live on with each issue of The Quincy Sun.

The newspaper, community and his family won't be the same. But we cherish what Henry left us: fond memories and touching stories to last a lifetime.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1926 postcard view looking down what is now Macy Street from its intersection with Sea Street in Houghs Neck. Macy Street was known then as Center Street. Very little remains the same in this view today. The Atlantic & Pacific (A&P) grocery store, which was one of 12 in Quincy at the time, is now the site of the Houghs Neck Community Center. The large building on the left was the Midland Hotel and is now the site of two houses. All the stores on the left are gone as well. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

READERS FORUM

The Public Has A Right To Know Salary Facts, Too

Regarding a recent article in a major South Shore newspaper that listed employees salaries for the City of Quincy that were in excess of $100,000 for the year 2008, I feel the need to set the record straight with regards to the poor reporting that was displayed.

The first thing that came to mind as I was reading the article was that it made no attempt to compare these figures to any other community of similar size. Two, that it did not breakdown the figures. And three, there was also no mention of rank or position in the organization.

Without this comparison or breakdown of the compensation, these figures mean very little. Many of these total salary figures were the result of individuals getting retroactive pay, compensation pay for privately paid details, legal settlements and/or overtime. Much of which will not be included in their pension, which, by the way, employees contribute up to 11% of their salary to fund.

After 31 years on the Quincy Fire Department, I have found that most public employees are dedicated and motivated. I can only speak for myself, but I know that to be promoted on QFD requires many hours of study. We as a group (QFD) consistently score among the highest statewide on civil service promotional exams. This is due to the fact that our compensation is better than many other fire departments in the state. This results in more motivated, dedicated, and competent employees, which benefits the employee and the citizens of Quincy.

Our union is constantly working to maintain and/or improve working conditions that benefit both the workers and the citizens of Quincy. We are active in the community, supporting youth sports teams, working with local politicians, attending public meetings, raising money for MDA, providing Christmas gifts for less privileged kids and supporting local businesses. All of which is done on our own time and at our expense.

We continually train and become more educated throughout our careers to develop and maintain skills and knowledge to help us to perform at the highest level possible. Most of which is done while on duty. However, many of us earn college credits and/or degrees and attend training sessions, and seminars while off duty at our own expense. For these reasons I consider us to be professionals and feel that our compensation is justified.

Every time a firefighter or police officer is seriously injured or killed, all we hear from the media is the word "hero." However, that usually doesn't last too long. As soon as a couple of bad apples or some volunteer firefighter gets caught doing something wrong or there is a financial crisis, we now become overcompensated, lazy, and not deserving of our pensions. I feel we are never heroes. We are just doing the job that we love and are paid to do.

I would like in the future to see this South Shore circulation get all the facts before they trash the employees of the City of Quincy. There seemed to be no other reason for publishing what is already public knowledge, than to incite an already cynical and panicked public. This would be the definition of trash journalism.

The public has a right to know how their money is being spent but they also have the right to know the facts.

Budget Cuts Reach $110,209 After $60,224 Slashed From DPW

By FRANK McCAULEY

Total cuts in Quincy's record $18 million budget reached $110,209 when the Finance Committee sitting in its second consecutive Saturday all-day session, sliced $60,224 from the appropriations.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa had approved for the Public Works Department.

The cuts made thus far in the budget will ease the tax rate by about 66 cents.

This Week
1959
50 Years Ago

Meanwhile, the important question of whether or not the city will let the trash collection out on compact and the adoption of work program of capital improvements for the Public Works Department are still to be determined. (Editor's note: Both the collection of trash and the collection of garbage, which was collected independently were both contracted out to private contractors during the Della Chiesa administration.)

AREA BARBERS TO VOTE ON $1.75 HAIRCUT

Haircuts are up to $1.75 in most union barbershops in Boston today, but prices in Quincy and other South Shore towns remain unchanged at $1.50, at least temporarily.

Four hundred barbers from the Greater Boston-area attended a mass meeting on the price question. Their vote was in favor of a 25-cent increase on all cuts. Men's haircuts went up to $1.75, fancy cuts to $2, children's haircuts to $1.50 and shaves to $1.25.

Vincent Pepe, president of Local 699 of the Associated Master Barbers, said that he would ask members at the Local's monthly meeting whether they would go along with the Boston prices.

Parent Social Fundraiser To Benefit NQHS Senior Stay

The North Quincy High School Senior Stay Out Committee will host a Parent "Fundraising" Social Friday, March 13 from 7 p.m. to midnight at the Furnace Brook Golf Course.

The evening will feature a dj, 50-50 drawing, raffle items, door prize and light hors d'oeuvres.

Cost is $20 per person.

Proceeds will benefit the upcoming, all-night, after-prom party.

The committee recently lost 12 years worth of decorations and supplies when a pipe in the school burst and ruined all their decorations.

The committee is looking to raise funds to replace the decorations and to help fund the event.

To purchase tickets, contact Sandy at 617-786-8523. Tickets will also be available at the door the night of the event.

N.Q. Catholic Women's Club To Meet March 12

The Catholic Women's Club of North Quincy will meet Thursday, March 12 at 7 p.m. in the school hall of Sacred Heart.

Virginia Moore, chair person for the evening, has planned an "Irish Nite."

Corned beef and cabbage supper will be served.

Make reservations with Virginia by March 6.

Priscilla Langille, president, will conduct the business meeting.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Ann Marie's And Jennifer's Easy Entrees

Today's recipes are from my daughter Ann Marie and my granddaughter Jennifer.

They are both short recipes, but both delicious and easy.

The first one is an Alfredo Tortellini

You can either purchase Alfredo white sauce or make it as follows:

1 stick unsalted butter

3/4 cup grated parmesan cheese

1/2 pint heavy cream (half and half can be substituted)

1 large jar of roasted red peppers

1 pound tortellini

Melt the butter and add the cheese. Mix and then add the cream.

Place the peppers in a food processor or blender, and then mix to the Alfredo sauce.

Cook the tortellini according to directions, and then pour sauce over with extra grated cheese on top. It is a truly different flavor.

Jennifer's recipe is for an easy boiled dinner, but equally as tasty as if it were made with smoked shoulder or corned beef. It takes half the time. It can either be made with a chicken, beef stock or a ham bouillon that can be purchased in the supermarket.

Easy boiled dinner

1 large onion (cut in half)

1 head cabbage (cut up)

2 large carrots (cut in pieces)

3 medium sized potatoes (peeled and cut in quarters))

3 sweet potatoes (peeled and cut also in quarters

1 turnip (peeled and cut)

2 large ham slices (cut in pieces)

1 large carton of stock (or water flavored with a favorite bouillon)

In about six quarts of either water or a stock, place all the vegetables and cook covered until vegetables are tender. Cut the ham slices in pieces and add the to mix. Cook until ham is done. Serve hot with corn bread or crusty French bread.

Amelia Earhart Presentation, Walking Tour At Crane Library

Celebrate Women's History Month with a dramatic presentation about aviation pioneer Amelia Earhart, followed by a walking tour of her Quincy haunts.

Historic re-enactor Jessa Piaia will present a free one-person interpretation of Amelia Earhart Tuesday, March 10 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The walking tour will be held Saturday, March 14 at 10 a.m.

"Meet Amelia Earhart: First Lady of the Air" is set in 1936, when Earhart was a popular speaker on the national circuit and preparing for take-off for her 1937 around-the-world flight from which she never returned.

Inspired at an early age by the suffragist movement, Earhart identified with the generation of "the new woman" who had won the right to vote in 1920. Acclaimed as the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic in 1932, she was previously part of the 1928 "Friendship" flight departing from East Boston Harbor on its historic trans-Atlantic flight.

At the time of the "Friendship" flight, Amelia was living in Medford, while working a social worker at the Denison House in downtown Boston, and helping to design an airplane hangar at the Denison Airfield in Squantum.

Clad in basic aviator gear and bearing a striking resemblance to the subject of her character portrayal, Jessa Piaia uses drama to reveal the accomplishments, struggles, and contributions of women to American history.

For more information about the presentation, call 617-376-1301.

On Saturday, March 14 at 10:00 a.m. (rain date March 21), join a free walking tour of the area where Amelia Earhart and Harriet Quimby, another aviation pioneer, flew in Squantum.

Led by Sandy Johnson, the tour will explore Squantum Point Park where granite markers commemorate Earhart's and Quimby's Quincy achievements. Meet at Squantum Point Park parking lot. (Take E. Squantum Street towards Squantum. Turn left on to Victory Rd. at the entrance to Marina Bay. Go straight through the first rotary. Take the next left to the end.) For more information about the walking tour, or to verify the date in case of inclement weather, call 617-472-0799.

The presentation and tour are sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library and the Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures program.

Guidance Department Presentation At NQHS March 9

Parents and guardians are invited to attend an evening of informational presentation by the guidance department of North Quincy High School Monday, March 9 at 6:30 p.m. in the school's auditorium.

The presentation will focus on the course selection process.

For more information call the guidance office at 617-984-8747.

The deadline to return the course selection sheet signed by the student, teachers and parent is Wednesday, March 18.

Wollaston Garden Club Seeks Completion Of Merrymount Park

Wollaston Garden Club, (WGC) at its February Board meeting, initiated a petition drive to seek support in its application for funds from the newly established Community Preservation Act (CPA).

CPA was voted in 2006 by a large margin of Quincy voters to establish funding resource for projects, such as historic preservation, affordable housing and open space. In short, one present tax is levied to real-estate taxes for this purpose. State's CPA matches or partially matches the local funds for project applied and reviewed by Community Preservation Committee, and given a final approval by the Mayor's Office.

Wollaston Garden Club, an active organization involved in civic beautification, has for a long time been interested in the completion of Merrymount Park and its Adams' Walk and gardens. Most of this park at Hancock and Fenno Streets has been completed by the City and the project has received $50,000 funding in the past from the DCR Historic Landscape Preservation Initiative and funds from the Quincy Partnership.

The garden club and many of the citizen petition signers long to see the project finally completed.

"I understand it," said Jim Cooke, historian and interpreter of John Quincy Adams and other significant figures in United States history. "This will be the realization (meaning when park is completed) of a long-held dream of Charles Francis Adams, 2nd in conjunction with a plan developed by his friend, the great Frederick Law Olmsted."

"Merrymount Park is a delightful prospect and deserves the attention it will subsequently receive. I assume the historic significance of the area will be better understood following this important work," Cooke added.

Wollaston Garden Club, founded 1927 and member of Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, focuses its goals on civic beautification; education and support in the areas of conservation and preservation; and love of gardening and the study of landscape design.

In April of 2008, the garden club and the City of Quincy rededicated the Anne Hutchinson Square with more than one hundred interested residents, and teachers and students from the area schools present.

March 20 At Quincy Elks Hall

St. Patrick's Day Luncheon To Benefit Flag Day

This year's Quincy Partnership St. Patrick's Day Lunch on Friday, March 20 will help offset costs of the Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration, which organizers say will be the "same great community event" despite the economic crisis.

"During times like these, events like our Flag Day Celebration take on an even added importance, and the Partnership wants to do its part to ensure that it stays the same great community event this year," said Partnership President Edward Keohane.

The St. Patrick's Day event, featuring local politicians skewering each over a lunch of corned beef and cabbage, will be held in the newly renovated Quincy Elks Hall on Quarry Street. Tickets are $50, and can be purchased at the Mayor's Office, City Clerk's Office and at the Adams Inn.

The Partnership, formed to promote Quincy as a great place to live, work and do business, traditionally pays for a portion of the City's annual Flag Day Celebration, which is among the largest of any such event in the country. This year, though, the group is stepping up fundraising to pick up more of the tab to help cover the city's portion of the bill

"I am more than willing to take a few lumps for a good cause, and I will be ready to dish out a few of my own, also for a good cause," said Mayor Thomas Koch, who is also chairman of the Flag

Day Committee. "Flag Day is special to our city, and I am thankful that the Partnership is stepping to the plate, as it always does. We are such a strong community because of groups like the Partnership that truly care about Quincy."

QUINCY COLLEGE BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Seeks Nomination for a Board Member

The Appointing Council Shall Meet
To Consider Qualified Applicants For Appointment To The Board

Nominees are to be considered for appointment to fill one vacancy

Board members are advocates for the institution and have certain governance and oversight responsibilities for the College as specified in the enabling legislation. Members are expected to attend regular meetings, ordinarily scheduled in the evening, and to participate fully as a member of specific subcommittees usually meeting several times a month during the day. Additional members are participants in Commencement College Ceremonies, and demonstrate in actions and word a commitment to the mission and purpose of the College. Members must submit an annual financial disclosure form to the City Clerk.

Interested individuals must submit a letter of interest and resume, to the Appointing Council, to be received on or before March 26, 2009. The Appointing Council shall meet to consider qualified candidates, and will provide an optional opportunity for interested parties to address the Appointing Council. The Council welcomes diversity in applicants and encourages anyone who believes he or she might contribute positively to the continued success of the institution to respond. Those with experience in higher education are encouraged to apply.

Manet Health Centers Net $121,000 In Grants

The Manet Community Health Center has received two state grants totaling $121,000 to provide direct services to patients and clients in its six centers, five in Quincy and one in Hull.

The office of Attorney General Martha Coakley awarded an $80,000 Prescription Drug Assistance grant over a two-year period to provide prescription drug access to patients.

The award is designed to assist low income and uninsured patients to access critical and medically necessary prescription medication and supplemental medical supplies.

Manet cares for more than 2,000 patients on the South Shore who have been diagnosed with a chronic condition and are reliant on daily medications and supplies.

The Center has seen an increase in patients with insurance problems due to many newly unemployed and self-employed who have seen their incomes decline due to the recession and can no longer self-pay for insurance.

A second award, one of $41,000, is an Enrollment, Outreach and Access to Care grant from the Office of Health and Human Services for the period February to Sept. 30, 2009.

The grant will help support the Center's Outreach and Enrollment Team members who canvas the South Shore to identify, support, educate and enroll individuals and families eligible for insurance coverage.

From December 2007 to December 2008, Manet supported 1,800 South Shore individuals to gain or maintain insurance coverage and close to 50 since January.

During the new grant period, the Center is expected to assist more than 200 individuals per month.

The Outreach and Enrollment Team of Hawraa Alsaad, Keith Barry, Xuan Du, Morgan Kutzman, Ken Moore and Tim Shih come from a diverse range of cultures.

They are able to respond to the linguistic and cultural needs of residents and educate them on the importance of preventive and routine health maintenance and wellness care.

City, College Officials To Meet

to the college were routine for such matters.

"The college has the right to obtain counsel," said Timmins who indicated that $545 an hour charges were on the high side, but added, "This is a fairly sophisticated matter."

Timmins said it was necessary to have all the issues vetted and agreed that the Inspector General's staff could contribute to clearing the issues.

"It needs a lot of time," said Councillor John Keenan who described the proposed split as "complex, unique." Keenan said he has long been an advocate of the college's independence.

"I hope we don't get bogged down in politics," said Keenan who set the two meeting dates.

"I don't view Quincy College as a street sweeper (put out to routine public bid)," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Guro who agreed, "I think the Inspector General should weigh in."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, also, stated that a routine bidding process as in selling the college off for "30 pieces of silver" to the highest bidder was not appropriate.

McNamee recommended that the council consider a PILOT or Payment in Lieu of Taxes agreement in which the private institution provide services to the city equal to the institutions taxes, or in this case debt.

Paul Phillips, president of the Quincy Education Association, called the proposal a "win win for all," at the Feb. 2 meeting.

Contacted last week, Phillips said he believes that New Quincy College would operate as a quasi-public institution with an agreement modeled after Boston Medical Center which was originally a department of that city.

As such, the employees would be represented by the QEA until they voted otherwise.

As for Quincy College employees remaining in the state retirement plan, Phillips said, "The state retirement pension plan won't cost the city anything."

Neither will the health insurance provisions for college employees, according to Phillips, "There shouldn't be any cost to the city for their staying in the G.I.C. The college would have to pay the employer's portion of the G.I.C."

At this time, Quincy College business is conducted by its Board of Governors which includes Dennis.

There is currently one vacancy on the board.

'Are You Okay' Program Rescues 85-Year-Old Quincy Woman

Sheriff Michael Bellotti's "Are You OK?" program proved its worth once again early Tuesday morning, rescuing an 85-year-old Quincy man who was having medical problems he was unable to communicate.

When the sheriff's officer placed the daily well-being check call to the elderly man at 6:05 a.m., he noted that the man seemed barely able to speak in response to the question.

The officer quickly called 911 on behalf of the man and an ambulance soon had him on the way to Quincy Medical Center to be evaluated.

"The 'Are You OK?' program is designed to make sure someone is regularly checking in with elderly people living alone in case they have a medical problem and cannot get help by themselves," said Bellotti.

"We hope this gentleman will be fine and we were glad we were able to get him medical care when he needed it."

Each morning, officers from the program place calls to check on roughly 280 men and women throughout Norfolk County who have signed up for the service.

is looking forward to new ideas and input.

Gutro's ward includes Quincy Center. He asked Heapes how important the controversial cross-town roadway or Concourse was to the planning for the center.

Heapes called the Concourse essential and non-negotiable, suggesting his team would not have considered the project without Concourse approval.

The Concourse is expected to divert commuter traffic from Quincy Center by providing a four-lane thruway from Granite Street to South ern Artery.

Gutro, also, suggested expanding the project proposal to 50 Adams St. which will soon be vacated by South Shore Buick and is on a direct route to the Adams National Historical Park.

Finn asked Heapes whether his firm was committed to union workers, noting that Quincy Center was marking the 100th anniversary of significant labor unions.

"We have financed (projects) with union funds," responded Heapes, adding his firm always abides by prevailing wage and labor agreements. "I think we're on board with you on that."

Raymondi asked whether Heapes had investigated T air rights available to the city while Ward 6 Councilor Brian McNamee asked about the moving of the T station.

Heapes also outlined his commitment to Town Brook which lies beneath the Hancock Parking lot.

"Whatever we do will improve it," said Heapes, adding that his firm is studying the entire brook.

Award-Winning Spanish Film At Library

The award-winning Spanish language film "The Pope's Toilet" will be shown Thursday, March 12 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The movie begins in 1988, in Melo, an Uruguayan town on the Brazilian border, which awaits the visit of Pope John Paul II. About 50,000 people were expected to attend, and locals believed that selling food and drink would make them rich.

The movie is not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

Indian Consul General Visits Mayor, Local Sites

Indian Consul General Prabhu Dayal of the Indian Consulate in N.Y. recently met with Quincy Mayor Thomas P. Koch in the Mayor's office at City Hall.

The meeting between the two officials was arranged by Kumu Gupta, who is on the Advisory Board of the Asian American Commission of Massachusetts and vice chairperson of the Mayor's Human Rights Commission in Quincy.

Koch and Consul General Dayal spoke about the role of the Indian community in Quincy in particular and Massachusetts in general. Consul General Dayal promised Koch full support of his office in helping Indian American families and businesses in Quincy prosper.

The mayor expressed his sympathy for the families of the Mumbai attacks. The meeting ended with Koch presenting Consul General Dayal with a few token gift items as mementoes of historic Quincy.

While in Quincy Consul General Dayal was taken on a tour of the city by Gupta. They stopped by some of the historic sites of the city including the Adams National Historic Site, also known as 'The Old House' at Peace Field which was the summer White House of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and

City Takes March Storm In Stride

Quincy, according to Don McCasland of the Blue Hills Observatory, bringing the total for the 2008-09 season to 75.5 inches, 21.1 inches above normal.

Larry Prendeville, the commissioner of Public Works, was not available to estimate the cost of the latest episode of snow removal but Quincy had spent $2.2 million through the earlier storms.

Two teen-aged girls were injured when a private contractor's truck removing snow from a private development on Martensen Street backed into them.

Kayla Osgood, 17, of Weymouth, suffered a broken leg and Ariel Havey, also 17, of Quincy, a sprained ankle. Both were treated and released from Quincy Medical Center.

The driver of the truck, Otoniel DePaulo, 29, of Abington, was cited for driving without a license.

Kids in the Quincy Public Schools enjoyed their third snow day of the winter but Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro's office said the time will be added on the end of the school year, which will be moved from June 17 to June 22.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Clothes Dryer Vents: Beware Of Lint

Did you read that article about the fire fatality in another community where they believe the fire started with dryer lint? We've addressed that issue here in the past while its time to look at it once again. It's become a frequent cause of residential fires and in some instances, fatalities, while it's time to join in and take an active role in eliminating hazardous lint conditions.

The article prompted me to take another look at my own electric cloths dryer and the lint situation within the exhaust hose. I suggest that it's a great rainy Sunday afternoon project. Today I confirmed that it's apparently not enough to clean the lint trap. Today's examination of the exhaust hose exposed the fact that lint had accumulated within the hose itself. That's been a concern of mine. I removed it and found a dime size hole had formed as well. It formed in a location out of view of a visual scan of the hose exterior, which I frequently perform. The hole had formed just at the location where the hose left the dryer and formed an angle towards the outside wall. It stands to reason then, that the hose at that angle would be exposed to the most intense heat. That intensity created that hole over time.

That condition concerned me where an interruption in the inner wall can trap and accumulate lint. It did in this instance. After removal of the hose, and the purchase of a new aluminum hose for $10, I replaced the entire length. The replacement brought me a sense of accomplishment and well being.

I'll often do a visual from the outdoors as well where I have a grate cover over the vent on the exterior wall. The openings on that grate will fill with lint, which tells me how much lint escapes past the lint trap over time. I have to remove that grate four times a year and clean it. It stands to reason then, that lint can easily accumulate within the hose interior over time as well.

I suggest that with busy family schedules, and the excessive use of cloths dryers by multiple users, time taken to thoroughly examine the lint condition of the vent hose is time well spent. I genuinely believe in the benefit of proactive efforts at preventing fire. Dryer vent hose examination is a great place to start. Lint accumulation has become a frequent cause of residential fires while it's something we can address with some basic homeowners' skills.

Consequently, please take an active role in your own safety and take some time to examine your dryer vent hose. You might consider encouraging management within your apartment and condominium building to do so as well. Thank you for doing so.

The last of the old time movie houses in Quincy may be getting a new life.

The 83-year-old Wollaston Theater, closed and deteriorating for the past six years, is under contract for sale to Street-Works Development Corp. of New York.

But before you pick up that box of popcorn and plop down in your seat to watch the latest Tom Cruise epic be aware that the deal is still far from finalized.

"I'm not sure it will happen," said Richard Heapes, a partner in Street-Works. "We did get it under contract. But there are major environmental and insurability issues."

Heapes declined to discuss details of the contract with Yvonne Chandler, owner of the building on Beale Street in the heart of the Wollaston business district. It is valued at $12 million.

The Chandlers, Yvonne and her husband, Arthur, have owned the building since 1979 and operated it as a movie theater until 2003 when it was closed. Arthur Chandler died last April.

The Wollaston Theater, or the "Wolly," as it was known in its heyday, harks back to a time when Quincy was dotted with movie houses from the Regent in North Quincy to the Lincoln in Quincy Point.

Downtown Quincy bristled with neighborhood style movie houses. There was the elegant Strand, the Alhambra (aka the Art), the Quincy (aka the Capital), the State and the Adams.

The Wolly was opened in 1926 as a vaudeville house and outlived its fellow movie houses long enough to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, Feb. 19, at approximately 1:20 p.m., Officer Paul Foley was dispatched to 1025 Hancock Street for a report of a past larceny. Upon arrival, the officer interviewed the victim and the property manager regarding the incident.

The victim said that she purchased online from Staples two external drives used for computers and displayed the receipts. The items were purchased on Feb. 15 at a total cost of $262.48. She arranged with the delivery driver to leave the merchandise under the mailboxes in the lobby of the building on the afternoon of Tuesday the 17th.

The victim checked for the merchandise that afternoon but it was not there. She then contacted Staples, who confirmed that the items were left at the location she wanted. The victim said that she went to the property manager and informed her of the theft. This particular property has surveillance cameras, so they reviewed the tapes, saw a suspect in action and then notified the Police.

Officer Foley watched the video footage, which clearly showed the delivery man walking through the front entrance and placing two cardboard boxes with the "Staples" brand label onto a table next to the mailboxes at 1:23 p.m. At 1:45 p.m., a man is seen walking through the lobby from the elevators (indicating the man was already in the building) and walks up to the boxes.

The suspect picked up both boxes, looked around in a suspicious manner, and then walked back into the elevator. The property manager recognized this man as one of the tenants. Prior to confronting the suspect, Officer Foley received a photo of the items from the Staples website to identify what they were looking for. Officers Steve DesRoche and Jay Grazioso assisted Officer Foley as they knocked on the suspect's door.

When the door opened, Officer Foley immediately recognized the man as the suspect in the videotape. The suspect was still wearing the same clothing from the videotape. After getting permission to enter the apartment, Officer Grazioso immediately noticed two cardboard boxes with the "Staples" logo behind the front door in plain view. The suspect was asked if he had ordered anything in the mail or had retrieved any packages from the lobby on Tuesday and he responded "no."

The suspect gave the Officers permission to look around the apartment. Moments later, both items were found. One drive was located in the bedroom under a computer, unopened in its original box and the other was already being hooked up to the computer. The suspect could not produce any receipts for these items and offered no explanation for how they ended up in his apartment.

The suspect, a 57-year-old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for "Larceny over $250", a felony. The external drives were shown to the victim and she confirmed that they were the items she purchased. Photos of the two items and their packaging were taken as evidence and a copy of the videotape will follow.

When arranging for a package to be delivered, it is best to create a plan, rather than to just leave it in the lobby or on the front steps. Some options are to arrange for a neighbor to accept the package, have it delivered at your work address, pick it up at the post office or company's locale or leave a telephone number to be called when delivery is near.

If there are no other options other than to leave the package at your home, give instructions to put the package out of view from the street, like a side entrance or behind a fixture in your yard.

$1 Billion Plan To Revitalize Quincy Center

-ment preparation, the city is poised to create a stunning future for Quincy Center through a private and public partnership, according to Heapes.

The proposal includes commercial buildings, a hotel, a residential development of 1,100 units, possibly a new cinema, one or two major shopping outlets, restaurants and sidewalk cafes all accessed by wider, pedestrian-friendly sidewalks sporting full-grown trees from day one.

"We can absolutely guarantee that this can happen," Heapes said of the proposal which he and Mayor Thomas Koch unveiled Monday during early morning previews for the media and a late night presentation for City Council.

"We're very bullish on it," said Koch who predicts "a downtown we can all be proud of" in place of an area he described as "tired" and long overdue for improvement.

"We're not trying to change Quincy," said Heapes, predicting that the project will enhance the city's desirability for residents, shoppers and businesses.

In fact, Heapes said most of the existing businesses and buildings will remain untouched except for increased value and sales. "We're not trying to level all of downtown."

Heapes said his firm has already invested $15 million in Quincy Center real estate, another $3 million in architects and fees, and the team expects to conclude negotiations on another $10 million in property purchases in the next few months.

"I wouldn't be coming here if we didn't have enough property controlled," said Heapes. "We're absolutely committed."

Quincy's three major assets, its historic attractions, its proximity to Boston and T connection, and its 27 miles of waterfront make the city an "incredible locale," according to Heapes.

New buildings might, also, house Quincy College, as well as a new corporate wellness center and plenty of accessible street and off-street parking, according to Heapes who pointed to set-asides on the model for the city's festivals and Farmers' Market.

"Our parking garages are not ugly gray boxes," said Heapes, noting that parking will be located under new buildings and street parking will still be available.

Under the current plan, phase one will focus on a pedestrian-friendly green-space with trees and landscaping called Adams Green. This will offer visitors and residents an easy and inviting trek from First Parish Church to Hancock Cemetery, the old burial ground, and City Hall.

Phase 2 would focus on "taming Hancock Street," according to Heapes whose proposal includes 20-foot sidewalks and mature trees in front of sidewalk cafes, street-level retail shops, a commercial building at Hancock and Granite Street, and a possible hotel.

In the final phase, developers would construct 1,100 units of mixed housing, ranging from high-end lofts to affordable housing at the Hancock Parking lot which would include more greenspace and varied architecture.

"This represents over a billion dollars of private investment," said Heapes, noting that another $250 million must be spent on public infrastructure. "The infrastructure is old and needs a lot of work."

Heapes said he hopes for site plan approval, land disposition and permitting from City Council by December of this year, groundbreaking in 2010 and completion in 2013-2014.

In addition, Koch will be submitting proposed zoning revisions to the City Council in the next few months, according to Policy Director Christopher Walker.

In the meantime, Koch and Heapes said they will take the show on the road to numerous neighborhoods and business meetings throughout the city.

"We will have the conversations. We will listen and learn," said Heapes, adding that everything could change depending on citizen recommendations and input. "We're not here to do an experiment on Quincy," said Heapes who cited the firm's successes in Bethesda, MD, East Hartford, CT, and San Jose which, at 42 acres, is the same size as Quincy.

Heapes said his firm began "falling in love with Quincy in 2004" when the firm purchased the Granite Trust building (at 1400 Hancock Street), Quincy Center.

Heapes said the Granite Trust building will not be changed.

There are so many other attractions, according to Heapes.

"I've sent people from around the country to see your library," said Heapes.

Street-Works partner Lucy Wildrick and Jack Godshall, Entitlement Coordinator, joined Heapes for the media and council presentations.

Heapes said he and his firm have capital available in a down economy because "We didn't overleverage."

In addition, Heapes said the company's investors are private individuals and real estate investment trusts (REIT).

The city also prepared financially for renewal when City Council approved former Mayor William Phelan's request for a $30 million bond in 2007 for DIF or District Improvement Financing.

Top Spring Projects For Your Lawn And Garden

(ARA) - With the weather beginning to warm across the country, many people are venturing out into their yards to begin the process of turning what was once a winter wonderland into a lush green escape. The task might look overwhelming at first, but with a little help from the experts, you can have a fresh-looking lawn and garden in no time.

According to Lou Manfredini, Ace's "Helpful Hardware Man," there are three projects that every homeowner should do to spruce up your lawn and garden: Prune your shrubs and trees, grow new grass and plant brightly colored flowers. "The best part about these projects," says Manfredini "is that anyone can do them, and once they are finished they make a big difference."

Pruning

Pruning works by cutting away the excess growth and dead weight that keeps your shrubs and trees from filling out. By trimming this away, more buds will be able to show, allowing you to cultivate a stronger, more vibrant plant.

would take you 10 months to pay them off.

You'll need some equity in your house. Being upside down (owing more than the house is worth) will likely nix a refinance deal.

You'll need to prove your income now. Gone are the days of no-doc loans where you could put down any figure you wanted and nobody would check. Now they want to know for a fact that you earn enough to repay the loan.

Don't be surprised if you're turned down once or twice. If you really want to refinance, keep looking.

Two points to consider:

1. Do you plan to stay in the house long enough to recoup the closing costs and make a refinance worthwhile?

2. If you need to move and sell your house, will there be a pre-payment penalty that could cost you thousands of dollars to retire the loan?

Beware choosing anything but a fixed-rate loan. Tens of thousands of homeowners ran into trouble when their mortgages reset to a much higher rate. With a fixed rate loan, you'll know exactly what your payments will be for the life of the loan.

David Uffington regrets that he cannot personally answer reader questions, but will incorporate them into his column whenever possible. Write to him in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475, or send e-mail to columnreply@gmail.com.

© 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

"One thing to remember is not to over-prune," says Manfredini. "Too much pruning will shock your plant and could inhibit growth." To avoid this, hold out your first two fingers; if these were stems on a plant you would never want to cut below your first knuckle.

As with most home improvement projects, it's very important to have the right tools on hand. Certain pruners, such as rose pruners, are made specifically for roses, while head shears can be used on most heavy-duty pruning projects. Make sure you purchase pruners that are sturdy enough to do the job and feel comfortable and manageable in your hand. If you already have pruners, consider having them sharpened at your local hardware store before you begin working. You'll notice the difference immediately.

Grow New Grass

After lying dormant for a few months, your grass might need a little coaxing to get it to its pre-winter state. To prepare your lawn, thatch it by lightly running a rake across the top to pick up any sticks, leaves, debris or dead grass.

Next you will need to purchase grass seed that is indigenous to your area and that will grow with the amount of shade your lawn has. You'll need to purchase between 2 to 4 pounds of seed for every 1,000 feet you are planting. Spread the seed either by hand or with a mechanical spreader that you can rent at your local hardware store, but be sure to keep it even.

Once your seed is down, it's a good idea to lay fertilizer and water the entire lawn. In the weeks and months to come, be sure your lawn gets at least 1 or 2 inches of water a week, either naturally or from a sprinkler.

Plant Flowers

Flowers can spruce up any landscape design. Consider adding them around the base of a tree or on either side of your walkway.

"Consider purchasing established plants rather than seeds as they are easier to grow," explains Manfredini. "And look for bright colored plants like impatiens or black-eyed Susans."

Before planting, you'll need to make sure your soil is prepared. Loosen the soil in the area where you plan on planting and add an organic matter like peat moss to help give the plant more nutrients.

Next, dig a small hole, just deep enough to fit the roots of your plant and place the plant inside. Once the plant is in the hole, fill it in with dirt and lightly pack it down. Don't forget to water and fertilize the plant regularly and you'll have gorgeous flowers for months to come.

Refinance Mortgage at Lower Rates

With lower interest rates on home mortgages, it's possible that refinancing your loan could save you money each month. If the prevailing interest rates are a full percentage point below the rate you currently pay, it might be in your best interest to refinance.

The first step is to look at your credit history. It used to be that a FICO score of 720 was enough to get you a good interest rate on a mortgage. Now you could need a score of 740 or higher.

If your FICO score is good, determine if it's financially worth your while to refinance. Go online or consult with a lender to determine just how much you'd save each month.

You'll have to hunt for a lender, and it might be difficult to get in to see one right now because of the number of people refinancing.

You'll pay fees and closing costs associated with the loan. Do the math with a lender to find your best option and determine how long it will take to pay off those fees. If you save $300 every month by refinancing and the fees are $3,000, it

Do-It-Yourself Kitchen Projects Add Equity

(ARA) - A kitchen is one of the most used and important areas in a home. Even as home prices across the country decline, a kitchen remodel can still add value to your home.

According to the 2008-2009 Cost vs. Value Report (a joint study done by the National Association of Realtors and Remodeling magazine providing national and regional averages) kitchen remodels rank just after siding and window replacement in return on investment.

A few simple do-it-yourself projects in your kitchen can update the space without the expense of hiring professionals. Plan ahead, rent the right tools and get advice in order to complete your project on budget and on schedule to enhance the value of your home.

One way to reduce costs associated with DIY projects is to rent the tools you need from an American Rental Association (ARA) member rental store. Renting gives you access to all types of tools, including specialty tools that may be too expensive to purchase and too large to store but are necessary to finish the job successfully and professionally. ARA member rental stores are also great resources for expert advice on which tools you need, how to use them correctly and safely and how to best complete your project.

Here are some DIY project ideas to get you started.

Update the flooring

Adding ceramic tile to an outdated kitchen is a simple way to increase the value of your home. Rent a wet saw to make cutting the tile easy and the finished product look professional. Your ARA member rental store can teach you the basics of using a wet saw, as well as safety issues and tricks of the trade. Take advantage of their expertise to tile like a pro.

Remove wallpaper

Remove dated and dirty wallpaper. With the right tools, such as a steamer, the paper often just peels off. This machine is easy to operate and can be rented. It has a steam tank and a plate that emits vapor as you hold it to the wall, which usually loosens even the stickiest paper in about two or three minutes. Once you have removed the wallpaper, choose a neutral paint color.

Create a pass-through

A pass-through can add light and openness to your space. Draw an outline of the opening on the wall then remove enough wall material to locate any electrical, plumbing or gas lines. Once it's safe to proceed, rent a reciprocating saw to cut through the drywall, studs and nails. Renting an electric drill and nail gun to rough-in the opening and add trim creates a professional, finished look.

Add crown molding

This small detail adds an aura of luxury to your kitchen, and with the proper tools and instruction, it can be easily done in a weekend. Rent a compound miter saw to make the perfect cuts, and a nail gun to attach the molding. Ask your ARA member rental store expert for tips on cutting the corners correctly to avoid wasting materials.

To find your local ARA member rental store, visit www.RentalHQ.com, the world's largest rental store locator. You can search by geographic location and by the specific type of equipment you are looking to rent.

Budget Home Remodeling: It's All Done With Mirrors

(ARA) - With the housing crunch keeping more homeowners in homes they've outgrown, and the economy keeping renovation budgets tight, more homeowners are looking for smaller home improvement projects that offer big return on investment. While many homeowners may think of remodeling as heavy construction, it's possible to make a significant change in your home with projects that don't require any big structural changes.

In the past, if your bathroom was too small, you might tear it out, take space from here and there and not think twice about turning it into a huge master bath suite. The new twist is that homeowners will try to make it more livable with the smaller touches: more mirrors to add a sense of "space," new lighting, glass shower enclosures, and updated fixtures and hardware. Structurally, it's the same bathroom, but now it has an airier feel.

An interior "face-lift" allows you to use mirrors or glass to change the look of your environments relatively inexpensively, and recommit to your home, rather than sell it or simply undertake a big renovation. Not a do-it-yourselfer? The housing slow down also means good contractors may be able to take on these smaller projects that they passed on previously. Further, these contractors are more willing to negotiate a fair price, providing affordable opportunities to homeowners.

Mirrors are the leading tool in changing the way a room is perceived. Long seen as a "secret weapon" of interior designers, mirrors can change the look and feel of a room instantly, without a lot of effort or expense. They add light, create a sense of space and openness, and reflect interesting views. Mirrors are a simple way to change the look of a room and brighten up a space.

A recent study by a leading mirror manufacturer in the United States revealed that homeowners perceive a mirror as "cheap art," adding a focal point to a room that didn't have one before, at a cost far more attractive than a painting or expensively framed print. This option is creating a new era of interior design with mirrors. Interior decorators are discovering classy new ways to implement mirrors into the home environment with dramatic yet refined results.

"The new sense of design with mirrors has provided some groundbreaking interior aesthetic inside the home," says Randy Brooks of Gardner Glass Products. "New effects with mirror, including colored mirror, mirror with acid-etching, new custom sizes and beveling, etc., provide homeowners with a great design palette to add pizzazz to the home while fitting any design style."

Here are a few designer secrets for using mirrors or decorative glass to update your home:

In The Bath

- * A large mirror over a vanity can open up the space visually.

- * A framed mirror along with updated towels or hardware can update the space instantly.

- * Glass shower enclosures instead of a shower curtain make a small bathroom feel less crowded.

- * A mirrored wall can brighten up a small, understaircase powder room.

Elsewhere in the Home

- * A mirrored or back-painted glass backsplash in the kitchen reflects light back into the room without costly electrical work.

- * Transparent or a semi-transparent decorative glass in the upper kitchen-cabinet doors is an easy way to change the look instantly.

- * In the den, a large framed mirror over a fireplace adds a warm focal point as well as reflected light.

- * In the foyer, a mirrored wall portion can make the entrance area feel larger.

- * Glass table makes a dining room or sunny kitchen nook feel less cramped and allows colorful rugs, cushions and centerpieces to add impact.

How long will these creative solutions last? The housing market could make a complete recovery, but it's doubtful in the short term. In the meantime, think creatively and add new sparkle to an existing space. For more information on using mirrors, plus some design ideas, visit the Web site of the Glass Association of North America's Mirror Division at www.mirrorlink.org.

Reusing Wood for Flooring

Q. I've been watching some home-improvement shows on television lately that advocate "green" building techniques, including reusing wood from other structures for a home's wood flooring, rather than buying new. What do you think about this trend, and how do I go about doing this? — Larry in Tempe, Ariz.

A. Recycled wood flooring is a good trend, in my opinion, because rather than chopping down live trees to supply the hardwood for your floor, wood from many types of disused structures or other sources of salvaged lumber can be remilled to give it a second life. There is some concern that the current stock of high-quality salvaged wood will run out eventually, but no timetable has been given for that.

Recycled hardwood is often of better quality than new hardwoods. It's been curing for many years, resulting in a tighter grain and more stability. Also, much of the current stock of recycled wood originally came from old-growth forests, most of which either no longer exist or are protected, and so you're getting high-quality denseness and stability that most new woods can't match.

One thing it is not, however, is cheap. Recycled hardwood costs much more than new (Toolbase Services estimates that it runs about $5.75 to $11 per square foot, while new oak flooring runs about $3 per square foot). Recycled wood also must be installed by a professional.

Despite the cost, recycled wood tends to be beautiful and durable and a nice conversation piece at parties. If you're interested in having it installed, many flooring contractors are able to procure and install recycled wood. You should check with more than one contractor, though, get estimates, and ideally work with someone who specializes in recycled wood-flooring installation.

Simple Tips to 'Green' Your Yard And Your Pocket

(ARA) - It's never too early to get a jumpstart on planning a more beautiful backyard. Maybe you are looking forward to inhaling the perfume of flowers wafting through the air, clipping buds from your prize-winning rose bushes, or simply enjoying the beauty of a lush, more verdant backyard oasis this year.

Here are some tips to help you to make that dream a reality, in a "greener," more cost-conscious way:

- * Switch over to a push lawn mower or electric mower this year. Overall they're traditionally lower in price, save you money at the gas pump and also provide you with healthy exercise.

- * Use a landscape fabric like Weed-X or Weed Shield to protect your investment in expensive perennial and annual plants. Unlike other landscape fabrics or simple black plastic, these fabrics are the only products proven to prevent weed roots from penetrating the soil from above, and prevent existing weeds from growing up through the fabric. Also, since these landscape fabrics help soil retain its moisture, thereby conserving water, and eliminate the need for toxic or harmful chemical weed killers, you'll save yourself time, money and help contribute to conserving our Earth's resources. The fabrics are guaranteed to work for 20 years, reducing the amount of waste you create.

- * Decorate your yard with carriage and porch lights, but install them on an "as needed basis" with a motion detector light system. This way you can still enjoy your landscaping after dark, but don't need to worry about wasted electricity or unnecessarily large utility bills.

- * Build or purchase a rain barrel to capture water draining from your gutters and downspouts. These barrels work to provide you with fresh water for your plants in between showers, but also prevent soil runoff from where the spouts dump water in your grass.

- * If you are dealing with hungry critters in your yard, avoid using expensive toxic chemical pesticides which can be dangerous for pets and children. Instead install a scarecrow device, like Dalen's Rotating Head Owl or their Holographic Scaretape. These scarecrows effectively and humanely deter destructive yard pests like rabbits, birds, squirrels and gophers while depending on wind and sun for movement, eliminating the need for electricity or batteries.

Eliminated By Canton HS, 3-1, In Quarterfinals

North Quincy Defeats Plymouth North, 3-2, In First Round Game

By SEAN BRENNAN

Senior sniper Brandon Gilmore scored with four minutes left in the overtime period to help carry the North Quincy Red Raiders past Plymouth North High School, 3-2, in the first-round of the Division II South Sectionals at Quincy Youth Arena on Feb. 24. The Raiders fell in defeat, 3-1, to Canton High School in the quarterfinals on Feb. 26, effectively ending their 2008-09 season at 13-7-3 overall.

North Quincy entered the post-season as the #8 seed. By virtue of this seeding, the Raiders earned the right to host the #9 seeded Plymouth North at the QYA.

The visitors got on the scoreboard first. Plymouth North potted the first tally of the game with 8:35 left in the opening frame. For the next two periods, Plymouth North goaltender Jordan Remy stopped every scoring attempt by the Raiders and entering the final period, North trailed at home, 1-0.

Facing an early exit from the D2 South Sectionals, North Quincy evened the score at 1-1 on a rebound goal by senior forward Matt Rodriguez. Rodriguez's goal was somewhat of a fluke. In an attempt to put the puck on net to create a scoring chance, the puck slipped through the pads of

ICE HOCKEY

Remy and crossed the goal line. The goal excited the near-capacity crowd and put a jump in the skates of the Red Raiders.

Not even a minute later (58 seconds), NQ junior forward Trevor Richardson scored a go-ahead goal that gave his team a 2-1 lead midway through the third. Plymouth North, an old opponent from the Atlantic Coast League (ACL), would not go away easily. At the 11:45 mark, PN evened the score at 2-2, and when neither team could find that game-winner in the final minutes, the first-round contest headed to overtime.

In OT, and with both teams struggling to maintain pressure due to weariness, NQ senior forward Joe Vialpando dumped an innocent puck into the endboards. Rodriguez followed the bouncing puck behind the Plymouth net and forced Remy to come out and make a play. The puck changed direction (the ice was choppy from hours of skating) and landed on the stick blade of Gilmore, who did not hesitate and buried the finisher for the dramatic 3-2 victory. The goal was Gilmore's 20th of the season. He finished the year with 20 goals and 19 assists.

"All I saw was a four-by-six net," said Gilmore of his game-winner. "I really have no idea how it came out. All of a sudden it was on my stick and I had the whole net."

Plymouth North finished the season with a 12-8-1 record.

With their 3-2 win over Plymouth North, North Quincy earned the right to play top-seeded Canton High School in the quarterfinals, which were held at the Gallo Ice Arena down in Bourne on Feb. 26. Canton (15-3-2 overall) took care of the Raiders, 3-1.

The Red Raiders will need to reload next season, as the team will graduate nine seniors off this year's roster. Seniors on this year's team included Joe Vialpando, Kevin Chenette, Scott Richardson, Brian McLean, Evan Verhault, Bob Fontana, Paul Reardon, Matt Rodriguez and Brandon Gilmore.

Notes: #1 Canton followed their 3-1 win over NQ with a semifinal 3-2 shootout win over #5 Nauset. Canton and #3 Coyle Cassidy will play for the D2 South championship today (March 4)... NQ is 23-14-7 over the last two seasons. The team is 1-2 in the last two Division II South Sectionals tournaments.

Game To Benefit The Bobby Harvey Foundation 3rd Annual Charity Cup March 7

The 3rd Annual Charity Cup, a hockey game between the Quincy Fire and Quincy Police Departments, will be held on Saturday (March 7) at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena.

This year's game will benefit the Bobby Harvey Memorial Fund. Harvey was the ironworker who was killed when a portion of the Goliath Crane collapsed at the Fore River Shipyard last August leaving behind a pregnant wife. Many of the players on both teams grew up playing QYH with Harvey so this year's event will have special meaning for both teams.

The two previous Annual Charity Cups, in support of the Officer Jamie Cochrane Scholarship Fund and DOVE, helped raise over $30,000.

This year's game will include a raffle with many prizes ranging from golf outings, restaurant gift cards and a stay at the Quincy Marriott. The raffle donation is $1 each or a book of six for $5.

The game tickets are a donation of $10 and when you enter the gates you will be automatically entered in a drawing at the end of the game. The winner of this drawing will get to come to center ice and have two chances to shoot a puck through a target placed in front of the goal. If that lucky fan is successful, he or she will win a brand new Ford Fusion that will be donated by Mr. Daniel Quirk.

If you have any questions call Kevin Ferent, QYH at (617) 590-8501.

Team Finishes Season At 15-5 NQ Eliminated By Newton North, 51-35

By SEAN BRENNAN

The dream of a long and prosperous run in the Division I South Sectional girls' basketball tournament came to a screeching halt last week for the North Quincy Red Raiders.

North Quincy, which entered tournament play as the #3 seed overall (15-4 record), were denied a second consecutive trip to the quarterfinals after falling in defeat, 51-35, to the #14 seed Newton North HS on Feb. 25 at North Quincy High School.

The loss ended a successful season for the Red Raiders. The team had finished the regular season with an impressive 15-4 record, which included a share of the Fisher Division title in the Patriot League. NQ began the 2009 D1 South Sectionals as early favorites to advance, at least, into the tourney's quarterfinals, but Newton North had other ideas.

Fall In Three Overtimes to Plymouth

Quincy Finishes Second In Cranberry Tournament

The Quincy Mite "B" team fought and skated their way to the championship game of the 37th Annual Cranberry Ice Hockey Tournament in Pembroke over school vacation week before falling in dramatic fashion in triple-overtime, 3-2, to Plymouth.

Quincy reached the finals of the annual tournament on the strength of a 3-1 record in the round-robin bracket of the event.

The team opened the Cranberry Tournament with a 10-4 victory over Whitman-Hanson. John Early scored four times and added an assist, while Daniel O'Leary and Ethan Herman both scored twice. Bobby Dunn and Noah Wines rounded out the scoring with a goal apiece.

Gavin DeGuest, Will Scola and Haley Parrish all finished the first-round game with two helpers.

Quincy followed its opening win by dropping a 6-2 decision to Plymouth, but the team rebounded with a shutout victory over Triboro. The win over Triboro saw great efforts from Thomas Richardson (shutout in net) and Maddison Gillan and Zachary Holmes.

With a 2-1 record, Quincy squared off against Woonsocket, RI, with the winner advancing to the championship game. Quincy used two more goals from John Early and a goal and an assist from Andrew Airosus to beat Woonsocket, 3-2.

Noah Wines chipped in with two assists.

In the finals, the QYH Mite "B" team played undefeated Plymouth for a second time. With a tough defense anchored by Gavin DeGuest, Bobby Dunn and Andrew Airosus, Plymouth could not get-ahead of Quincy. Quincy's Dylan Connors put his team up 1-0 in the first, but Plymouth responded with two unanswered tallies later in the frame to take a 2-1 advantage into the second period.

John Early, in the second period, tied the game at 2-2 with his sixth goal of the tournament, and after that, defense and goaltending dominated the third period and the first two overtimes.

Quincy's Thomas Richardson played stellar in goal throughout the third and first overtime. In the second OT, with the two teams playing three-on-three, no winner was decided.

In the third OT (teams played two-on-two), Quincy's Dylan Connors and Noah Wines almost won it but the shot rang of the goal post and Plymouth came down the ice and scored with a shot to the high glove-side. Final score: 3-2.

The Quincy roster included: Daniel O'Leary, Zachary Holmes, Gavin DeGuest, Andrew Airosus, Ethan Herman, Haley Parrish, Maddison Gillan, John Early, Thomas Richardson, Will Scola, Bobby Dunn, Dylan Connors and Noah Wines. The coaching staff included Tony Scola, Ralph Richardson and Kevin Barrett.
